Two Men Badly Hurt in Fight With Big Bear

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Two men are in a hospital here, one so seriously injured that he may die, as the result of an encounter with a bear at a local park. Joseph Rothwell, an iron manufacturer, was passing through the park when his hat was blown into the cage where a large bear was kept. Knowing the animal to be vicious, Rothwell called Supt. Ernest Engelking. As the superintendent reached for the hat the bear caught and dragged him into the cage. Rothwell, in aiding Engelking, was attacked and also drawn into the cage. It was necessary to shoot the animal before the two men could be rescued. Their clothing was stripped from their bodies in the struggle.

Guynemer, Master of the Air Conquerer of Fifty Foemen Hero and Fatalist, Is Lost

The King of Aces Leaves Dunkirk on September 11 For a Reconnaisance Flight Over Flanders and Failing to Return the French War Department Regretfully Assumes He Has Been Killed.

WORSHIPPED IN PARIS

Captain Georges Guynemer, "king of aces," officially credited with destroying fifty German aeroplanes, hailed as the master of the air and hero of France, has met his defeat. Army headquarters has announced that the young aviator left Dunkirk on Sept. 11th for a reconnaisance over Flanders, and that he had not returned. It is assumed that he was attacked beyond the German lines and ought until killed.

While the fate of France did not depend upon Captain Guynemer, as it did on the Battle of the Marne, no single incident of the war has cast a deeper gloom over Paris and the rest of France than has the news that the "king of aces" has been lost. His wonderful aerial conquests had endeared him to the hearts of the people. He was the popular hero of France, if not of England and America.

Captain Guyenmer was only 23 years old. He was born on Christmas Day, 1893, the son of a prosperous manufacturer of Compiegne, who had been a captain in the French army. All his brief life he had been an invalid, very tall and very slender even showing a leaning towards tuberculosis.

Under tutors Georges had studied to enter the Ecole Polytechnique, of Paris, but was rejected because of his frail health. The professors did not believe he could live to finish the course, so why waste the time with him?

His parents had taken the youth to Biarritz for his health and they had been there a year when the great war started. Five times the young man tried to enlist as a private in the French army and each time he was rejected because of his health.

Certain there was something that he could do for his country, young Guynemer volunteered for work in the aeroplane factories. His natural bent was mechanics and his progress was rapid. His superiors recognized the thorough elemenary education he had. He had studied in England for two years and made a tour of the world in search of health but always studying. He remained for a time in the United States.

Soon Georges Guynemer became a mechanician at the military aviation fields, and there his work and his personal character so impressed the officers that he was permitted to enlist as a student aviator.

AN ACE EARLY IN HIS CAREER.

That was his chance and he made more of it than any other aviator ever did. He obtained a pilot's license in January, 1916, and as a sergeant made his first flight in an avion de chasse.

In less than three weeks he had brought down his fifth enemy aeroplane, thus becoming an ace and earning an official citation. From the first his career was perhaps more active than that of any other aviator along the battle front and nearly every day there was something good to report of his work.

Captain Guynemer's most spectacular feat, for which he was made a lieutenant and decorated with the Cross of War, was on December 29th last year, when he rose in the air to defend a comrade of his escadrille, who had been attacked by five German Fokkers.

At a height of more than 10,000 feet, Captain Guynemer shot and dropped two of the Germans within 30 seconds of each other. He then pursued the three others and in two minutes had shot down his third enemy machine. He was pursuing the remaining two Fokkers when an enemy shell exploded under his aeroplane and tore away one wing.

"I felt myself dropping," he said later. "It was 10,000 feet to the earth and like a flash I saw my funeral, with my saddened comrades marching behind the gun carriage to the cemetery. But I pulled and pushed every lever that I had but nothing would check my terrific descent.

"Five thousand feet from the earth the wrecked machine began to turn somersaults, but I was strapped into the seat. I do not know what it was, but something happened and I felt descent speed lessen. But suddenly there was a tremendous crash and when I had recovered my senses I had been taken from the wreckage and was all right."

Three times Captain Guynemer was wounded in battle, but each time but slightly. In one day he was officially credited with shooting down four enemy aeroplanes, which was the record, as was the feat of dropping the three Fokkers in two minutes and thirty seconds, when he himself dropped 10,000 feet.

Aside from that fall, the nearest he was to death, he always believed, was when his machine was disabled by shell fire and it fell with him in No Man's Land, between the French and German trenches. The Germans opened a galling machine gun fire to prevent his escape, but the French went "over the top," and in a sanguinary hand to hand conflict, he was rescued.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF HIS ATTACK.

Captain Guynemer was always alone in his aeroplane. He used the lightest craft that would carry sufficient gasolene and a machine gun with ammunition. To him gasolene and ammunition were more valuable than a gunner. The machine gun was attached to the top of the aeroplane, directly above his head, and was so arranged that when he pulled a lever the gun would be discharged. As the gun was fast to the aeroplane he had to point his aeroplane at the enemy. Sights were arranged in front of him so that when the enemy came within the sights he pulled the gun lever and it would begin firing.

"My success is due to waiting and watching for an opportunity," Captain Guynemer said recently. "I know that I have as much or more gasolene than any enemy aeroplane, and I know that my machine is as fast or faster than any the enemy has. Then it is only necessary for me to wait for my oportunity. That comes only when the enemy is within range of my machine gun and within the sights before me. It is only then I pull the trigger. I waste no ammunition. I have one hand on the trigger lever and I control the aeroplane with the other hand and both feet, so I am always ready when aloft."

Notwithstanding what Captain Guynemer said of his own success and his methods of obtaining it military observers have said that his aerial acrobatics and his absolute lack of fear were responsible for much of his success. It always was his effort to reach a higher altitude than the enemy machines. From tremendous heights he would dash down at terrific speed upon his adversary, keeping him within the sights of his gun and firing many shots.

For his exploits in the air, Captain Guynemer won the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the Military Medal, the War Cross and nearly every other honor his grateful country could bestow.

It was commonly believed by his friends, and even throughout France, that the young man, believing that disease would not suffer him to live long, had resolved to give his life to his country and before giving it to accomplish the utmost. For that reason he directed every effort to becoming an aviator, the most dangerous of all services.

WORSHIPPED IN PARIS.

The affection in which France held Captain Guynemer was shown on the French national holiday, last July 14, when he marched in the parade in Paris carrying the flag of the aviation group. On that occasion he was greeted with outbursts of greeting by the massed people. Women and children impeded his progress with showers of flowers, and finally a police cordon had to be thrown about him in the parade to ward off the worshipping women who sought to embrace him and kiss him.

The picture of Captain Guynemer, although only 23 years old, is in nearly every home in France. Already hundreds, if not thousands, of babies have been named for him. There is a Guynemer brand of nearly every staple product on the market.

Therefore, considering how France has worshipped that young hero, the official statement by the Army Headquarters, that he probably is lost, is a severe blow to the nation. While it will not affect the fortunes of war—for other heroes are rising to take his place—the nation to-night feels bereaved and every citizen considers his death a personal loss.

No one knows just how many German aeroplanes Captain Guynemer defeated and destroyed. The army headquarters is most cautious in giving credit. Officers from the General Staff carefully investigate every report, and they credit only those in which the enemy machines are known to have fallen within the French lines or within sight of them.

It is known that Captain Guynemer dropped many of his foes back of the German lines. He and his comrades reported those conquests only casually knowing that they did not count in their records; little attention was paid to them. But Army Headquarters on September 10the, the day before Captain Guynemer left Dunkirk on his last flight, officially announced that Captain Guynemer had brought down his 50th enemy aeroplane.

Two days later delayed press despatches from the front said Captain Guynemer had defeated his 52nd adversary. As the official record now stands it is 53 German aviators defeated, but a later official report may increase that to 52 or more. The Germans themselves could add greatly to the young captain's record if they cared to do so by reporting the number of aeroplanes he destroyed within their lines.

Poor Russians Heirs To Estate Of Half Million

FORTUNE OF "MISER KING" HELD FOR SLAVS FOUND BY U. S. CONSUL.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—The heirs of Ike Herdman, so-called, "Miser King of the Tenderloin," who left an estate valued at about $456,000 less $200,000 incumbrances, have been found in Odessa, Russia, and a local attorney, Harry P. Sneed, has been retained by the heirs, through the American consul at Odessa, to recover the estate.

Thirty-five years before his death, Herdman left his wife and three small children in Odessa and came to America. Living meagerly and quietly accumulating large real estate holdings, he left his wife and family to fight their own battles. On Dec. 11, 1916, a notarial will of Herdman's was filed in the civil district court, and his wife and children, "if living" were named as the beneficiaries.

FIND HEIRS IN RUSSIA.

The Commercial-Germania Bank and Trust Company, which had business connections with Herdman, wrote the American consul at Odessa, telling hom of Herdman's death, and asking that the heirs be found. The local bank also asked to be appointed as administrator to settle the estate.

The consul found that Herdman's wife was dead and his two daughters, also named as beneficiaries were dead. One son, a small candy dealer in Odessa, is living and there are five children surviving one of Herdman's daughters, and two from the other. The son will get one-third and a third each will be divided between the children of his daughters. All the heirs occupy obscure positions.

HEIR ASKS FOR LAWYER.

When told of the offer of the New Orleans bank to act as administrator, the Russian candy dealer hair rejected the offer and asked the American consul to recommend a New Orleans attorney to represent him. The consul referred him to Mr. Sneed, whom he knew of through friends from Panama, who were then in Odessa. After weeks' delay the letter naming Mr. Sneed as attorney arrived with the stamp, "Opened by Censor."

The heirs may come to America to live. Mr. Sneed has suggested that to them as one of the best means of getting the largest returns from the estate.

Belgian Children Slowly Starving!

A bowl of soup and a slice of bread is issued daily to the destitute women and children of Belgium. This will just about keep body and soul together in a grown person. But for a little, growing child—where is the material in this ration for bone and muscle forming?

The answer is found in the thousands, and tens of thousands of Belgian children under 12 years old, in the grip of tuberculosis, rickets and other ills resulting from insufficient nourishment.

Belgian Children's Health Fund.

By means of this fund children giving way under the slow starvation are taken from Belgium to Holland, where they are cared for, housed, fed, clothed and given medical attention for six weeks.

Belgian Orphans' Fund.

In this land of broken up families, imagine the thousands of tiny tots ignorant whether their fathers and mothers are alive or not. They must be fed, clothed and educated. The sum of $3.70 per month per child will do this.

You know how children eat! Suppose your neighbour's child was only getting a bowl of soup and a slice of bread each day! Would you, out of your prosperity help the child? Who is your neighbour, if not Belgium, who held back the Hun when the world stood in danger?

Be generous; help to make the next generation of Belgians as strong and valiant as the present generation has proved itself.

Your contribution will go entire through the Belgian Minister of the Interior (in Le Havre, France) to Dutch authorities, who administer the relief work under the approval of the British and Dutch Governments, and Mr. Hoover's Committee.

What will you do for the waifs of Belgium?

ALLIES HAVE DISAPPOINTED THE BALKANS, HE DECLARES

LONDON, Sept. 29.— There can be few authorities on the Balkan question carrying greater weight than the distinguished Serbian statesman, diplomat and historian, Chedro Mijatovitch, who has just written his reminiscences under the title of "Memoirs of a Balkan Diplomatist." His record is indeed unique among the living Serbian Ministers of Finance, of Foreign Affairs, as the sole Serbian delegate at the Conference of Bucharest in 1886, which patched up peace between Serbia and Bulgaria, not to mention his years from 1884 as accredited Minister of Serbia at the Court of St. James, the distinguished man has enjoyed opportunities of gauging the possibilities of the Balkan imbroglio from the inside such as probably no other living person.

In reply to my inquiry as to what might be his views on the present situation in the Balkans Mr. Mijatovich (who resigned his diplomatic post at the Serbian Legation in London after the murder of Queen Draga) replied:

"Before I answer that question I must draw your attention to the fact that I am not officially connected with the Serbian government and that my opinions are only those of an independent Serbian politician, who, however, believes them to be in harmony with those held by the majority of the Serbian people.

Situation Unsatisfactory.

"Speaking quite frankly, I do not consider either the military or the political situation in the Balkan Peninsula to be satisfactory. Or hopes that the Allies would help us to liberate not only Macedonia but also Serbia proper have not yet been realized. The Allies are only on the outskirts of Macedonia, and apparently are not able to move northward from Monastir.

"I do not hesitate to say that the Greek imbroglio has been politically and diplomatically mismanaged. It has paralyzed a successful offensive capital against the Bulgarins, Germans and Austrians. Although there is apparent harmony, even unanimity, among the Allies on all fundamental questions, Italy has put forward special interests in Albania and Epirus which are antagonistic to Balkan ideals.

"The only satisfactory feature of the situation is our knowledge that present conditions can only be temporary. Now that the United States has joined the Allies and democratic Russia is determined to fight, the final and decisive defeat of the Central Powers and their allies is only a question of time. Our allies will ultimately dictate peace; Bulgaria will evacuate Serbian and Greek Macedonia; Austria will withdraw from Serbia, Montenegro, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Turkey evacuating Thrace and Constantinople."

'And what do you think is going to happen to Constantinople?"

Favours a Free City.

"The self-denying declaration of democratic Russia that she does not want to take possession of Constantinople does not, alas, provide a solution of that difficult question. It probably will lead to a Russian demand for the revision of the secret treati between the Allies. It is whispered that Russia in withdrawing her pretensions from Constantinople will naturally desire to annul certain concessions promised to her allies as the price for her possession of the command of the Bosphorus.

"As Constantinople forms part of the Balkan Peninsula, geographically, historically, politically and commercially, the most natural, logical and soundest solution would be to entrust the administration of the free city of Constantinople to the Balkan nations themselves. The Greeks, the Serbians, the Bulgarians and the Roumanians should join hands to form an enlightened and efficacious administration of the city, making it a free port to the commerce of all other nations on equal terms. I am convinced that the Balkan nations will be opposed to any other solution of the question of Constantinople. The one I indicate will accelerate the formation of a Balkan federation, comprising Jugoslavia (union of the Serbs, Croats and Slavenes), Roumania, Bulgaria, Albania and Greece. This implies reconciliation of the Balkan nations with Bulgaria, which, sooner or later, will take place, notwithstanding the abominable conduct of the Bulgarians toward their neighbours."

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

CHAPTER II.

It was an hour before the coming of John Barton. The garden lay very white beneath the stars.

A tinkle of music, brilliant, yet elusive as the moonlight itself, resounded within its walls. The spray from the fountain, an iridescent gossamer mist, drifted softly over the nodding flowers.

At the base of the fountain sat a boy playing upon a lute. He was a mulato boy, and in the shadow his bare legs and grotesque figure gave him the appearance of a youthful Pan.

Upon a broad smooth space in the powdered shell rock a young girl, dressed in a loose and flowing gown of yellow cotton, was dancing in the moonlight. The coiled braids of her shining black hair resembled twisted snakes, bound by a bit of scarlet ribbon. Brilliant spots of color, high up on her cheekbones, gave to her well featured face an exotic beauty. Her bare feet and legs, almost boyish in their contours, flashed with amazing rapidity through the intricate steps of the dance.

The boy glanced up, then flung the looking up. He seemed to find the rapid music somewhat difficult of execution. The girl, unmindful of his presence, threw herself completely into the spirit of the dance. Her whole body swayed and vibrated to the harmony of the music.

Suddenly, gasping from the intensity of her exertions, she whirled across the open space, and flung herself into the hammock that spanned the space between the two palms.

"Enough, Hunchback, enough!" she cried, as with a high, falsetto laugh, she sank panting into the hammock.

The bo glanced up, then flung the lute about his shoulders by means of the cord to which it was attached. A heavy whip lay on the ground beside him; he picked it up and rose, a queer misshapen figure in loose cotton breeches and shirt. A green silk kerchief about his head, silver hoops in his ears, lent a piquant note of color to his appearance. In his erect position the moonlight revealed the crookedness of back that the girl's mode of address had implied.

He went toward her, grinning and cracking his whip.

The boy scowled. The reference to his deformity seemed to annoy him.

"Never mind my back," he muttered. "My arm is strong enough." By way of demonstartion he again flicked the lash of the whip toward her legs. A tiny red spot on one of them showed the accuracy of his aim. The girl uttered a shrill cry.

"Stop, you imp!" she exclaimed, drawing her skirt protectingly about her knees. "Or I'll not dance for you again."

"Out, out, I say," he cried. "Dance—have I not spent a full week learning the tune? By my soul, you're growing as lazy as a pig!"

"Stop, I say," she protested as the boy pursued her, "or I'll tell the mistress." She had faced him from the other side of the table, mocking him with a mischievous and alluring smile.

She drew back with a laugh.

"Kiss you," she shrilled, with impish glee. "I waste no kisses on boys. Do you think to kiss me every time you play a tune? Faith, your music is not worth the price. Away." She pushed him from her as he leaned nearer, then ran quickly behind the fountain.

"You shall," he exclaimed, still pursuing her.

"Do you think you can make me, Master Jack-napes?"

"Wait till the Firebrand is gone, and you shall see." He sulked toward the table and picked up his whip.

At his words the girl evinced a singular interest.

"The Firebrand!" she cried, suddenly grown serious. "Is he going away?"

The boy grinned at her in silence. He realized his advantage.

"Tell me Hunchback. Is he?" the girl urged.

With feminine shrewdness she pretended a vast indifference. "Let him go," she exclaimed, tossing her head. "Little I care, or the Mistress Ramona either. She'd not be sorry, if he never came back."

The hunchback started, and glanced about with an expression of fear. "Sh—h. If he should hear you," he whispered.

"Where is he, Pedro?" she whispered.

"I left him in the town an hour ago, making ready his ship. They sail to-night, I hear, to attack the treasure fleet from Vera Cruz."

"Do you go with them, Hunchback?"

"No; I stay here to guard the Mistress Ramona—and you."

"You might have a worse," the hunchback replied, fingering nervously the hilt of the long curved knife that hung at his belt.

"Do you think, Pedro, to become a buccaneer, too, like your master?" she laughed, eying the knife.

"Not I, Lucia. These gentlemen of fortune be fine folk. Rather would I marry you and keep a tavern in the town."

"A tavernkeeper! Huh! Rather a buccaneer, say I. Think of the golden doubloons you might take from the Spaniards."

"They all find their way to the taverns in the end," the boy remarked with a shrewdness beyond his years. "We'll have a fine place across the way from the Turk's Head, and you shall wait on the table."

"Wait on the table. Not I. I mean to marry a sea rover and wear a silk dress, like my mistress."

"Since when have sea rovers taken to marrying? A slave you are to be beaten, and sold in the market place. I am a free man," he continued proudly. "Did not the Mistress Ramona buy me for twenty pieces of eight and set me free? Mayhap I shall find a livelier wench to wait on the table, in my tavern." He turned away, cracking his whip with an assumption of vast superiority.

"Pedro," said the girl, following him, her bantering spirit gone. "If you would kiss me——"

The hunchback did not turn. There was a shrewd smile on his face.

"No. I'll have none of you. There be no lack of pretty wenches in the town. The one who waits at the Golden Horn has a pleasant way with her——"

"That brazen hussy!" cried the girl, stamping her foot. "Pedro, listen to me." She came up to him, and took him by the arm. "I'll dance for you whenever you like, and as for the matter of the tavern——"

The sound of footsteps crunching the powdered shell rock of the road attracted their attention. Both turned quickly toward the gate. A woman was just entering the garden.

She was a handsome creature, very dark, with lines in her face the hardness of which gave to her beauty a singularly forbidding quality. About her her head she wore a mantilla of black lace—it threw into bold relief the scarlet flowers in her thick hair. Her dress of thin green silk, displayed generously the ripe beauty of her bosom and throat. She brought with her the spirit of the night, languorous, passionate, mysterious.

The two in the garden stood regarding her in awkward silence.

"Boy," she said to the hunchback, the tones of one accustomed to instant obedience. "Tell your master I wish to see him."

"He is not here, Mistress Devereux," the hunchback replied, shifting uneasily from one foot to the other.

"Where is he?"

"Answer me, brat!"

"The Firebrand is in the town."

The woman greeted his words with a scornful laugh. There was an element of danger in its mirthless echoes.

"Firebrand! Squire of dames, more like. When will he return?"

"I do not know," muttered the hunchback, glancing toward the open door of the house. "You'd best ask the Mistress Ramona." He made as though to go in the direction of the door, but the woman stopped him with a gesture.

"Spare your legs, boy. "I'll waste no words on the baggage." With a contemptuous laugh she flung herself into a chair.

"You forget, my lady, that she is mistress here," he said.

"Be quiet, you ill-mannered monkey," the woman cried, her forehead wrinkling in an ominous frown. "I'll wait for your master."

"I wish you joy of the meeting'," jeered the boy, angrily.

The woman in green sprang to her feet and rushed toward him.

"Hold your tongue, or I'll have it slit," she exclaimed, grasping him by the ear.

The boy squirmed and twisted, trying to free himself.

"Like your own mayhap," he muttered. "'Tis said to make jackdaws talk."

The color flamed in the woman's cheeks. She shook the boy violently to and fro, in spite of his efforts to escape.

"You black imp," she cried, "I'll teach you to be impertinent to your betters. When the Firebrand comes, you shal be soundly thrashed——"

A voice, cool, even, singularly clear and sweet, interrupted her scolding. She turned sharply. A young girl stood silhouetted against the light that came through the open door of the house.

She paused on the threshold for a moment, regarding the scene before her with a contemptuous smile. Beneath her air of self-possesion, however, there was apparent a certain apprehension, as though the presence of a woman in the garden presaged the coming of events, unexpected and alarming.

She was a girl of singular beauty, slender, graceful, radiating an atmosphere of innocence and youth. Between her wide eyes, warm with the brown of autumn leaves, stretched an untroubled brow. Her red-gold hair matched the color of the huge topaz in her jewelled belt. A clinging dress of thin, white silk revealed the lines of her lithe and almost boyish figure with unconscious frankness. Her bare feet, thrust into sandals of red leather, gave to her appearance a note almost childlike, delightful in its naivete.

Yet there was an expression about her face, elusive, at times quite unseen, that was far from childlike. Melancholy in repose, brilliant in its mobile moments, it was the face of a woman who had known suffering.

Her features were distinctive, high bred, proclaiming the aristocrat in every line. One instinctively felt that here was woman who by beauty and birth alike was destined to command. An impression was thus created curiously at variance with the almost pathetic appeal of her eyes.

NEW DANGERS OF CONSTIPATION

A recent issue of The New York Times says:—

"Recent researches of Prof. Metchnikoff and others have led doctors to suppose that many conditions of chronic ill-health, nervous debility, rheumatism and other disorders are due to poisoning set up by unhealthy condition in the Large Intestine, and it has been suggested that the lowering of the vitality resulting from such poisoning is favorable to the development of Cancer and Tuberculosis.

"At Guy's Hospital Sir William Arbuthnot Lane decided on the heroic plan of removing the diseased organ. A child who appeared in the final stage of what was believed to be an incurable form of tubercular joint disease was operated on. The Lower Intestine, with the exception of nine inches, was removed, and the portion left was joined to the Smaller Intestine.

"The result was astonishing. In a week's time the internal organs resumed all their normal functions, and in a few weeks the patient was apparently in perfect health."

The Lower Intestine can never get into this condition if Internal Baths are used. The "J. B. L. Cascade" cleanses the Lower Intestine its entire length thoroughly with pure warm water, and removes all this poisonous waste, which is such a menace to health.

This is a sample only of many hundreds of letters we have in our files:

Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell, Toronto:

Dear Sir—

Words I can assure you, quite fail me to express my satisfaction and gratefulness to you for inventing such a humane and common-sense remedy for stomach troubles as the "J. B. L. Cascade." For the past 15 years I have suffered from such, and have never had the permanent relief from medicines as I have had from your "Cascade." I consider it the best investment I have ever made, and would not be without it for one hundred times its cost. I consider that those who are afflicted as I was are making the mistake of their lives to be without one of your Cascades.

Wishing you every success in your efforts for suffering humanity.

I am, Dear Sir, yours truly,
"Grateful."

P.S.—Name and address will be furnished if requested.

It is Nature's own cure for Constipation, and is now being used by over 500,000 Canadians and Americans with great success.

The "J. B. L. Cascade" is now being shown and explained at Warne Drug Co., Peterborough where a most interesting booklet called "Why Man of To-day is Only 60 Per Cent. Efficient," is given on request. If you prefer, write to-day for this book to Chas. A. Tyrrell, M.D., 163 College street, Toronto.

You don't like the cheap tea you are using. Do you?

Before the war so increased the cost of living, many people used to drink better tea than they are now using.

Perhaps, this is true in your case?

Of course, you are not drinking poor tea because you like it, but because you think it necessary to save money.

But are you really saving anything?

Cheap, common teas only make about 150 cups to the pound. You are lucky if you can stretch them out to 185 or 200.

On the other hand, Red Rose Tea easily makes 250 cups. It goes further because of its fine quality, consisting chiefly of Assam teas, the richest and strongest in the world.

You may almost doubt if so many cups of tea can be made from a pound of even such good tea as Red Rose, but you can readily prove the economy of Red Rose without waiting for a package to be used up. Just use a few leaves less of Red Rose for a brewing than you use of common tea—the result we are sure will please and surprise you.

THE LATEST IDEAS FOR THE FASHION GIRL

An almost, it might nearly be said, quite indispensable garment of the hour is the big wrap, whether it be frankly an enveloping cloak, or a combination of coat and cloak, or a little chic softness of crepe de chine; which ever it is, originally and a most artistic simplicity are the keynotes upon which it is built. For instance, in the case of wrap coats, nothing is too surprising to be accepted in its evolvement, provided, always, it carries out some definite and useful purpose, and at the same time increases the beauty of the lines.

One of these new coats is cut entirely in two complete pieces, front, and back, coat and sleeve in one; the fastening coming down the shoulder seam and along the sleeve line, giving much grace to the underneath part of the latter and at the same time great comfort. Probably this model owed its original inspiration to a mandarin coat, though, with its added length and more restrained sleeve, it is better adapted to modern use. This sleeve is carried to the wrist in a modified form of its original shape, and rolled over at the straight open edge.

A flat rounded collar, again reminiscent of the Chinese coat though this collar has grown in its evolution, as suits the character of the coat, is made of serge, strapped with many rows of black satin, and fastens, where it is rounded off at each side, in front, with two hammered bronze boules pulled through button-holes in the collar. There are quaint stitchings in a bold design at the front and back and running in a semi-circular edge. Not only in dark blue, but in any of the coloured serges and thick cloths now seen in such good shades, this coat is excellent, its design making it particularly suitable for driving or travelling.

Another new mode of making these coats is to cut the back in one, the sleeves, kimono fashion, being set into a separate lining, while the front is seen to be intow long, scarflike ends, formed by cutting the coat down from the hem. These ends are crossed over and fastened to each shoulder, after having been cut square and embroidered; or they may be carried straight round the neck, thus forming a long V in front, crossed at the back and brought around again to hang straight down as wide embroidered esque cloak is also seen, with a diffally worn as an extra wrap, to put on over a thin gown. The Rembrantesquqe cloak is also seen, with a difference, and it is worn to-day just when and how the wearer pleases. Subtle little improvements make for an added beauty of line, such as a new seam even in the latest of these cloaks, running round the shoulders. It is not a yoke, but the lower part joined to it. Collars and revers vary almost from day to day, but, in their expression, they are simply a wide rolled edge, with perhaps a square double sailor collar falling at the back.

Choice Recipes

Butterless One-Egg Muffins

Two cupfuls flour, one teaspoonful salt, four teaspoonfuls baking powder, two tablespoonfuls sugar, one egg, one-half cupful milk. Sift together flour, salt and baking powder. Beat up egg with sugar until very light and creamy. Add milk and pour into the flour mixture. Bake in well greased tins.

Mystery Pickle.

Run one peck of green tomatoes, six medium-sized white onions and nine small green peppers through a meat chopper, stir in one-half pint of salt and let the mixture stand twenty-four hours. Drain, put on vinegar enough to cover and cook half an hour. Add one-half pint of vinegar, one-half pound of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of ground mustard, mixed with a little vinegar, two tablespoonsful celery seed, one tablespoon each allspice, cinnamon, and cloves and a half pint of grated horseradish. Bottle.

Making Beaten Biscuit.

Did you ever eat those delicious beaten biscuit, that are served so frequently in the southern part of the United States Many a woman would doubtless like to serve them, but she feels that she cannot spare the time which they require for making. As one old negro cook put it, beaten biscuit should be beaten for one hour for home folks, but two hours if there were company. A good recipe for these delicacies calls for one quart of flour, five tablespoons of fat, one teaspoon of salt, and enough ice water to make a very stiff dough—probably about three-quarters of a cup. As to beating that dough two hours for company, or even one for home folks, few housekeepers of to-day care to do that, as we have said, so one ingenious woman has evolved the scheme of putting it through the meat chopper several times. The dough should be just as stiff as it is possible to mix it for this treatment, After the dough has been well chopped, roll it out, so her directions read, cut into small disks, pierce each one with a fork and place them in a large baking pan, far enough apart so that they will not touch. They should then be baked in a hot oven until well done. Do not open the door for five minutes, she advises, for that time should be devoted to giving the biscuit an uninterrupted chance to rise and crack around the sides. They should be well browned on the top and on the bottom, before being removed from the oven, having a white centre and that crack around the edge. This method, using the meat chopper, she finds gives quite as satisfactory results as the old-time beating.

The flavor of Krumbles is the key-note of its success. Everyone concedes the strength-giving properties of wheat; but never before has wheat been so deliciously prepared.

NEWS OF A BECOMING UNIFORM

Fall Fabrics and Fancies

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Never has there been a time when the fashions have seemed so practical. The narrow skirts do away with any extravagant use of material, for the straight silhouette reigns supreme. Of course there is drapery, usually on the side, a little below the hip, but even this does not detract from the length of the line from shoulder to hem.

There is no excuse whatever for any woman to dress unbecomingly. One does not now hear the old complant, "Oh ,but the styles do not become me. What am I to do" The styles do become us, each and every one, for there has never been a time when the individuality of women can be so clearly studied and expressed.

Just a Whisper or Two.

There is one big house here in New York that predicts we will all be wearing bustles by New Year's! They point out that the drapery is slowly but surely retreating toward the back, and that pockets are being placed further back than they have been. The Chinese and Japanese style (kimono sleeve) is also being advanced very strongly.

The Food Conservation Uniform.

Have you signed the Food Conservation Pledge? If not, do learn about it at once, for it is one of the ways the patriotic woman can really help her country. There is a fascinating dress apron which you can wear after you have signed it. The illustration here shows you just how very practical (and becoming) it really is. This is the official uniform, and is being worn all over the country. The dress itself is made of blue chambray or plain blue gingham, with collar, cuffs and cap of white pique. It is extremely simple of construction, and is also very easy to get into. There is only one button necessary. The dress closes on either side, the right over the left, or the left over the right. The strap or belt is passed through a bound buttonhole, around the figure, and is fastened on the opposite side. The big pockets are conveniently placed, and altogether it is a costume designed for the efficient woman.

The Food Conservation Dress Apron

The Vogue of Gingham Continued in Fall Fabrics.

There never has been a material so popular as gingham! The history of the gingham craze, as it has been called, is very interesting. It was launched by American designers without the assent of Paris. Palm Beach first put its seal on it, and since then, women have eagerly demanded it. Paris took it up, and the gingham dress of 1917 was the smartest affair imaginable. Women who had long relegated it to the nursery and the house dress, wore it at the beach, the country club, and on the street in the big cities. Now that cool days are coming, the designers are reluctantly laying it on one side, to be taken out next spring, however. There are quant silks and chiffo taffetas to take its place, with the gingham pattern carefully carried out. I saw a most attractive dress on the avenue the other day, of blue-and-white-check taffeta, with large hip pockets and a surplice waist.

Lavish Use of Fur.

Fur promises to be used this year as much or more than it was last. All the windows are full of fall suits, and coats with bands, huge collars, and even pockets and belts of fur. One extravagant dress had the skirt as far up as the hip, the collar and cuffs, made of seal, with the rest of the costume of Georgette crepe!

You can always rely on the superior quality of Old Dutch

It cleans thoroughly, safely, hygienically—it's economical to use because a little goes a long way—and it cannot harm the surfaces cleaned or hurt your hands.

WOMEN AND FURS

There are few women who do not love the warmth and becomingness of furs, in winter weather, though there are few who like them well enough to wear them in summer even if Fashion does dictate it. But while they will not take generally to fur in hot weather, they love to load all their outer garments for fall and winter with this sumptuous trimming.

There is now no animal which wears fur on its back from the mole to the tiger, which does not yield up its pelt for the women. Only the zebra and the lion have so far been exempt and since black and white combinations are stylish the zebra better look to his stripes. He may be called on next.

Men have also taken to furs. It is promised that there will be many fur collars seen on men's overcoats for day time wear, so that the reproachful title of "Sissy" will not be wished on the courageous one who sports a fur collar. The army is to have furs, particularly the air men, shoes and gloves lined with it, coats and caps made of it.

Furs are higher than ever despite the fact that the European market is closed to American furs.

At the present time there is a large demand for marten and red fox at advanced prices, as well as for muskrat suitable for seal dye. White and blue fox also are in active demand, but the call for silver fox is only fair. The finer grades of wolf are bringing extreme prices. Among the other popular furs are fine Eastern mink and racoon, especially for use in coats, and Northwestern skunk. A better demand is reported for opossum.

RECIPES WORTH KEEPING AT HAND.

Corn Dodgers.

The corn dodger is elusive unless directions are closely followed. The corn dodger is fine breakfast bread for children, especially on crisp autumn mornings, when chill has begun and they need a hot breakfast before the daily task.

The corn dodger is a quick bread and an inexpensive bread. It requires only twenty minutes for the making and baking. For that reason and also because it is very nutritious, it should appeal to mothers who must move swiftly to get the children breakfasted and off to school on record time.

Here is a corn dodger recipe which has been used for a long time by the mother of a little family of children:

Two cups of meal (white).
One teaspoonful of salt.
One tablespoonful of lard.
One egg.
One tablespoonful of milk.

Mix the mea land salt together (dry), drop in the lard and pour over the mixture enough boiling water to wet the meal thoroughly. Beat the egg light, add the milk and stir into the batter. Beat together well. Drop on greased pans from a tablespoon and bake in a very hot oven for fifteen minutes.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

New stitches of embroidery are arranged to imitate carpet weaving.

Two belts, rather narrow, are supplanting the broad single belt, which has been popular for so long on one-piece frocks.

U.S. FIRST WOUNDED ON THE WEST FRONT

Two Who Were Hit the Envy of Comrades Working Near the Fighting Line

MUSTN'T GO TO THE TRENCHES

Strict Order Required to Keep the Americans from Joining Tommies in Minor Skirmishes.

Somewhere along the British Front in France. — On a historic battlefield which merges into the fighting lines are encamped many American troops, far removed from the rest of their compatriots who form the vanguard of Uncle Sam's expeditionary force in France.

For military reasons it is impossible to tell the world just where these men are, who they are, or what they are doing to further the interests of the allied cause, but it may be said on authority to friends at home that they were a credit to the Stars and Stripes, which for the first time in history fly over a camp of American soldiers in this part of the war-wrecked world.

Some of them have been working continually in a zone covered by German guns and already two of their number have been wounded, a fact of which they are exceedingly proud.

The Associated Press heard these men were here and sought them out. The visit involved a long motor ride; but the sight of their bronzed faces and the sound of their cheerful, determined voices more than repaid the correspondent for this long journey. They are a fine, healthy-looking lot, and nearly two months of hard work in the open under real campaigning conditions, has put them into shape, and they are ready for anything.

Especially are they prepared and anxious to try conclusions with the Germans. In fact their only grievance is that for the present they are not permitted, except where necessity demands, to expose themselves to the enemy's big guns. They want to feel the thrill that one experiences when explosives are going up all about and when shells herald their approach across No Man's Land with a wicked whine which gives notice that in a fraction of a minute deadly bits of ragged steel will be flying in all directions.

In fact, until a stringent order was issued recently the American officers had a hard time keeping their men out of the British front line trenches. It is said that more than one American soldier has crept away when off duty, and after making friends with the Tommies, has taken his place beside them for a few glorious minutes while a minor battle was in progress.

It would have been unwise, perhaps, for the correspondent to inquire too closely whether any of the American officers had "done their bit" in this manner. Nevertheless he had grave suspicions that some of them had been "over the top" with their allies in early days before the orders forbade it. However, they were good disciplinarians, and nobody is disregarding the edicts which have been issued by the higher command, although the sound of the artillery brings a wistful look into their eyes.

The correspondent visited two different camps, and in each there were the same scenes of methodical activity. Things were moving smoothly, and no false motions were being made —Efficiency was the watchword everywhere.

It was noon when the second camp was reached, and the officers and men were preparing for mess. Several clean cut young officers came out to greet the correspondent, and it was a cheery welcome, with a firm hand-grip and a hearty "I'm mighty glad to see you!" One would have known he was in an American camp had he been blindfolded. An invitation was extended to mess, and it was accepted.

"I'm afraid we can't offer you very much to eat," said one officer. "You see our cook is ill, and just at this moment we are getting along as best we can. But we can give you plenty of beans, and—well, plenty more beans," he ended, with an apologetic laugh.

So Boston baked beans were served, the first the correspondent had seen in two years of knocking about which had taken him from revolution-torn Dublin to the Mohmand revolt on the northwest forntier of India. And they were the best beans ever canned, or that ever will be canned.

While the meal was in progress the correspondent fell into conversation with a young officer who comes from one of the famous and wealthy families of the United States.

The officer gazed reflectively through the open door of the mess room out across the open and beyond the camp. As far as the eye could reach there was a scene of devastation and desolation. Here and there shattered, the walls of a building reared themselves to mark the spot where a farm house or perhaps a village had stood. For miles could be seen shattered trunks of trees that had been smashed by great shells, as though rent by lightning. Occasionally the eye met a little graveyard with its wooden crosses, some for German soldiers and some for British who had died in the sanguinary fighting which had taken place over this ground. In places there were still remains of German dug-outs, for the enemy had held this territory at one time.

Grass was growing over all this waste, but the green carpet could not conceal the myriad of mounds that marked the lips of great shell craters, which pitted the entire zone. The officer returned from his contemplative gaze to the conversation and answered:

"Well, it isn't exactly the same as Forty-second street and Broadway here, but we didn't come out looking for the Great White Way. We are here for business and like it—partly for itself, and partly because we ought to like it. We want to do our bit, and we are more anxious to do it than ever before.

"I think that some of our boys who have crept up and stolen a look at the fighting lines have been a little disappointed in a way. Of course, they read of what it was like over here, but it did not seem quite right not to see banners flying on the battlefield and not to witness troops moving out in the open. But they all are tremendously impressed with things in general. They realize more than they did what a vast business this is. And they are all anxious to do a bigger part.

"The health of the camp is excellent and the men are as hard as nails. We are all ready for the call to real action."

The American quarters are very simple. One officer proudly displayed a shack that he had built out of airplane wings which had been discarded by the British and had been presented to him by the Colonel. It was an ingeniously constructed little house, and certainly made of unique material.

The reported high reward offered by a German officer for the first American soldier brought into the German lines, dead or alive, has immensely amused the members of the expeditionary force.

"We aren't worrying about it any," laughed one of the officers. "We are here and Fritz can come after us any time he is ready. We will be waiting."

This contingent of Americans is learning all the while and should make a valuable addition to the American fighting front. All the officers are loud in praise of the fine welcome and treatment accorded them by the British.

"They are mighty fine folks," is the unanimous conclusion of the Americans.

Pay Will Be The Same

Men selected under the Military Service Act will receive the same pay as those now on active service receive. Pay will start from the time a man reports for duty. Money from the Patriotic Fund and Separation Allowance will also be available for selected men.

Canadian soldiers are well paid. The fact that wages in Canada are generally higher than those paid in Europe is recognized in the system of remuneration for men on active service. Clothing and all equipment in addition to food is also supplied to the Canadian soldier, leaving him with no expense except personal incidentals.

The rate of pay for men in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, other than commissioned officers, is as follows:

	Pay	Field Allowance
Warrant Officers	$2.00	30 cts.
Regimental Sergt.-Major, if not a Warrant Officer	1.85	20 "
Quartermaster-Sergeants	1.80	20 "
Orderly Room Clerks	1.50	20 "
Orderly Room Sergeants	1.50	20 "
Pay Sergeants	1.50	20 "
Squad., Batt., or Co. Sergt-Major	1.60	20 "
Colour-Sergeant or Staff-Sergeant.	1.60	20 "
Squad., Batt., or Co. Q.M.S.	1.50	20 "
Sergeants	1.35	15 "
Lance-Sergeants	1.15	15 "
Corporals	1.10	10 "
Lance-Corporals	1.05	10 "
Bombardiers, or Second Corporals	1.05	10 "
Trumpeters, Buglers, and Drummers	1.00	10 "
Privates, Gunners, Drivers	1.00	10 "
Sappers, Batmen, etc.	1.00	10 "

As in the case of those already gone overseas, Separation Allowances will be available for those dependent for livelihood upon selected men. The Separation Allowance is $20.00 per month for the rank and file, $25.00 for sergeants and staff-sergeants and $30.00 for warrant officers. The experience is that many men can afford to assign half their pay to dependents, in addition.

A considerable number of men who have enlisted in the Canadian forces have found themselves better off under the army rate of pay, which is granted in addition to board, lodging, clothing, equipment, transportation, etc., than they were while in civilian positions. Their wants are provided for, and they receive a steady addition to the bank account each month.

Gasoline Rushed To Eastern Coast

Seventeen Tank Cars Speed to Aid of Maritime Fishermen.

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—A solid train of gasoline tank cars is speeding in the direction of the Maritime Provinces in order to prevent a tie-up of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick fishing boats owing to a gasoline shortage.

Owing to railway congestion, particularly in the United States, the gasoline stocks in the Maritime Provinces are almost at the point of depletion, and unless more "gas" reaches the coast within twenty-four hours the fishing industry will be almost completely interrupted. There are more than four thousand gasoline boats in Nova Scotia alone, and it is estimated that in the three eastern Provinces there are at least a thousand used in fishing by line trawl. The lack of fuel for these engines threatens not only to bring idleness to dozens of fishing towns and hamlets, but to upset the carefully-timed train service instituted by the Food Controller for the carrying of their fish to Montreal and Toronto for distribution to the other inland cities.

STANFIELD'S

Unshrinkable
UNDERWEAR

Made and Worn by Two Generations

Over a quarter of a century ago the late C. E. Stanfield, Pioneer underwear manufacturer of Truro, N.S., discovered a way to prevent woollen underwear from shrinking—by the radical but sensible plan of taking the shrink out of the wool before it went to the knitting machines.

His secret process at once overcame the one fault of woollen underwear, and started a keen and steadily growing demand for the Stanfield's product.

From the very first, the sterling quality of Stanfield's Underwear, as proved by wear and washing, has been its most prominent feature. It actually DOES NOT SHRINK, "full up" nor mat—and on the basis of length of service it is the best value offered in underwear.

Not content with superior quality, Stanfield's give wearers all the little niceties that make undergarments luxurious. Among the newer improvements are the wonderfully handy Adjustable Combinations and Adjustable Sleepers for growing children. Simply moving the buttons on the waist allows for two to three years' growth, and the detachable lower part is a great convenience.

LITTLE BOY HAD DIARRHOEA

Only Blood Passed Bowels

Diarrhoea, dysentery and summer complaint are responsible for more deaths, especially of children, during the summer months, than any other form of disease.

Diarrhoea does not need to persist for any length of time until the whole system is weakened and no other disease so quickly undermines the strength and brings about a condition of prostration and often collapse.

Mrs. E. Stoddard, Lower Clark's Harbour, N.S., writes: "When my little boy was a year and a half old he was taken awfully bad with diarrhoea. I had the doctor, but he got worse so that only blood passed his bowels. I tried everything, but he got no relief. One day while I was at work, I picked up a piece of paper, and on it was an advertisement for Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. After trying a bottle he began to get better and the second one made a cure. I would not be without it in the house for my little ones. I am proud to say "Dr. Fowler's" saved my little boy's life."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 72 years and there are many imitations of this wonderful bowel complaint remedy. See that you get the genuine when you ask for it. Price 35c.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Ticket

It Led to Complications

By AGNES G. BROGAN

There was the girl again! Billy Thornton frowned at her sudden entrance into the car—not that there was anything about the fresh, interested countenance to call forth a masculine frown. Jane Wilder was exactly the opposite kind of girl. But Billy never had met her, and was more anxious to meet her than for anything else in the world, and, though she was always appearing in most unexpected places in a delightfully disturbing manner, still she, the ideal, remained as far distant as some beautiful, wonderful star.

"How," mused Billy to himself—"how in the world could the proper meeting be brought about?" Sometimes he was pleased to fancy a responsive interest in the girl's glance of quickly veiled recognition in their several encounters. "How—oh, how?"

"So glad to see you, dearie," murmured an old lady, bending over his divinity from the seat behind. "You are on your way to the child welfare meeting, of course. How busy you keep yourself with everything of an uplifting nature! I don't see how you do it."

The girl laughed as she turned around. Billy's heart thumped in sympathy with the clear joyousness of the sound. Never had he heard her voice or laugh before, and in nothing was she disappointing. Recklessly he allowed the windows of his office, where Braydon was waiting to see him upon an important commission, to fade into distance. He would sit here in this seat until the girl left the car.

"Oh, I am not voluntarily busy," she answered the old lady, "just drawn into the work by my friends. Meetings are all this week, you know—evenings for the men. We must interest voters. Lillis is one of the ushers, so it was she who solicited my aid, the dean of our old college being tonight's speaker."

"I would like to go," the old lady responded. Eagerly the girl fumbled in her purse. "So sorry," she said at length. "I have no more tickets, and admission is all by ticket invitation."

She jumped to her feet. "My corner!" she cried. "Goodby, Mrs. West." It was then that Billy heard the coveted name.

"Goodby, Jane Wilder," said the old lady.

"'Jane Wilder,'" Mentally he echoed the name. "It was like her somehow." To him it sounded quaint and sweet. He was planning as he brushed through the crowd in the streets to obtain tickets in some manner for that evening's "welfare" meeting. It would be in the auditorium, of course, and she had said by invitation only. He remembered reading an account of the affair in the papers. Former pupils of the college represented by the speaker were to act as ushers. Surely one might speak to an usher, and surely one might select one's particular usher. Billy began to whistle.

The low but merry tune seemed to annoy rather than cheer the tall young man who swung impatiently about in Billy's pet office chair.

"Great Scott," Braydon ejaculated in greeting, "you come in more than thirty minutes late and happy as a May day! I went without my own lunch in order to get over here on time, while you"—

Braydon's feet came to the floor with a bang. "What's the matter with you, Thornton?" he asked.

Billy waved the question impatiently aside. "Where can I get them?" he insisted.

"How the dickens do I know?" the man replied. Suddenly he glanced at Billy's eager face. "Why this unusual interest in a strange cause?" he asked.

Deliberately Billy seated himself in an opposite chair. "There is a girl," he answered seriously, "whom I am very anxious to meet. She will be there tonight. Among that old college crowd we must have mutual acquaintances. If you can direct me to any one who might possibly have a spare ticket of invitation I'd be obliged. That's all."

His friend considered. "Why, there's Jack Maynard," he said. "His wife was a student at that college. I'll speak to him. Before we get down to business, what's the name of this girl, Billy? Might know her myself."

In the desperate hope of hearing from Jack Maynard he lingered in the office long past closing time and at last was rewarded by the appearance of a messenger bearing an envelope marked, with the date, "Ticket to auditorium meeting." Billy's sinking spirits soared to their highest level. That very evening he should see her again at least—that evening. There was not much time for dinner. The auditorium would be crowded.

For a moment as he waited in the entrance Billy's eyes roved excitedly among the white gowned tiers of ushers. Then at length he spied her. She was even more charming with her uncovered golden head than in the fetching hats of his remembrance, and—yes, she was coming slowly toward him. A rather stout woman usher put out her hand.

"Waiting," he said. Miss Jane Wilder's gaze was entirely impersonal. Silently she accepted and read his ticket; then "Oh!" she breathed. Vaguely troubled, he glanced down at the golden head. Surprise, disappointment—what was it that showed for a moment in the eyes upraised to his?

"This way," she said, and Billy followed her down the aisle. But at the choice seat designated the stout overseeing usher reappeared.

"Must be some mistake," she argued loudly. "This section reserved for ushers and their husbands only. Let me see your ticket." Billy was about to apologize and withdraw—other fortunate possessors of nearby seats interestedly watched the outcome—when his director's voice sounded distinctly.

"It's all right, Mrs. Sayles," she said. "The ticket reads, 'Mr. and Mrs. Jack Maynard.' Mrs. Maynard is not here this evening, but she ushered at this afternoon's meeting."

Before Billy could collect his senses before he could deny to the one girl in all the world this fatal imputation, the two white clad women, whispering moved away togethes. And to this end had his scheming led him. The girl whose love he craved was now, through a senseless mistake, removed from him forever. Henceforth he was in her eyes but the wedded husband of a certain Mrs. Jack Maynard. Why hadn't he glanced at the confounded ticket instead of rushing with it like a fool?

Despairingly Billy looked about, after the oration, if here he might still find one friend, perhaps also of her acquaintance, but all were strangers, not one familiar face. Broodingly he made his way to the door. Out in the vestibule he lingered to throw on his coat and presently from a merry, chattering throng she made her way to him.

The wonder of her sudden presence there at his side, the smile that was unmistakably for him, held him for the moment speechless.

"I hope the evening has been a pleasant one," she said and held out her hand. Billy saw that the hand was extending to him a small white envelope and took it. Then his dream abruptly ended.

"A ticket for the mothers' meeting tomorrow, Mr. Maynard," she said. "Please give it to your wife."

Before his denying lips could even form a reply she had vanished. It was a decidedly grouchy Billy Thornton whom his tall friend found in the office the next day.

"Enjoy the uplift meeting?" Braydon casually inquired.

"The deuce!" answered Billy.

"As to that Miss Wilder," the friend went on. "Happen to know people who in turn know her. Take you over to meet her if you like."

Billy's grouch evaporated. "Tonight?" he asked crisply.

"Tonight," replied Braydon.

Billy banged down the cover of his desk in a spirit of joyful anticipation. In ten minutes he would explain all to her. And after that—well, if he didn't win out in the old game of love it would not be because with all his heart and soul he had not tried. He wished that Braydon would refrain from entering into that old business problem on the way to the house where he was to meet her. He wanted to go over in his mind the things that he would say.

Before he realized it they were in the brilliantly lighted reception room and he was bowing before a sweet faced woman presented as Mrs. Jack Maynard, who immediately, taking Billy in charge, led him to a girlish figure at the farther end of the room.

"Miss Wilder," she announced rather absently and hurried back to his friend. The "one girl" smiled up at him.

"We are not quite strangers," she said, "but I am afraid you forgot to give the ticket to Mrs. Maynard. She was absent, I noticed, from the afternoon meeting, and you"—

"Miss Wilder"—it was the interrupting voice of Braydon—"come here just a moment, please, to settle a dispute."

Billy savagely ground his heel on the rug as others came to claim the girl's attention, keeping her from him. When was this silly affair to be straightened? Where was the real Jack Maynard?

Interminably the evening dragged and no opportunity for a further word with the girl of his dreams. In her eyes he was now no doubt just the uninteresting husband of her hostess, while in his eyes—Billy rapturously caught his breath as he looked at her—she grew each moment fairer.

In sudden determination he crossed to where she sat before the piano.

"I want to talk to you," he said.

The girl's fingers rested upon the keys. Half turning, she looked up at him.

"I—I'm not Jack Maynard," Billy blurted out desperately, "and I'm not married. It was a confounded—I beg your pardon—only a borrowed ticket."

The laughing challenge of her eyes gave him sudden courage. "I have wanted—no, that's not the word—I have desired above all things for months to meet you," he went on, then paused. His eyes were saying more. "My name is Thornton," he ended abruptly—"William Thornton."

Miss Jane Wilder arose and stood before him. "I know it," she said quietly, "and I knew it all along. Back there at church that day a friend pointed you out to me. Yesterday when Jack Maynard asked for a ticket for you to the meeting it was I who suggested that he lend you his." She laughed softly. "It was wicked of me to pretend," she admitted—"wicked, but—it did not take you so long to bring this"—she paused and held out her hand—"about."

Fervently Billy grasped the proffered hand; fervently he bent to look down into the girl's face. Then deep and deeply he sighed. "At last!" breathed he.

Russian General Gets Life Sentence With Hard Labour

PETROGRAD, Sept. 26.—General Soukhomlinoff, former Minister of War, was sentenced to hard labour for life after conviction of high treason in the court here to-day. Madame Soukhomlinoff was acquitted. General Sukhomlinoff was convicted also on the charges of abuse on confidence and fraud.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 26.—General Soukhomlinoff, in his closing speech at the trial for high treason, claimed that the four years he spent at the War Office were insufficient to properly organize the Russian forces. Nevertheless he sent a huge number of effectives to the front, which the Government naturally was unable to supply properly, although the mobilization was carried out brilliantly and it compelled the Germans to retrace their steps from Paris just as they were about to achieve its conquest.

"I may, perhaps, have been guilty of mistakes, but before God and the fatherland I have no crime with which to reproach myself," said the former Minister of War as he burst into tears. Madame Soukhomlinoff then addressed the court, and in a voice choked with sobs declared vehemently:

"We are not criminals, neither I nor my husband." The jury then retired to consider the fourteen indictments submitted to them.

A VARIED PICTURE.

A throng assembled in the hall as the hour approached for the finding of the verdict. The crowd composed a varied picture mad, possible only by the revolution. Generals in splendid uniforms rubbed elbows with private soldiers clad in rusty blouses. Women in silks and furs jostled plain gowned women of the poor.

As the chief justice calmly addressed the jury, instructing them in the law, the court room was like a scene in a picturesque drama. General Soukhomlinoff, in drab uniform, bald and bearded, sat with head in hand, elbow on the dock, peering intently at the jurors. Beside him was his wife, a pale cameo-featured woman of perhaps 35. She seemed only half her husband's age. Her black dress and hat with veil thrown back lent unexpected gravity to her face, so vivacious when surrounded by gayer colors. Beside the dock, standing stiffly at attention save for furtive glances occasionally at the prisoners, stood two massive Russian private soldiers in brown blouses, rifles with fixed bayonets resting on the floor.

CAST IRON SHELLS EFFECTIVE.

Boston, Mass, Sept. 27.—The superior effect of cast iron shells in attacking earthworks and the low cost of manufacture was pointed out by Edgar A. Custer, a consulting engineer, of Philadelphia, speaking before the delegates of the American Foundrymen's Association, in session here to-day.

APPLES ARE ON THEIR WAY.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—Nova Scotia apples are already on their way to markets in Central and Western Canada, under the direction of officers appointed by the Food Controller. The fruit and vegetables committee of the Food Controller's office has secured the services of H. H. Schafer to assist in this movement. Mr. Schafer will make his headquarters at Kentville, N.S., and will work in co-operation with G. E. McIntosh, traffic officer of the Dominion Fruit Commissioner's office, and George Spencer, chief operating officer of the Dominion Railway Commission.

There are important transportation difficulties to be overcome in connection with the marketing of this year's yield of apples and potatoes in the Eastern Provinces, but the Food Controller and the fruit and vegetable committee appointed by him, are determined that the crop shall not be wasted, and are prepared to take any action which may be found necessary in the interests of the public.

FLOUR WILL BE CHEAPER

ST. PAUL, Sept. 27.—John Pillsbury of Minneapolis, representing one of the largest flour mills in the country, to-day told the State Commission that is investigating price of flour would come lower than sities of life that he believed the pric of flour would come lower than the present figure of $10.85 a barrel, mainly because of the excellent crop to be milled. He added his belief that feed prices also will drop. It was disclosed at the meeting that the Federal Government is licensing flour mills, and will close any mill showing profits in excess of 25 cents a barrel on flour and 50 cents a ton on feed.

TRY it just once! Ask your friend to let you "pilot" his car on an open stretch. You'll like it, and will be surprised how easily the Ford is handled and driven.

If you have never felt the thrill of driving your own car, there is something good in store for you. It is vastly different from just riding—being a passenger. And especially so if you drive a Ford.

Young boys, girls, women and even grandfathers—thousands of them—are driving Ford cars and enjoying it. A Ford stops and starts in traffic with exceptional ease and smoothness, while on country roads and hills its strength and power show to advantage.

Buy a Ford and you will want to be behind "the wheel" constantly.

Experienced Painters Use Brandram's Genuine B. B. White Lead

There is no better judge of a good white lead than a veteran painter. That this white lead has been a favourite among veteran painters throughout Canada is due to its superior qualities.

Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead takes hold, wears away gradually and leaves a good surface for repainting. It does not crack or peel. The ease with which it works under the brush is not approached by any other white lead. It has greater covering capacity and greater lasting qualities, consequently it will protect better and give a more beautiful finish. Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead is the whitest and most opaque White Lead known.

KING OF ALL AIRMEN IS REPORTED MISSING

All Efforts to Trace Capt. Guynemer Have Been Futile

PARIS, Sept. 26.—The official communication issued last night announcing that Captain George Guynemer on Sept. 11, while reconnoitring in Flanders, found himself, while pursuing the enemy, separated from his comrades of the patrol. The communication concludes as follows:

"Despite that all means of investigation have been tried, we have not obtained any further information up to the present date."

Guynemer is credited in the army aviation records with having shot down fifty-three German airships inside the German lines and with having destroyed at least 25 more that were uncounted. He was one of the youngest men of his rank in the French army, having been promoted by President Poincare in February last at the age of 22.

At the beginning of the war Guynemer was under age. He tried five times unsuccessfully to get into the army, and finally had to literally break his way into the aviation corps.

Guynemer became an "ace" in the French aviation corps in August, 1916, and soon thereafter surpassed the record of Sub-Lieut. Jean Navarre, who up to that time led with twelve German machines to his credit. In the meantime Guynemer had received two bullets in the arm at Verdun. In 1916 the Academy of Sports awarded the young aviator a 10,00 franc prize for "the best sporting event of the year." At the end of the same year, with his captain stripes, he received the cross of the Legion of Honour.

Capt. Guynemer's greatest day's work was on May 17 of this year when he brought down four German machines, two of which he accounted for in the space of two minutes, having attacked a group of four. With only three cartridges left while on his homeward flight, he encountered the fourth German, and shot him down with one of the three remaining cartridges.

The fifty-three German machines officially credited to Capt. Guynemer's record were worth something more than 1,500,00 francs. Some of them were manned by two or three men, and it is estimated that he accounted for more than eighty pilots, observers and gunners.

The United States May Curtail Sending Of Troops Overseas

Foremost Question is the Disposition of American Tonnage Which is Badly Needed to Transport Food Supplies---Matter is Under International Discussion To-day'--- Little Activity Recorded From the Western Front---Censor Stops All News Despatches From Battle Line.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Carl B. Groat.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, September 29.—American troop transportation to Europe during the next six months may be greatly curtailed as a result of the German U-boat menace discussed with surprising frankness by the British Ministry of Marine. The foremost question now before this country and the Allies is the disposition of American tonnage. The United Press can state on the highest authority that a grave question has arisen whether the United States is perhaps crowding her side of the struggle in forcing over thousands of soldiers at this time instead of moving supplies. The argument is advanced in favour of reducing troop movements. France alone has a million tons of supplies tied up on this side of the Atlantic which cannot be moved while American troops are being tronsported. France, Great Britain and Italy need fuel, food, oil, etc., sorely, the shipment of which is prevented through lack of tonnage.

Germany's man-power is waning, and a careful compilation completed by the Allied governments indicates that the Allied man-power properly supplied can win the war more quickly than if the present man-power is augmented by thousands of American troops at the sacrifice of facing insufficient supplies through lack of tonnage.

The U-boat menace is not under-estimated by the United States Government. There is not the slightest fear that Germany can win through her sea scavengers, but there is appreciated need for very serious consideration of the most effective way to meet the situation created. The British shipping ministry called upon this country for six million tons annually. This figure cannot be realized before late in 1918 or early in 1919, it is officially admitted. The programme for the next 18 months falls short of the British demands, and more than a billion dollars is involved in work now under way. After this period has passed, however, it is stated the Unitde States should be able to produce six million tons annually. The means of conserving shipping and utilizing the tonnage available until this great building programme nets ships is the vital question under international discussion here to-day.

TWO GERMAN PLANES WERE BROUGHT DOWN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 29.—Two German airplanes which took part in last night's raid over the southeast coast of England were brought down, it is announced officially. No casualties were caused by the raid.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, September 29.—Violent artillery fighting occured last night on the right bank of the Meuse in the Verdun sector, says to-day's official statement.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 29.—There was the usual artillery activity on both sides, says to-day's official communication. There is nothing of interest to report.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, September 29.—Germany has not renounced Belgium, and has not been in communication with any of her enemies, according to the Berlin report of a speech made before the Reichstag Main Committee, by Chancellor Michaelis.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 29.—British aviators dropped seven tons of explosives in attacks Thursday night on a German military establishment in Belgium.

LONDON, September 28.—Correspondents at British Headquarters in France advise all their English and American newspapers to expect nothing from their respective correspondents to-day.

No reason for this is assigned.

No reason for the withholding of the despatches of newspaper correspondents on the British front in France is known. The only occasion previously of interrupting the news of the correspondents was in October, 1916, when it was announced from London that thousands of words of news from Associated Press correspondents in Sofia and from the German line on the Western battlefront were being withheld by the British censor. Two days later announcement was received of the entry of Bulgaria into the war on the side of the Teutonic allies, and a day still later came the news that Field Marshal Sir John French, who had remained silent for five days, had made considerable gains in the Loos sector, driving a wedge into the German lines from 500 to 1,000 yards in depth.

MEDICAL BOARD WILL BEGIN WORK ON MONDAY MORNING

Employees of the Canadian General Electric Company Will Be the First Men Examined Here Under the Military Service Act

INDIVIDUALS LATER

The Medical Board which will examine alal the men in this district affected by the Military Service Act will commence its work on Monday morning. The board consists of Major G. S. Cameron, president; Major J. H. Eastwood and Capt. T. N. Greer. The first two have been connected with the examination of recruits ever since the beginning of war, while Capt. Greer's is a new appointment.

The Board has arranged to conduct the examination on a systematic basis, and will first examine employees of the larger factories and business places, starting in on Monday morning at 10 o'clock with the employees of the Canadian General Electric Company. It is understood that there are about 300 employees of the C.G.E. who came in the first class under the Military Service Act. These men will be sent to the Armouries in squads of ten, and in order to facilitate their examination with the least possible interference with industrial conditions, no other recruits will be examined at the day sessions of the Board until the men of the larger concerns have all been examined. It is expected that it will take a week or ten days to get these out of the road, and then the Board will be ready for individuals.

However, at the night sessions of the Board it is likely that general cases will receive attention.

The first session of the Board will be held Monday at 10 o'clock. It is planned to have the morning session from 10 to 2, and the afternoon session from 3 to 5, or possibly 6 o'clock, while the night session will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

Beautiful Photoplay, Wonderful Lighting Effects—A Delightful Love Story

"The Lad and the Lion" is the very latest of the wonderful tales from the pen of Edgar Rice Burroughs, who wrote "Tarzan, of the Apes," etc. Vivian Reed, the-girl-with-the-million-dollar-smile, plays the leading role. They save beautiful Nakhla, daughter of a desert prince, from brigands and thus it is that the Lad won the love of the maiden. Ben Saada, arrogant chief of an outlaw band, abducts Nakhla. The Lad and the Lion rescue the girl and punish the outlaw. And then the Lad regains his memory which he has lost through a blow on the head and there comes to him as in a flash his identity. But he does not foregt the beautiful girl whom he has wooed under the desert moon, whom he has saved from worse than death. Satisfaction Over The Work of Air Defence

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, September 29.—Great satisfaction was expressed by officials to-day over the forcing back last night of more air raiders. Several enemy machines attempted to reach London but were driven back after dropping a few bombs with scant damage on coast points. Anti-aircraft guns reached a new vigor of fire, literally putting up an air raid barrage against the foe.

G. Affleck, who is officially reported killed in action. Pte. Affleck, who for a number of years was connected with the staff of the local branch of the Bank of Toronto, came here originally from Scotland, where his relatives still reside. He had a host of friends in Peterborough who will be grieved to learn of his death, which will be a greater shock owing to the fact that it was not known he had gone to France. When the first contingent reached England Pte. Affleck, on account of his business training, was assigned for duty in the Canadian Pay and Records Office in London and was employed there for many months, being promoted to sergeant. He was mentioned in the Secretary of State's list some time ago for good work in connection with his position. It is evident that he gave up his stripes and went to France in a draft. Pte. Indian Chiefs From Various Reserves Will Meet at Chemong Lake

In order to discuss a number of grievances, of which the principal one is that they have not been given the franchise, the Chiefs from the majority of the Indian reserves in Ontario are to hold a conference at Chemong Indian Village on Tuesday of next week. Among the Chiefs who will be here are those from Walpole Island, Cape Crocker, Kettle Point, Christian Island, Georgina Island, Brantford, Rama, Alnwick, Rice Lake and other reserves.

The Government will probably be memorialized in an effort to secure the vote for the Indians of the province. They point out that while hundreds of Indians are overseas fighting for Canada, and while the Indians have contributed loyally to Red Cross and other funds, they are deprived of the franchise, while foreigners with a few years' residence in Canada as their only qualification, are given the privilege of voting.

The conference will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday and will be wound up with a big concert on Wednesday night.

Finance Committee Without Funds For A Gift Airplane

At Friday afternoon's meeting of the Finance committee an appeal from the Canadian Aviation Fund to donate an airplane costing $7,600 was referred back to the Council for further consideration. The treasury is bare and only by an overdraft could the airplane be provided. Ald. Dobbin remarked that the government should supply the war appliances, and Ald. Stratton stated that in view of the shortage of funds the committee could not recommend the expenditure entailed.

The tax collector's statement of the roll showed a balance on August 31st of $121,104.22, which Ald. Stratton observed was an indication of the city's prosperity. The second installment of the taxes are due shortly.

The Royal Agricultural school, whose office is in Montreal, sought a contribution to their free education of the sons of soldiers killed in the war. Twenty-five boys are already enrolled. This communication was received with the comment that it could wait till the sons of Quebec had done a little more to win the war.

Result Will Make Kerensky Supreme Dictator or Completely Obliterate That Leader and His Government.

THE PREMIER'S ADDRESS

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Sept. 29.—A big crisis is expected to-day at the Democratic Congress, and this crisis will, it is expected, bring about a decision which will make Kerensky supreme dictator, or completely obliterate that leader and his government, and decide whether Russia will continue in the war or not. Premier Kerenesky has taken the initiative and is facing coldly what may be the supreme test of power of his government.

At the very beginning of the Democratic Congress, called by Maximalists and the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates to question his power and perhaps to demand a new government, the Premier accepted the challenge. He told Congress that his regime had saved Russia in its darkest hours. The Government also indicated its policy of a firm continuation of the war, when Verkhovsky, the Minister of War, pledged the convention to final victory over Germany if discipline in the army was restored.

The General's reference to the return of discipline and his announcement that officers would be named by their superiors instead of elected by the soldiers was applauded only mildly, but his address as a whole evoked more cheers than did the Premier's. "I prevented it. I destroyed it. I was informed from the beginning of its existence," declared the Premier, regarding the revolt of General Kornioff.

A loud voice in the gallery, shouted: "You are the greatest mischief worker of the country.."

From a bedlam of hisses and applause, voices from the floor challenged the heckler to arise.

A private soldier in the back gallery arose and with folded arms across his brown blouse, stood calmly facing the torrent of hisses from supporters of Premier Kerenesky.

This was only one of the unusual scenes of the convention.

AN UNUSUAL SIGHT.

The convention was an unusual sight, the sombre colours and the clothes of peasants, workmen and private soldiers predominated. Here and there were brighter colours of uniforms of officers.

"Our gallant allies," the War Minister said, "have replied to the dastardly offer by unconditionally rejecting it, believing, as I believe, that the Russian army will still bare its breast to free the Fatherland." The General said he would handle the army without gloves.

ARMY CHANGES.

General Verkhovsky repeated his announced programme of changing army commanders, educating troops along free revolutionary lines based on mutual trust between officers and men and disbanding of the useless hordes in the rear. The speech contained little comfort for the pacifists in the audience.

The War Minister is a young man about the age of Kerensky. He spoke in a low even voice and referred frequently to notes, gradually working up to the climax, when he declared in a ringing voice: "The war must be continued until with certainty we have achieved the peace desired by all, peace with freedom."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, SEPT. 29, 1917

CHILDREN'S AID TAG DAY.

That splendid human society, the Children's Aid Society, will make its annual appeal to practical popular sympathy and help, on Saturday, October 6th.

This occasion will give an opportunity to everybody to help—to the millionaire class, to the widow's mite class. It will present a chance for giving, to those who can give much, without feeling the gift, and to those who may have to make sacrifices for even a small contribution. But every giver will feel it if his heart is in the right place, and if he realises the responsibility and appreciates the privilege of helping a truly noble work.

We must save our neglected, our ill-treated, our badly-reared children, in the interests of the safety of ourselves as members of society, and for the future good of the state. The Children's Aid Society, whose chief function is to rescue the perishing and preserve them for future usefulness in our citizenship, has justified its existence and established its claim upon the people of Peterborough city and county, and the province. Many of us of our own personal knowledge, know of many instances in which the Society has saved from moral and social wreck, and made useful members of society, children who, but for its beneficent agency, would certainly, apart from a miracle, have become criminals or social and moral castaways. All over the province we have wards of the Society who have gone forth as respectable and useful citizens, from happy foster homes, and made homes for themselves, a credit to Canadian citizenship. Hundreds of foster parents wouldn't take all the money in Canada for the little waif, who has woven himself or herself into their hearts through the medium of the Children's Aid Society.

In contemplating the beautiful results of its splendid salvage work we think not only of the good, honest virtuous citizens it has made out of waste material, but of the immense suffering, neglect, the starving, the beating and abuse it has spared innocent children—in God's sight, and good men and women's sight, as precious as their own cherished, well loved children.

A little article in another column of this issue shows how the work of the Society has not only immediate tangible, visible results, but an influence that bears fruit. From Somewhere in Flanders, a soldier writes to the Provincial Head of the Children's Aid Society, this striking testimony—

Sir, without your kindness and ability for helping young boys, who went astray, I would not have been a free man to-day, and able to hold up my head and say I am an honest man.

Isn't testimony like that worth a dollar in the Children's Aid Contribution Box next Saturday?

The Children's Aid Society has a special claim upon the public; for their contributions are its only source of financial sustenance. It has a special claim on those who desire a practical means of showing their gratitude for the safety and comfort of a happy, sheltering home for their own children.

It has a special claim upon those who believe in Him, who has more thought for the one stray lamb than for the ninety and nine safe in the fold.

CIS-ANTLANTIC PRUSSIANISM.

Six years ago the Borden government, by prostitution of patriotism and mis-use of the flag, cajoled the voters of Canada into putting them into power. The success of that "move" has encouraged them to try to repeat the process. We are appealed to to give the Borden government a new lease of power because it presents itself as the only true representative of Canadian loyalty and patriotism. We must forget party in the interest of the return of a partizan government that has shown itself capable of committing great wrong to retain office.

With a little lack of faith in the sufficiency of the loyalty cry, the government to "make assurance doubly sure, and take a bond of"—fraud has devised an iniquitous franchise law, by which thousands of good Canadians are disfranchised—a monstrous act of high-handed "force." The government has declared the nationalization papers of certain foreign-born Canadians, a "scrap of paper"—in the view of the spokesmen of German autocracy.

All aliens of an origin traceable to an enemy country, are disfranchised, though for fifteen years they have been good, law-abiding Canadian citizens.

The only excuse for this high-handed outrage consists in the fact that the votes of these persons cannot be counted upon as sure for the Borden government; and the government takes no chances. It takes the thorough Prussian way, and deprives them of the rights of British citizens. These foreign-born Canadians came to Canada officially welcomed, if not materially assisted to come, to escape the Prussianized methods of old-world despotism, and enjoy the benefits of free British institutions. These men have been given nationalization papers containing the national guarantee of the exercise of certain rights and privileges. The law, defining the force of a certificate of nationalization, such as these foreign-born Canadians have been granted, passed thirty-six years ago, and confirmed in 1914, says:

"An alien to whom a certificate of naturalization is granted shall, within Canada, be entitled to all political and other rights, powers and privileges, and be subject to all obligations, to which a naturalized British subject is entitled or subject within Canada."

The parliamentary and deliberate enactment of a breach of this solemn pact is worse than Prussianism. Prussianism violated a solemn treaty, by right of force, not by a travesty of representative action—by an Act of Parliament, which in the case of Canada, was secured by true Prussian methods—the closure—force.

Germany "has the laugh" on its expatriated subjects, who left that country to escape Prussian despotism, but got a taste of despotic methods and breach of faith in a country that hypocritically, in effect, plumes itself on its democratic freedom, and poses as a home and haven for the oppressed.

Another important result of this government breach of faith, is the tendency to emphasize racial feeling and intensify separatist tendencies. Six years ago we were told that a little more freedom of trade was treason, was separatism. Here we have encouraged and developed domestic separatism, and another problem of race friction and antagonism created. The West is pushed away from the rest of Canada, as has been done in a part of the East.

The aim of true statesmanship is to unify and harmonize the foreign elements of our population, which our need of citizens has made nearly equal in numbers with the native and British-born. The Borden government, by its disfranchising legislation, has fashioned the wedge of separation, and is driving it home in the interest of serving party advantage. In the same interest, it has encouraged and fostered a disintegrating element in Eastern Canada and helped intensify the separating tendency of Nationalism.

It serves its party end, in one case by rewarding with office a declared disloyal element; in the other case it plays at once the separatist and party game by disfranchising the western Canadians of foreign birth. If anybody in Canada deserves disfranchising it is Bourassa and his brood, who have done more to hinder Canadian discharge of war duty than all the foreign-born Canadians in the country.

Russia has been disappointing, but there's comfort in the thought that worse things would have come but for the revolution that apparently puts Russia out of the fight.

Notable Changes in Prices During The Past Week

The following comment on the market situation, as regards foodstuffs, will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

In no line of grocers' supplies has there been any very notable changes during the past week. The season is usually considered a dull one by the trade, and certainly it has given no sensational demonstrations during the past week. Changes there have been, but these have been of a limited character. Rice has shown a stronger feeling, and is showing advances on practically all markets, and tapioca is quoted as very scarce. Peanuts, too, are scarce, and have advanced two cents. The report of the canning situation is far from satisfactory. Beans, the latest commodity to be reported, are only a 12 1-2 per cent. pack, which will leave large margins in all orders. Tomato and corn prospects are far from encouraging, while fruits also are not expected to come near a full pack. Coffee shows an easier feeling on the primary markets, but this feeling is more or less offset by increasing freight rates, so that little decline in prices is to be expected. Tea on the other hand is decidedly stronger, and might show an advance at almost any time.

Hogs showed an advance during the week, as did butter; indeed the market for this commodity is extremely strong, though from just what source the demand springs, the trade has not been able to fathom. Eggs have been plentiful during the week, and consequently there has been no change in price. The general feeling, however, is that an advance is probable, and that in the not very distant future. Honey has advanced in price, and the end of the advances is not yet in sight. The supply is exceedingly short and the demand more than ordinarily good.

Potatoes during the week have been in good supply and ranged much lower, and will probably go ower still. Fruit has been plentiful during the week, especially in the softer fruits.

Fish has been scarce with a tendency to stronger prices, though halibut is the only variety that actually shows an advance. Business during the week in all lines has been reported uniformly good.

CAST IRON SHELLS EFFECTIVE

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 28.—The superior effect of cast iron shells in attacking earthworks and the low cost af manufacture was pointed out by Edgar A Custer, a consulting engineer of Philadelphia, speaking before the delegates of the American Foundrymen's Association, in session here.

STEWART LYON'S WORK AS WAR CORRESPONDENT

(Special Correspondence to the Evening Telegram From DOUGLAS S. ROBERTSON)

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Up where the guns are roaring, along the Canadian front, one may chance to see, as did the writer, a short, stocky, middle-aged man dressed in officer's uniform sans stars or badges. This man, whose voice proclaims his Scottish nativity, is Stewart Lyon, resident representative of the Canadian Press at the front.

Familiar Figure to Troops.

Old friends in Toronto would scarcely recognize in this bronzed man in khaki the whilom editor of The Toronto Globe. Life on the edge of war has taken off any surplus flesh. Hard and continuous tramping in all kinds of weather has toughened his muscles. To-day no fitter man of his age exists throughout the Canadian forces.

Lyon's industry amazes even the soldiers. He is indefatigable in his search for news. With a newspaperman's instinct he insists upon eye-witnessing, and, whenever humanly possible, Lyon is on the spot himself. Indeed, Canada's representative has been present at every Canadian fight of the least importance since he crossed to France eight months ago.

Provided Transportation.

The Telegram's correspondent met Mr. Lyon last May, and journeyed with him towards the trenches en automobile until danger from shell fire forbade farther passage of the motor. (For long Mr. Lyon had no car, and had to tramp even along the roads.) Then, jumping out and insisting upon helping me with my much too superfluous baggage (a brace of heavy suit cases is no equipment for a holiday on the battlefield), he started off at leisurely pace across the shell-moled plain to guide me to a General's invisible subterranean bungalow.

In Danger.

Just as the moment, right overhead, a Boche plane was frantically essaying to dodge our anti-craft shells, whose spent brazen noses were dropping earthward with alarming screech. Not far away Hun heavy shells were "crumping" upon what the deluded German gentleman in the air had signalled their artillery as targets. But Lyon paid little attention to it all, merely adjusting his shrapnel helmet and relating a pleasant little yarn of how one of such shell noses had driven clear through a man's helmet, right through his body, and then several feet into the ground.

Strange Contrasts.

Cached in artillery observation posts, hiding in shell holes with gas-masked muffled face, up in trench dugouts awaiting a raid or bigger operation, traversing the battlefield at all hours of day and night, risking shells and sniper's shots, from one of which latter he had a pretty close call, they say, soon after arriving, Stewart Lyon has been always on the job, and his rambles take him into queer places.

Some days he dines on bully beef and broken bread in hot corners of the trenches, others he sits at the mess of some General in the stately dining-room of an ancient chateau. Strange beds he encounters, too, in his peregrinations. It may be that he dozes in a dugout fifty yards from the enemy front line, or perhaps he will repose in a bunk in the Egyptian darkness and fustiness of a cavern forty feet under the ground. Another night he may stretch out in a bell tent or slumber soundly in an ancient canopied four-poster, old as the nobleman's erstwhile country seat, in one of whose tapestried chambers it stands. Lyon has had many adventures and not a few close calls, though never a word of himself do his despatches contain.

Can't Mention Names.

Some very unfair complaints have been made by people at home that Mr. Lyon was omitting names and places from his despatches. Surely the critics must have been ignorant of the rigid rules which govern all correspondence from pressmen at the front. Every line must be submitted to the military censor at General Headquarters. Regulations, for excellent reasons, forbid the publication of names and places. Mention of such things would be promptly conveyed from the Canadian papers, perhaps even cabled across the Atlantic to Germany. Mention of seemingly trivial matters has been proved to have furnished the Germans with valuable intelligence.

Mr. Lyon labours under other disabilities. For while the British correspondents, distinguished writers, are backed by the wealth of the World's greatest papers and news associations, Mr. Lyon is employed by a less opulent press and must necessarily keep close check upon his verbiage. Every word he cables costs 7 cents. Consequently the descriptive stuff, so useful an embellishment of bare facts, devoid of the interest of names, he cannot much afford to indulge in. Mail stories are out of the question. Letters conveyed by special courier reach the London papers in a few hours, but such news is stale two weeks and more ere it reaches Canada.

Sorry to Lose Him.

It is reported that Mr. Lyon has asked to be relieved of his post. Eight months' campaign, hard as any soldiers's, has been his lot—and he is fifty-one. The Canadian army will be sorry to lose him—this rugged Scots-Canadian with the burr in his speech, a welcome visitor to any mess. Many a story will be have to relate in the editorial rooms when he returns to Canada, happy in the knowledge of work well done in the face of daily hardship, danger and difficulty.

PAIN? NOT A BIT!
LIFT YOUR CORNS OR CALLUSES OFF

No humbug! Apply few drops then just lift them away with fingers.

This new drug is an ether compound discovered by a Cincinnati chemist. It is called freezone, and can now be obtained in tiny bottles as here shown at very little cost from any drug store. Just ask for freezone. Apply a drop or two directly upon a tender corn or callus and instantly the soreness disappears. Shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off, root and all, with the fingers.

Not a twinge of pain, soreness or irritation; not even the slightest smarting, either when applying freezone or afterwards.

This drug doesn't eat up the corn or callus, but shrivels them so they loosen and come right out. It is no humbug! It works like a charm. For a few cents you can get rid of every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as painful calluses on bottom of your feet. It never disappoints and never burns, bites or inflames. Genuine freezone is sold only in these small bottles packed in a little sealed wood case, bearing a yellow wrapper. Beware of imitations.

WONDERFUL ILLUSIONS BY THE GREAT CARTER

REPEATED TO-NIGHT

Carter, billed as "the great magician" proved the title not a misnomer by his wonderful illusions and tricks at the Grand Opera House last night when his varied programme amused and thrilled a large audience. Some of his feats are amusing, some of them mysterious, but all are clever and last night's audience left the theatre completely baffled as to how they were performed. No smoother worker in his line has been seen at the Grand than the same Carter and a capacity house should be on hand to-night when he makes his final appearance here.

His programme opens with a bouquet of mysterious, clever card tricks and optical illusions that bewilder the audience. One of these may be described as illustrative of the other. Handing an ordinary playing card to a gentleman in the audience Carter asked him to tear it up, but to retain one corner of the card. The fragments were placed in a pistol and Carter fired at a hat resting on a table on the stage. Instantaneously the card appeared tacked to the hat, complete, except for the piece held by the gentleman in the audience.

The exhaustible bottle proved very amusing. From it Carter poured water, ginger ale and other beverages as they were asked for by the audience. Then breaking the bottle a guinea pig was uncovered with a ring borrowed from a lady in the audience tied around its neck. Apparently wrapping the guinea pig up in a piece of paper Carter asked the lady to accept it as a souvenir and on her refusal opened the paper and his piglet was gone leaving in his place a handsome bouquet.

Another novel feat consisted of the firing of a pistol at a young lady assistant who instantly vanished from sight as the report of the pistol was heard.

Corrine Carter gave an interesting exhibition of thought transference on mental telepathy which mystified the audience. Blindfolded on the stage she instantly described different articles produced by people throughout the theatre, read addresses on envelopes and similar feats. The audience was requested to write questions on a piece of paper and return the paper to their pockets. The mind reader announced the questions in rapid succession. Several in the audience seemed to be worried about conscription and were told it was coming soon. Another wanted to know who was going to win the world's series and Chicago was given as the probable choice. A young lady who wanted to know where she would be two years from now was informed that she would be in Peterborough; that she would be married in a year and that in two years she would be singing lullabies.

One of the cleverest illusions of the night was the personation by Carter of the great Chinese magicians in which a huge bowl of water weighing one hundred and sixteen pounds was mysteriously produced from the thin air.

The programme was brought to a climax with a spectacular elusion "The Beauty of the Lion," in which a huge lion was a centre figure. The story is shown in pantomime and ends with the placing of the heroine of the action in the lion's cage. As the maiden screams the lion vanishes and Carter himself appears. The effest is a thrilling one and a fitting climax of an unusual programme.

U-BOATS CAUSE SUFFERINGS IN BELGIUM

The situation in Belgium has since early summer undergone a drastic change owing to the lack of shipping facilities because of the depredation of the German submarines. Food can no longer be shipped into Belgium in the same quantities as hitherto.

Furthermore, the cost of providing a daily ration for the Belgian population is now borne by the Belgian government with funds generously loaned at first by the British and French governments and now by the United States government.

This provides each dependent in Belgium with a minimum ration to keep body and soul together—a bowl of soup and a slice of bread per day.

The Belgium Relief Fund in Canada is, therefore, not called upon now to assist in the feeding of the general population, and is free to devote its energies to the dire needs of the little children who are obviously unable to subsist on such a meagre ration, with the consequences that tuberculosis, rickets and other ailments due to under-feeding, are exceedingly prevalent. Public contributions to the Belgian cause are now being sent to Holland for the alleviation of suffering by a special feeding of little children.

Another phase of the situation as regards children, is shown by Mr. Hoover, the head of the American Commission, who says that the difficulty in imports due to the U-boats, will now of necessity be supplied by encroaching upon the country's stock of milk cattle which had been reserved to maintain the supply of fresh milk for the children. It is needless to elaborate on this point to mothers of growing children.

Connor's "Sky Pilot" Dramatized

Stage Version of Popular Novel said to have Retained its Spiritual Force and Beauty.

Popular as Ralph Connor's "The Sky Pilot" and "Black Rock" are, the two novels having sold more than two million copies, the play which has been adapted from them by Frank Mandel and George H. Brennan seems destined to enjoy equal public favor. The adapters are reported to have been successful in transferring to the stage some of the most striking situations and characters in these two stories. Many familiar Ralph Connor creations appear in the play: The Pilot, The Duke, Broncho Bill, Gwen, Mrs. Mavor, her husband, Bruce, Ponka, the Indian woman, Hi Kendall, and even Gwen's pony, a highly intelligent animal who is trained to understand nearly everything.

A critic writing in "The Outlook" concerning "The Sky Pilot," declared that it was "real life, virile, true, tender, humorous, pathetic, spiritual and wholesome." The literary essence and spiritual force and beauty of the Canadian novelist's romances are said to be retained in the play. The Pilot moves through the drama in a mysterious atmosphere, bestowing kindness and good cheer. It is said to be a red-blooded drama tingling with thrills and suspense, full of wholesome comedy, and with striking scenic and lighting effects.

Speaking of the performance at The Royal Alexander Theatre, Toronto, the Press says:

"A sensational drama."—World.

"Has dramatic qualities that are gripping."—Mail and Empire.

"The Sky Pilot" will be presented at the Grand, Thanksgiving Day, Monday, October 8th, with a Matinee at 2.30, with a cast of stellar quality including Brandon Tynan, Regina Wallace, Ernest Anderson, Harry D. Southard, Eddie Heron, Louis Leon Hall, Esa Frederic, Isabelle Winlocke, Edwin Caldwell, Joseph Lawrence, Thomas Wall and Edward Broadley.

If You Want Evidence

That Hemorrhoids, or Piles, Can Be Completely Cured—Read These Letters—Both Are Sworn Statements.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 29.—Next to personal experience the sworn statements of reliable people is the strongest evidence obtainable. If you have any doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment will positively and completely cure piles, these letters should convince you.

Mr. Samuel Parker, fruit grower, Grimsby, Ont., has made the following declaration before Mr. W. W. Kidd, Notary Public of the same place: "I do solemnly declare that I was troubled with bleeding piles and was advised to go to the hospital to have an operation performed. My wife said 'No, get a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment.' I did so and have used it according to directions while living in Manitoba and obtained a complete cure, for I have never been troubled with piles since. I am now seventy years of age and want to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all sufferers from piles. My wife has used it for itching skin and obtained complete cure."

Mr. Donald M. Campbell, Campbell's Mountain, N.S., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment with great success for hemorrhoids or piles of fifteen years' standing. After trying all kinds of so-called pile cures, three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment gave me a complete cure. I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and there are no others so good. You may use this letter, if you wish, for the benefit of others who may suffer as I did."

Sworn before me, Murdoch Gordon Campbell, J.P., in the County and for Inverness County.

If you would like to try Dr. Chase's Ointment at our expense, send a two-cent stamp to pay postage and we shall mail you a sample box free. Full size box 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

CANADA GETS SETTLERS.

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—The movement of settlers from the United States to the Canadian West continues o be of considerable volume according to the Immigration Department. The large majority of those who seek homes in Canada are well-to-do farmers above the military age with children too young to be affected by the conscription law. Since the United States came into the war, there has been an increased rather than a decreased movement in the direction of Canada. Previously there existed a natural disinclination on the part of many people to go to a country at war.

A BUILDER OF HEALTH

Nothing can be of greater assistance in building up the system than Dr Chase's Nerve Food, for this food-cure forms new, rich blood, and nourishes and restores the feeble, wasted nerve cells. Gradually and naturally the body and mind regain vigor and energy, and you feel again the joy of living which comes only to people in good health.

Infernal "Tortoises" Left By Germans In The Trenches

CURIOUS 'TOMMY' KICKS AT STRANGE OBJECT AND AWAKES LATER IN A HOSPITAL.

In an interesting illustrated article in the September Popular Mechanics Magazine, Lewis R. Freeman, describes more or less ingenious but always diabolical contrivances that the Germans have lately made a practice of leaving in trenches from which they have been driven by the Allies on the western front. Among these one is described as follows:

"An abomination of creased steel, looking more like one of the famous ceremonial kava bowls of the Samoans than anything else I have ever seen, has evidently been manufactured in considerable quantities for no other purpose than to furnish unpleasant surprises to precipitate Tommies. The latter have nicknamed it the "tortoise," and until they learned that, like its slow moving animal prototype, it was unsafe to take liberties with, several of them paid the penalty of their curiosity by being injured when it blew up as a consequence of their friendly prods of investigation. In that its very strangeness of appearance invites attention the "tortoise" is like the famous Trojan horse, and the consequences of investigation are likewise dangerous.

"The least touch of the wobbly thing established a contact, doubtless through fulminate of mercury, on the same principle as employed in the floating mine, which detonated 20 or 30 pounds of explosive with a force that shattered the thick steel shell—creased as it was like the casting of a hand grenade—and scattered the fragments over a wide area. The menace of the tortoise was over as soon as Tommy learned to curb his curiosity. On my visit to a collecting depot I was allowed to 'play' with one of them, from which the 'teeth' had been drawn, and I must confess that the weird roly-poly thing might well exercise considerable fascination upon one encountering it for the first time. One feels that he simply has to go up and give it a shove with the toe of his boot, just to watch it wobble, the very action calculated to make it 'put up back' and 'fly to pieces.'

"The usefulness of the tortoise was over just as soon as the wary Tommy ceased stroking its back with his bayonet and instead began hailing its appearance with hand grenades hurled from a respectful distance, and the wily Teuton was forced to rack his brain to devise still deeper subtlety."

Man Should Show Gratitude To God For His Providence

The Theme of Rev. J. A. Elliott' Sermon at All Saints' Harvest Festival Last Night—Some Men Feel Their Success Comes Solely From Their Own Efforts.

AN IMPRESSIVE SERVICE

The sublime service of harvest thanksgiving at All Saints' church last night united the large congregation in an impressive prayer of praise and gratitude to God for the abundant crops the past season has produced under His providence.

In the simple decorations befitting the occasion there was an insinuating reminder of the fields and gardens that have yielded up their fruits with lavish hand at a time when the world's stores have rarely been so depleted. Miniature sheaves of grain, brightened with the green leaves and the red berries of the mountain ash marked the pews, and the lights on the side walls assumed a new and softer radiance as they animated the varied colours of the autumn foliage that was wreathed about them. Tall corn stalks with flying pennants called up scenes of luxuriant growth, a symbol of a harvest which in its richness will not soon be forgotten. And in the chancel the late flowers, tastefully arranged, offered an incense the more useful produce could not give. Under these visual influences the words of the 104th psalm, "The earth is full of Thy riches," rang with reality. The spirit of the harvest was a real presence that inspired the service with a lively feeling of gratitude beautifully expressed in the hymns, the prayers and the sermon. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. B. Grobb, and Rev. James A. Elliott, M.A., of Port Hope, preached the sermon which was particularly appropriate to the festival.

"The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved," Jeremiah, 8:20. Once a year, by a proclamation of the Governor-General, we are called upon as a people to lift our hearts in thankfulness for the completion of another harvest. In doing so we are brought to realize that another summer is ended, and the question comes to us whether we are progressing or not along the path that leads to salvation. Jeremiah had to say many unpalatable things and to denounce the mistakes of his people. Regarded as a soured pessimist he was really an optimist about the power to save them if they would but look in the right direction and to the proper sources. One would imagine that the business man who had prospered in his affairs and the farmer with his crops would be grateful to God who had so arranged the world that these things had come about in so wonderful a way. But in the heart of unregenerate man there is often a feeling that his success has been due to his own efforts, to his diligence and to his labour. But the vast multitude of people have a sense of gratitude to God and a growing appreciation of the spirit universe. When man accomplishes great achievements in science there is a sense of awe of man's approach to God. To-day men are pushing science further and further and there is a consciousness of the wisdom and love of God behind these things. It is recognized that they existed all the time, but had they been given to us they would not have been appreciated. The better way seems to be through our own progress and the partnership we thus form with God.

The recent weather that accompanied the passing summer is more keenly appreciated by the remembrance of the changes of heat and cold, cloud and storm of the past year. In a similar manner our hopes and fears, our alterations of tribulations and comforts, of failure and success, bring us to deeper dependence upon God and awaken stronger feelings of gratitude.

THE LITTLE SAVINGS OF FOOD MAKE THE LARGE ECONOMY

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—How small quantities of food, saved daily in a household, will produce an enormous total when all of Canada is considered, is the subject of some interesting calculation made by Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour.

"A half an ounce of butter," said the Minister to-day, "is what you would put on the end of your knife, yet the daily saving of that quantity would total up 45,625 tons of butter in all Canada in a year. At 50 cents a pound, this would amount to $45,625,000.

"Take sugar as another example. Saving by each individual of half an ounce of sugar a day would amount in a year to $9,000,000 on the basis of 10 cents a pound. Saving half an ounce of tea per day at 40 cents a pound would save $36,000,000, and the same with coffee which is at the same price.

"The consumption per individual of 20 pounds of coarse flour per year would make available for export to the allies 160,000,000 pounds of white flour, or 800,000 barrels more than we are sending now."

NERVOUS TROUBLE

The nerve system is the governing system of the whole body, controlling the heart, lungs, digestion and brain; so it is not surprising that nervous disturbances should cause acute distress. The first stages of nervous debility are noted by irritability and restlessness, in which the victims seem to be oppressed by their nerves. The matter requires immediate attention for nothing but suitable treatment will prevent a complete break-down. The victim, however, need not despair for even severe nervous disorders may be cured by improving the condition of the blood. It is because Dr. Williams Pink Pills actually make new, rich blood that this medicine has cured extreme nervous disorders after all other treatment had failed. The nerves thrive on the new blood made by these pills; the appetite improves, digestion is better, sleeplessness no longer troubles the former nerve shattered victim and life generally takes on a cheerful aspect. Every sufferer from nerve troubles, no matter how slight, should lose no time in giving Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, thus regaining their old-time health and comfort.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pil's through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Secretary's Remarks.

The objects and aims of the Association was referred to in the following remarks by Mrs. Agnes Douglas, general secretary:

His Majesty King George V., writing of the Young Men's Christian Association, says: "A powerful agency for the development of the religious, social and physical well-being of the nation's youth." As the Y.M.C.A. and the Young Women's Christian Association stand side by side for the highest developments of manhood and womanhood we may include the worth of the Y.W.C.A. in this statement of our King. The social and religious work are closely related in the Y.W.C.A. The personal interest of the board members, members and secretaries in meeting those whom they seek to interest, is the key which opens the door to all the activities for promoting helpfulness and growth into higher living.

Lord Derby has also said, in speaking of the association: "The association is invaluable in peace time. It is indispensible in war time." Never before in the history of the world has there been greater need of a strong, true, pure manhood and womanhood. And any work which helps to make life truer and better is a place of God—"God has a place for every human life."

"God plans like lilies pure and white unfold,
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart,
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold."

Therefore the fourfold aim of the Y.W.C.A. is but a channel to be used by God to develop your womanhood until God's great plan for each life is perfected. True, the association is given to human minds to plan and human hands to handle. And often there may be the lack of the larger vision as to needs and possibilities, however back of all is what the association stands for. To this the end, there is the community and the association each giving and receiving. The association receives from the community membership contributions, voluntary service, moral support. The association contributes Bible classes, social clubs, physical work, gymnasium, swimming pool, first-aid, home nursing classes, literature club, library, our boarding house. In all, a better womanhood. And, at the beginning of our work for 1917-1918, filled as it will be with privilege and opportunity, may each department be welded into a perfect whole. May each member of the board, committees, voluntary workers, members, secretaries, and all who are interested in this work, not forget that any bit of service is not too small or undertaking too large. May we go forward into the new year with a larger vision and a stronger faith.

The development of this four-fold life, and the building of character, will be the object of various Girls' Clubs to be formed.

BUSINESS COLLEGE NIGHT CLASSES

The Peterborough Business College announces that evening classes will be commenced on Wednesday evening next, October 3rd. These classes will consist principally of such studies as will prepare students for a commercial and business training, and include arithmetic, book-keeping, Shorthand, Penmanship and Type Writing. The value of these night classes in the past have been greatly appreciated by young men and young women who are now occupying well-worth positons. There are just as many good positions to-day waiting to be filled and perhaps more than ever and business men are looking for Business College graduates, because they know they are proficient in their work. Never were salaries so high or opportunities so inviting.

FARMING WEST NOT TROUBLED

No Fear Expressed of Intensified Shortage of Labour After the Draft is in Operation

OTTAWA, Sept. 29. — Reports reaching here from the agricultural districts in Western Canada indicate that no trouble is anticipated from intensified labour problems as a result of the operation of the Military Service Act. Experience at the time of the harvest this year, when sufficient labour was supplied through the co-operation of many patriotic forces in addition to the regular supply, has caused the farmers to view the prospect with complacence.

In the first years of the war, a large number of farmers left the land to join the armies. The exodus was led by the large number of men from the Old Country who had taken up farms in the West. The operation of the Exemption Boards under the Military Service Act will tend to prevent any serious withdrawal of farmers or their assistants in future, as agriculture is one of the industries which will be given particular care.

Since Western Canada is intensely democratic in its political views, the sharing of military burdens under the Military Service Act meets with wide approval. The scope permitted Exemption Boards in their dealings with individual cases is nevertheless admitted to be necessary in the highest interests of the country. A-4

BREAD CAST ON THE WATERS RETURNS AFTER MANY DAYS

A MESSAGE OF HOPE.

If there is one lesson more than another that social workers should learn, it is to maintain their faith in the troublesome boy, and never give up in their determination to pull him safely through the unsettled, wayward years of adolescence. With faith and perseverance the ultimate reward is certain, even though we may never know in actual experience of the reformation and steady life.—(See Gal. vi. 9.)

The following letter is from a young fellow lost sight of years ago. At that time he was constantly being arrested for one offence after another, and was apparently indifferent to the efforts made to help him. In fact to many it all seemed like a foolish waste of enthusiasm to have further confidence in him—but was it?

Somewhere in Flanders,
Jan. 5th, 1916.

Mr. J. J. Kelso,
Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sir:

No doubt you will have by this time forgotten that I ever existed, but this letter will prove different; hoping you will not be offended at my apparent boldness in writing to you. But I could not resist the temptation to tell you something about myself. You will probably be surprised to hear that I am here in France fighting for my country along with the rest of the boys. Believe me, sir, when I say that I have not forgotten your kindness in the past, nor shall I ever forget it. Sir, without your kindness and ability for helping young boys who went astray, I would not have been here a free man to-day, and be able to hold up my head and say I am an honest man, and were I to walk in on you some day you would never be able to recognize me in the least. I have grown and changed a great deal. The air, in fact, the climate in general agrees with me. The circumstances here are a great deal different than those at home, living in a dug-out, out in all kinds of weather, and constantly under heavy shell and rifle fire. But I would sooner face shrapnel than a great many things I could mention in Canada and elsewhere. It is jolly fun doing the shrapnel glide when you hurry out of the road of one heavy shell into another. Well, I must stop writing, but would be pleased if you will write me.

Your obedient servant,
Corp. ——,
—— Can. Brigade.

WOMEN DOCTORS FOR THE FRONT

Services of New York Detachment Accepted by French Government

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The day of the woman army surgeon is dawning in the opinion of Dr. Carolina Finley, of New York, who will lead the first detachment of women doctors to go from America to the front. This unit of women surgeons and assistants is nearly one hundred strong. The French government has accepted its services, as the United States was unable to do so. There is not a man in it, mechanics, chaffeurs, plumbers and electricians all are women. The ranks of the women doctors include many specialists, also dentists, and the party has 41 nurses.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—There was no evidence of any nature taken at this morning's session of the milk probe, the entire business of the session being the formulation of plans to obtain the necessary fundamental and statistical data to work upon. Particular attention will be paid to getting accurate information for a period of 1912-1917, regarding the producers', wholesalers' and retailers' costs and profits. It will also be determined if it is feasible to set price for Canada, or for zones in the Dominion for the production and wholesale and retail distribution of milk.

Skin Without Wrinkles Now Easy To Have

There's no excuse for any woman having wrinkles now. It has been found that a simple mixture of saxolite and witch hazel has a remarkable action upon the deepest wrinkles, no matter what their nature, whether caused by worry, habitual frowning, a debilitated condition or the ravages of Father Time. This harmless remedy, which anyone can easily make and use at home, acts both as an astringent and a tonic. The combined effect of tightening the skin and heightening its vitality is to immediately effect every line and wrinkle, keeping the cuticle smooth and firm as in youth.

The proportions are one ounce saxolite (powdered) to one-half pint witch hazel, ingredients which are found in every drugstore. The solution should be used as a wash lotion. It is equally effective in disposing of flabbiness of cheek and neck, as well as sagging below the eyes.

Rev. Canon Cornish Returns To St. John's

The Church Wardens of St. John's have received from Rev. Canon Cornish, Yorkton, Sask., a letter of acceptance of the invitation to assume the incumbency of the parish of St. John's during the war. He is expected to reach Peterborough about October 15th.

This will be very pleasant hearing for the congregation of St. John's, who will welcome back Canon Cornish with grateful memories, of his ministrations and personality during his former stay with them.

The community in general will also welcome to the ranks of our citizenship again a gentleman of so much strength of character, and so high a spirit of, and capacity for, patriotic service.

LIZA OF CHARING CROSS

By C. DAVID STELLING

If you enter Charing Cross Station at any time of the day by the gate nearest to Trafalgar Square, you will be assailed by a bevy of flower-girls inviting you to buy their wares. "Penny a bunch deffydils," cries Bridget, thrusting about half a dozen bunches under your nose, with intent to delude you that you can acquire the lot for a single copper. "Carnytions a penny each," shrills Liza, displaying her choicest blooms, which are only obtainable at a ance. And so on. You will have to run the gauntlet of the whole fragrant platoon before you can pass through the gates.

Liza is my special favourite. You must not think of the London flower-girl in terms of the musical comedy stage. She is not as a rule arrayed in 3-inch-heeled shoes, a gaudy-coloured striped silk skirt that reveals an alluring length of openwork silk stockings. She does not usually wear a large picture hat designed in Paris nor was her shawl imported from Spain. Nor in fact is she in the strict chronological sense of the word a girl. The flower-girls of London were mostly born middle-aged, it seems, and generally on the western side of the Irish Channel. I don't know why this should be. I merely record the fact parenthetically.

Liza is no exception to the rule She is elderly and obese loud-voiced and red-haired, and her language a pinch would make a sergeant-major blush. I have not the pleasure of her personal acquaintance, at least not to any intimate extent, but I know her fairly well by sight and by sound. She is a permanent inhabitant of a certain square yard of pavement by the station gate, and I have passed her every day for several weeks. I cannot even claim to be one of her customers, for the rules of the service do not permit me to wear bunches of daffodils in my uniform or carnations in my Sam Browne. So I have known her, until quite recently, only casually.

The whole spirit of outdoor Cockneydom is in the flower-girls of London, the same cheery, ironical spirit that has carried the boys of the London battalions through two or three years of dreary trench warfare and brought them smiling up to the attack every time. But it is a hard life, a gamble at the mercy of the fickle caprices of London weather. The sun is the chief ally of these drab-shawled women whose livelihood depends on the passing mood of the passer-by, yet, rain or shine, they persist in their trade, exchanging bandinage with each other and with their customers. It is hard to believe that the wear and tear of their life could leave them much in the way of the ordinary human sympathies, they see too much, they hear too much, they know too much, they suffer too much. I had come to look upon Liza as a hardly-humanapathetic deposit of the seamy side of life in the vortex of London. But I was wrong.

Every day at a varying hour there gathers round the exit of Charing Cross a little crowd of men and women who wait. They wait to welcome back home those who have been struck down in the battlefields of France. There is nothing more pathetic than the long string of ambulances that crawl out each evening through the archway going ever so slowly so as to avoid aggravating the suffering of their stricken human burdens. There is pathos in the sight, but there is also joy, an inffably tender joy that catches one at the throat and brings mist to the eyes. For these boys who lie on the stretchers in the Red Cross cars are at the end of the journey that they must have yearned for, oh! so often, in the still watches of the night over beyond. They are home, home in Blighty, home in dear old, dirty old, ugly old London. And here are the people, their people, standing there and cheering them as though they were a lot of blinking 'eroes, instead of being more ordinary blokes like themselves.

Some of them can sit up, leaning on an elbow. All of them can smoke the woodbine that a kind soul has stuck into their mouths for them. And nearly all of them can hear the crowd cheering them in welcome. Oh, but it's good to be home again, even though there's a hole in your thigh the size of a cricket ball, even though you have got a leg less, or an arm less, than what you started out with.

Here is a long grey ambulance, the gift, as its inscription records, of the members of the Baltic Exchange: it rolls gently down the incline, and when we can see inside it from behind, we are astonished to meet the sight of gleaming bayonets. Behind the armed guards are the smiling faces of German boy prisoners. The hum of the crowd ceases suddenly; they stare and say nothing. It is rather a shock to find wounded Boches in the ambulances provided for our men.

Thoughts of Wittenberg and Gardelegen leap to the mind and one wonders if our boys are so well treated on their journey to a German hospital that they can have the heart to grin at the crowd.

Here is another of those slow-rolling cars. On an upper stretcher sits a laughing Tommy. His foot is bandaged and in a splint. An Australian slouched-hatted, steps out of the crowd. "Cheero, lad," he says, and the smiling Tommy waves the roses that someone has thrown in to him. There is none of them who does not receive a flower that tender-hearted women—aye, and men too—throw into the car. They are amply repaid by the grateful smiles of those who come out in the ambulances.

Liza goes among the crowd, seeking to sell her flowers. She finds many customers. Probably she would find it easy to dispose of the rest of her day's wares. But she seems to have no keen desire to do business. There is a woman's heart beating under that frowsty old shawl of hers.

An ambulance glides down through the archway at slower even than the ordinary pace. Liza peers inside as it passes her.

It contains a nursing sister and only one man, evidently a serious case. What is a trade compared with all that this poor bandaged fellow represents? Liza does not stop to reckon it out. She runs down the incline after the car and out into the Strand, flinging her roses, the source of her livelihood, one by one into the ambulance. The nurse gathers them up and hands them, smiling with dewy eyes, to her charge, who takes them gratefully, pressing them gratefully to his nostrils. He cannot rise up to wave his thanks, but there is no doubt of his appreciation. A faint smile rewards Liza, bless her heart, for her impulse. Possibly she, too, has a son over there in France. I should not be at all surprised.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

Observe immediately after the heavens were opened to him, and the Spirit descened on him, and he was declared to be the Son of God, and the Saviour of the world, he is tempted. Great privileges and especially tokens of divine favor will not secure us from being tempted.

The assurance of our sonship is the best preparation for temptation. If the Holy Spirit witness to our adoption that will furnish an answer to all the suggestions of the evil one. He was directed to the combat; our care must be not to enter into temptation. If we presume upon our own strength and tempt the devil to tempt us, we provoke God to leave us to ourselves, but whithersoever God leads us we may hope he will go along with us.

Christ was led to be tempted of the Devil only. Others are tempted when they are drawn aside of their own lusts and enticed. James 1:14. But our Lord Jesus had a pure nature, therefore he was led as a champion into the field to be tempted by the Devil. Now, Christ's temptation is an instance of his own condescension, and humiliation, an occasion of Satan's confusion, and a matter of comfort to all saints. In the temptation of Christ it appears tha our enemy is subtle, spiteful and very daring in his temptation, but it appears that withal, he is not invincible. It is a comfort to us that Christ suffered being tempted, for thus it appears that temptations if not yielded to are not sins, they are afflictions only and may be the lot of those with whom God is well pleased. And we have a High Priest who knows by experience what it is to be tempted; who is therefore the more tenderly touched with the feelings of our infirmities in an hour of temptation. Heb. 2:18; 4:15. But it is much more a comfort to think that Christ conquered being tempted and conquered for us. Christ needed not to fast—he had no corrupt desires to be subdued, yet he fasted, that he might give Satan both occasion and advantage against him, and so make his victory over him the more illustrious; also that he might sanctify and recommend fasting to us when we are reduced to straights and are destitute of daily food or when it is requisite for keeping under the body, or quickenning the soul in prayer. When he was fasting forty days he was not hungrynot hungry; converse with heaven was instead meat and drink to him; but he was afterward an hungered; to show that he was really and truly a man, and he took upon him our infirmities, that he might atone for us. What Satan aimed at in all his temptations was to bring Christ to sin against God, so to render him forever incapable of being a sacrifice for the sin of others.

1st. He tempted him to despair of his Father's goodness and to distrust his Father's care concerning him. The devil is the tempter and therefore he is Satan, an adversary, for those are our worst enemies who entice us to sin. The tempter came to Christ in a visible appearance, not terrible and affrighting as afterwards in his agony in the garden. Satan is most dangerous when most plausible. Christ began to be hungry. Satan did not urge him to create a feast for indulgence but to turn a stone into a loaf for necessity.

It is one of the wiles of Satan to take advantage of our outward condition; and the more ingenious he is to take advantage against us the more industrious we must be to give him none. Those who are reduced to straits have need to double their guard. Christ was lately declared to be the Son of God, and here the devil tempts him to doubt of that. Had not the devil known that Christ was to come into the world, he would not have said this; nor durst he have said it, if Christ had not drawn a veil over his glory.

Outward afflictions are the great arguments Satan uses to make the people of God question their sonship; as if afflictions could not consist with God's fatherly love, when really they proceed therefrom. The devil aims to shake our faith in the word of God, and to bring us to question its truth. He says: Thou has now an opportunity to show that thou art the Son of God; command it to be done. The devil is for nothing that is humbling; and he gains his point if he can but bring men from dependence upon God and fill them with an opinion of their own self-sufficiency. See how this temptation was resisted and overcome. Christ's power, which soon after turned water into wine, could have turned stones into bread; but he would not. It would have been distrusting his Father's care of him, and gratifying Satan by doing a thing at his request.

Christ answered all the temptations of Satan with: It is written. He is himself the Eternal Word, and could have produced the mind of God without having recourse to the writings of Moses, but he put honour upon the Scriptures, and to set us an example he appealed to what was written in the law.

This method we must take when at any time we are tempted to sin, resist and repel the temptation with: It is written. The Word of God is the Sword of the Spirit—the only offensive weapon in all the Christian armoury. Eph. 6:17. And we may say of it in our spiritual conflicts as David of Goliath's sword, None is like that. Christ as a man was bound to obey the whole law; everything which would have been the least sinful for us in like circumstances, would have been inconsistent with the very end of his coming into the world. It is true God in his providence ordinarily maintains men by bread out of the earth. Job 28:5, but he can if he pleases make use of other means to keep men alive; anything that God shall order and appoint will be as good a livelihood for man as bread; as in our great abundance we must not think to live without God so in our greatest straits we must learn to live upon God, and when all ordinary means of succor and support are cut off, yet then we must not think to command what we will, but must humbly pray for what he thinks fit to give us, and be thankful. Let us learn not to take any irregular courses for our supply, when our wants are ever so pressing—in some way or other the Lord will provide.

2nd. Satan tempted Christ to presume upon his Father's power and protection. Finding him so confident of his Father's care in point of nourishment he endeavors to draw him to presume upon that care in point of safety. We are in danger both on the right ahnd and on the left, and therefore must take heed, lest when we avoid one extreme we are brought by the artifices of Satan to run into another. Nor are any extremes more dangerous than despair and presumption—especially in the affairs of our souls. He took Christ, not by force and against his will, but moved him to go, and went with him.

Now observe how submissive Christ was, in suffering himself to be hurried thus, that he might let Satan do his worst, and yet conquer him.

How comforting is it that Christ who let loose this power of Satan against himself, does not in like manner let it loose against us, but restrains it for he knows our frame. How subtle the devil was in the choice of the place for his temptations! Intending to solicit Christ to ostentation of his own power and vain glorious presumption upon God's providence, he places him upon the temple. There he might make himself remarkable and prove himself the Son of God, not as he was urged in the former temptation in the obscurity of a wilderness, but before multitudes.

Jerusalem is here called the Holy City, for so it was in name and profession. But there is no city on earth so holy as to exempt and secure us from the devil and his temptations. Satan has no objection to holy places as the scene of his assaults. Let us not in any place be off our guard. Nay; the holy city is the place where he does with the greatest advantage and success tempt men to pride and presumption, but blessed be God, into the Jerusalem above, that holy city, we shall ever be out of temptation.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

"Billy" Batten's Annual Excursion

Mr. Wm. Batten's annual excursion from Lakefield to the Bobcaygeon Fair was held yesterday and as usual proved one of the most successful outings of the year. The steamer Stoney Lake left Lakefield at 7.15 o'clock and passengers were picked up at Young's Point, McCracken's Landing, Mt. Julian, Burleigh Falls, Buckhorn and Islina. Under the management of the genial William the arrangements were splendid. There was plenty of music for dancing and it is needless to say there were a few friendly games of euchre en route. Several Peterboro' people took in the excursion and there would have been more had it not been for the fact that it was impossible to make train connections in the morning.

TORONTO, Sept. 29.—The Appellate Division dismissed with costs the appeal of the Canada Foundry Company from a recent judgment in the Non-jury Court, by which Henry Hope and Sons were awarded $1,220 damages for cancelation of a contract. Peter Lyall and Co. were erecting a large hotel in a western city some time ago, and sublet a contract to the Canada Foundry Company for steel window frames. The Foundry Company in turn let the contract to Henry Hope and Sons. The sashes were not procured in time to enable Peter Lyall and Company to use them, and they accordingly canceled their contract with the Canada Foundry Company. That company conceled its contract with Hope and Sons. When the case came to trial the plaintiffs pleaded that the frames were of special design, that they were obliged to have them made in the factory in England, and that this accounted for the fact that delivery had not been made at an earlier date. They were awarded $1,220 damages.

POTATOES $1.35.

Big Market of Vegetables and Late Fruit This Morning.

Potatoes were weak at $1.40 this morning, and in spite of the bolstering efforts of the farmers and gardeners it dropped to $1.35, and should recede further before it reaches the level that this year's crop suggests. Butter was from 46 to 48 cents and eggs were rather plentiful at 45c a dozen. Around eleven o'clock there was a large supply that seemed to be moving rather slowly. Vegetables were plentiful with a large outside market.

AMERICAN LEAGUE HAS BETTER RECORD

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The series between the Giants and White Sox, which will open at Chicago one week from to-morrow, will be the fourteenth clash for supremacy between pennant-winners of the National and American Leagues, A series arranged between the Boston Americans and the Pittsburg Nationals back in 1903 was the first inter-league championship battle.

The American League has forced recognition from the older organization but a short time before John T. Taylor hurled his challenge at Barney Dreyfuss for a championship series. Dreyfuss accepted the challenge. He was a loser, but he had paved the way to the big event which world's series have since become.

Then came a year wihout a series—the only break between 1903 and the present time. In 1904 Jimmy Collins again led his Boston team home in first place, and John McGraw won his first pennant as leader of the Giants. Naturally, the talk of another series sprang up, and the Boston club was anxious to defend its title of world's champions. After much deliberation, an announcement was made that the New York club would not play such a series. The late John T. Brush was then the directing spirit of the Giants, and he had not entirely forgotten the wounds inflicted by the American League during the baseball war. That fall the National Commission passed a rule making such a series between the major league pennant winners obigatory, and there has been no break since the 1904 season.

Of the thirteen series between the organizations the representatives of Ban Johnson's league have been victorious eight times and the National League representatives have been victorious five times. Since 1910 the American League has been a rather consistent winner. The victory of the Braves over the Athletics in 1914 in the only break in a string of American League successes since 1910. Six of the past seven series have resulted in victories for the American League.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—My letter of Thursday, suggesting that Mr. Burnham back up his public stateemnts by making the sacrifice which will prove his good faith, brings a reply from the Review which shows that any sacrifice which is to be made is to be made by Liberals only. Does Mr. Burnham, himself, endorse this position?

In an editorial in last night's issue of the Review it is stated that Mr. Burnham's "record is an open book." It is. This is the record as I find it He supported a government which with the object of winning the war (1) Grossly neglected the work of recruiting and left it almost entirely to local organizations; (2), Squandered hundreds of thousands of dollars by wantonly neglecting to handle the matter of recruiting in a systematic fashion; (3) Stubbornly and wilfully refused to take the very measures necessary to procure the enlistment of men in Quebec; (4) wasted nearly three years before introducing methods for economizing food; (5) Allowed profiteering and cornering by men in high places in an open and shameless manner; (6) Handed over millions of dollars to the financiers behind the Canadian Northern Railway.

I also find a further record: I find that the very man who is now soliciting the support of Liberals in West Peterborough on the plea that the element of party politics should not prevail in war time, supported a government which (1) introduced such a radical measure as conscription without consulting the Liberal leader; (2) Crammed the Senate with Conservatives while holding out the olive branch to Liberals; (3) Forced a measure of disenfranchisement through parliament by means of the closure, framed for the express purpose of returning the Conservatives to power.

As I stated in my last letter, does Mr. Burnham think it humanly possible for him to receive any Liberal support when he is looked upon as the embodiment of everything done and undone by the present Conservative government. If he is really sincere in his present attitude he will see that the first step to win-the-war unity in this riding must be his resignation as candidate for the Conservative party. Otherwise, the only conclusion which can be reached is that Mr. Burnham's plea for unity is a political dodge intended to gain a few Liberal votes. He has the chance to prove himself a patriot rather than a politician. Will he do it?

Yours truly,
WIN-THE-WAR LIBERAL

Postman Bitten By A Dog---By-law Still In Force

Mr. Tom Darrell, postman, was bitten this morning by a dog owned by Alfred Gill, 220 Munro avenue, Ashburnham. This attack called forth a reminder from Chief Thompson that the dog by-law has not been rescinded and that dogs must be tied up except when they are taken out on a leash. In this exception they must be muzzled. It is hoped that this fact will be clearly understood for the reason that the rabies epidemic has not yet been stamped out.

Mr. Gill's dog will likely lead him to the police court.

Boys Fined $10 For Breaking A Lamp

Three Elm street boys about seventeen years old were fined $10 this morning for breaking a street lamp on Sunday, September 9th. This is regarded as a serious offense by the authorities who promise no lenience in future cases.

This morning's $10 fine was made up by the three youths who must have been impressed by the Magistrate's warning.

CAN'T SEVER RELATIONS

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 28.—President Irigoyen is preparing a message in reply to the request made by Congress that the diplomatic relations between Argentina and Germany be broken. The President, it is understood, contends that it is impossible to break off relations with Germany because of the Count von Luxburg incident, the Government considering this affair to have been adjusted by the German Foreign office's explanation.

Strikers to-day wrecked a milk train as it was approaching the capital. Five soldiers on guard on the locomotive were injured. As a result no further attempts will be made to bring food supplies into Buenos Aires until the railroad strike has been settled.

Caring for Jewelry

Plain gold brooches, rings, bracelets and chains may be cleaned easily, by washing them in a lather, made by a good, pure, white soap and warm water. Be sure to dry them well, then rub them gently with a piece of chamois skin. That will polish them.

Never put pearls in water, as it is quite likely to darken them. And the same applies to turquoises; water is not at all good for them.

If you get your diamond ring very dirty, you may wash it carefully in good white soap suds, but be sure to dry it carefully and polish it gently with chamois.

One thing that is wise for every woman to keep in her room is a Jewel Box, for holding her Jewelry. We show various designs, engraved and plain, inexpensively priced.

WEDDING BELLS

BACKUS—MERRILL.

An Edmonton Exchange says:

An autumn wedding of more than usual interest took place at McDougall Methodist Church on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, when Verna Henrietta Edna, youngest daughter of Mrs. E. J. Merrill, 9832 89th avenue, was married to Percy Lavern Backus, youngest son of Rev. Geo. H. and Mrs. Backus of Edgerton, Alta. The groom is a graduate of the University of Alberta. The Rev. A. S. Tuttle performed the ceremony assisted by the groom's father, who is the pastor of the Methodist Church at Edgerton. About a hundred guests had assembled when the bridal party entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Miss Edna Fowler. The bride was given away by her mother and was attended by her sister. The church was artistically decorated for the occasion with autumn foliage and cut flowers.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin and georgette crepe made in the Grecian style with seed pearl trimmings and was caught at the waist with a silver rope. An embroidered tulle veil worn in the Grecian mode was held in place with a silver band.

The bride carried a sheaf of handsome bronze 'mums tied with satin ribbon and wore the gift of the groom —a pearl and cameo necklace. The bridesmaid, Miss Myrtle Spray Merrill, was prettily attired in maize silk crepe de chine, the bodice of which was trimmed with pearl sequin and embroidered motifs, having the draped skirt, and flowing sleeves. She carried flame coloured sweet peas tied with maize chiffon. Mrs. E. J. Merrill wore handsome toilette of pearl grey georgette crepe with grey satin girdle and lavender trimmings. Mr. Walter Peterson supported the groom. The ushers were Mr. W. H. Kelcher and Mr. R. S. Illsley.

During the signing of the register Miss Fowler played the bridal chorus. After the ceremony the bridal party and guests repaired to the bride's home, where a reception was held. The drawing room was daintily decorated with pink and white sweet peas and asters. Escholtzias and 'mums were used in the dining room and a basket bouquet of yellow 'mums resting on a mirror base centred the table. Mrs. J. A. Harrison poured tea and Mrs. Sim of High River, sister of the groom, cut the ices, assisted by Miss Minerva Johnston, Miss Edna Fowler, Miss Edna Cardwell and Miss Myrtle Merrill.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a cameo ring, to the groomsman gold cuff links, the ushers received pearl handled pen knives and to the organist a bunch of gorgeous Taft roses. Many handsome and useful gifts testified to the popularity of the newly weds.

The bride's going-away costume was of blue French corded silk with sand trimmings and a black hat with ornament and osprey completed a smart toilette. Mr. and Mrs. Backus left on the 10.30 train via the Great Lakes and Thousand Islands for Montreal, where the groom will take up his medical course.

OBITUARY

MARCELLA CONROY.

The death occurred on Friday of Marcella Conroy, the seven-months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Conroy, 547 Concession street. The funeral was held this afternoon to St. Peter's cemetery.

Will Appoint Many Officials For Elections

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.— Certain preparatory work necessitated by the fact that Canada is to have an election under new statutes or the War-Time Elections Act and the Military Voters' Act is now being begun in the State Department and the office of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery. An assistant clerk of the Crown in Chancery will be named without delay and will shortly proceed to Great Britain with instructions to divide the camps in England and Scotland into districts and arrange for the naming of a presiding officer for each and for leave of absence from duty for such officials in order that they may perform their functions. A general returning officer to collate the results of the voting at home and abroad and announce the result at Ottawa has also to be named. A returning officer and an enumerator have also to be selected for every constituency in Canada. The Government will appoint the returning officers and the latter will, in all probability, select the enumerators. Chairmen of the Boards of Appeal for Ontario and revising officers for counties in Nova Scotia have to be chosen.

In accordance with the terms of the Military Voters' Act, six scrutineers and some forty special returning officers will be appointed, half nominated in each case by Sir Robert Borden and half by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The scrutineers will be empowered to name deputy scrutineers. The special returning officers will be found in Canada and sent overseas. It will be their duty to take from the bags which will serve as ballot-boxes at military polling places the ballots enclosed in envelopes, place them in ballot-boxes for the constituencies to which they belong and thirty-one days after polling in Canada count them. As these officials will have to have knowledge of various localties to guide them in allocating the ballots to the rich ridings they will be taken from various parts of Canada, and it has been suggested that they should be senior officials of post-offices. They will do their work in the office of the Canadian High Commissioner in London and that of the Commissioner in Paris. To assist them charts of the 232 constituencies in Canada will be prepared and sent overseas. Military ballots cast in Canada and Bermuda will be counted under the supervision of the general returning officer in Ottawa.

Locked bags with metal slits to be used in military and naval polls overseas, will be made in Britain to save time and cost of transportation from Canada. Ballots for the military voters will be printed abroad.

Books for enumerators for use in preparing their lists have to be made and necessary forms have to be printed by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery. Ballots for the use of civilian electors are printed under orders placed by returning officers in each riding, on paper supplied by the Government. Poll books have to be prepared by returning officers and finally the writs of election have to be made ready for issue.

It is estimated that three weeks will be required for the preparations previous to the issue of the writs. Seven weeks will be necessary for work to be carried out between the issue of the writs and the polling in constituencies in Canada other than the Yukon. In the Yukon some thirteen vessels will be required between the issue of the writ and voting day.

Fathers-in-Law Send Fifty Men Into U.S. Army

TOPEKA, Kas.—It is the father-in-law, instead of the mother-in-law, who is now unpopular with some fifty Kansas men selected for the national army. And paradoxically, the wealthier the father-in-law the more unpopular he is.

Because it has been shown that the wife's father is alive and financially able to support his married daughter while husband is busy with intrenching tools and army rifles, fifty exemption appeals have been denied by the district appeal board.

FIFTY MEN SEEK ESCAPE.

Fifty young Kansas benedicks tearfully wrote that certification would mean that the family larder would be as bare of food as though a German army has retreated through it. They carefully avoided all mention of father-in-law with bank accounts.

In a few cases they got by with it—for a time.

But only for a time, as daily, via "the underground route," the appeal board received information about appellants which the latter, of course, by oversight, omitted from their information. Government inspectors are actively on the job. The local boards are not amateurish at detecting unrevealed means of support and from many unofficial sources comes information, which, when verified by inspectors, proves aid to just decisions by the board.

CLAIMS OF TWO DENIED

If there is a prosperous father-in-law in the bushes, the betting is dollars to doughnuts that the appeal board will get a line on him.

The exemption of John Edward Phrang and Charles Earl Shumaker, both of Wetmore, were recalled because of information received via 'the route.' Both men claimed they owned farms which they alone could till. It was shown that Phrang's father was wealthy and that his farm and live-stock were really owned by his father. Shumaker's exemption was recalled for similar reasons.

"One Meatless Meal a Day" is a good food slogan for war time, or any time—better make it two meatless meals a day—it would mean health and strength for the nation. But be sure and get the right substitute for meat in a digestible form. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the ideal substitute for meat. It is 100 per cent. whole wheat prepared in a digestible form. Two or three of these little loaves of baked whole wheat make a nourishing, satisfying meal at a cost of only a few cents. Delicious with milk or cream or fruits of any kind.

Bombs were dropped on north-east and south-east districts and various places in Kent and Essex. Eleven killed and eighty-two injured in the air raid on London. The material damage was light.

FIVE AIR RAIDS.

LONDON, Oct. 1. — Five raids on London in seven days. Several German planes brought down. British casualties were light.

MACHINE INTERNED.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 1.—German airplane descended in Zeeland. One of the three passengers was severely wounded. Two unwounded passengers were interned. The machine was armed with three machine guns and had six bombs aboard.

MADE A RAID.

LONDON, Oct. 1.— Navail aircraft made a raid Thursday on the south-western side of Beirut harbour. Several fires started. All our machines returned safely.

Dissolution Could Come Automatically

But Proclamation Is Likely to Issue Before Oct. 7th—How Our Parliament Is Dissolved

On October 7th the Dominion Parliament would dissolve automatically by effluxion of time. If so, it would be for the first time. But, in all probability, it would be dissolved by proclamation, as was done in 1896.

The procedure of dissolution will interest everyone at this time. The proclamation dissolving Parliament is issued by the Governor-General in the name of the King. The one issued on July 29, 1911 (beginning with the customary "George the Fifth," etc.), proceeded: "To our beloved and faithful the Senators of the Dominion of Canada, and the members elected to serve in the House of Commons of our said Dominion, and to all whom it may concern, greeting. Whereas, we have thought fit, by and with the advice and consent of our Privy Council for Canada to dissolve the present Parliament of Canada which, stands prorogued to the 7th day of September next. Now know ye that we do for that end publish this our royal proclamation, and do hereby dissolve the said Parliament of Canada accordingly; and the Senators and the members of the House of Commons are discharged from their meeting and attendance on the said 7th day of September next. In testimony whereof, etc."

On the same day that he dissolved Parliament the Governor-General issued another proclamation, saying: "Whereas we are desirous and resolved, as soon as may be, to meet our people of our Dominion of Canada, and to have their advice in Parliament; we do make known our royal will and pleasure to call a Parliament, and do further declare that by the advice of our Privy Council for Canada, we have this day given orders for issuing our writs in due form for calling a Parliament in our said Dominion, which writs are to bear date on the 3rd day of August, 1911, and to be returnable on the 7th day of October, 1911." On the same day a third proclamation was issued summoning and calling together the House of Commons to meet at Ottawa on October 11th, "then and there to have conference and treaty with the great men and Senate of our said Dominion." The opening of Parliament was postponed to November 15th.

HOW CANADIANS WON HILL 70 OFFICIALLY NARRATED IN DETAIL

Casualties Inflicted on the Enemy "Quite Exceptionally Heavy"—Effective Use of Rifles

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—The Militia Department to-day gave out the following account of the brilliant achievements of the Canadian corps in the fighting around Lens:

Since the last report was written, the Canadian corps has added a new and very remarkable success to its long list of brilliant achievements. The formidably defended position known as Hill 70, covering the approaches to Lens from the north-west, which in September, 1915, played so large a part in the battle of Loos, has been carried by assault, and is now securely incorporated in our lines. The casualties inflicted on the enemy were quite exceptionally heavy. In addition, 1,378 prisoners, with a large number of machine guns and trench mortars, were captured by our troops. Four German divisions have been put out of action, and the divisions which have taken their places in the line have already suffered heavily.

Exhausting Foe Reserves.

Apart from the military value of the ground gained, such results represent no small addition to the growing strain imposed on the enemy by our offensive, and must contribute materially to the exhaustion of his reserves. Despite the enemy's assertions to the contrary, the casualties incurred by our troops on the 15th August, were light, largely as a result of measures taken to induce the enemy to distribute the fire of his artillery over areas outside the limits of our attack. Throughout the whole of the subsequent fighting the superiority of our artillery, and the courage and resource of our infantry have kept our losses within very moderate bounds.

Weather Interfered.

During the early part of the month the continual rain and wind made operations on a large scale impossible, but preparations for the attack were carried on steadily so far as conditions permitted, proceeding more rapidly as the weather gradually improved. Meanwhile our patrols displayed great activity, and in conjunction with small raids, frequently penetrated the German positions to a considerable depth. Bold daylight reconnaissances were made on several occasions, and much valuable information was obtained, while at a number of points our outpost line Bernstorff was asking his Governvanced.

August Fighting.

On the 4th and 5th of August in particular, small offensive patrols of two Canadian battalions pushed forward in daylight and succeeded in advancing our line some 200 yards on a frontage of about 1,000 yards north of the Souchez River. Such resistance as was met with was overcome, and considerable casualties were inflicted on the enemy's garrisons as they endeavoured to escape the defences further in the rear. On the night of the 6th-7th August the enemy made determined attacks on our o post line east of Cite Du Moulin, south-west of Lens. After a stiff resistance two of our posts were compelled to retire. This they did in good order, taking their casualties with them. On the night of the 8th-9th of August a small party, consisting of an officer and twenty men, surprised one of the enemy's outposts in Lens and, without loss to themselves, accounted for the whole garrison. Extensive land mines were blown by the enemy in front of this party, but our men again suffered no losses. Further progress was made in the same fashion on the 13th of August east of Cite St. Theodore.

Gained Important Ground.

The somewhat elastic state of the front in this area during the period produced a situation of great interest in which the troops holding the line fully shared. They readily adapted themselves to the somewhat abnormal conditions, and as a result of their individual skill and enterprise, gained important ground at exceedingly small cost.

Meanwhile, preparations for the principal attack had been completed and at 4.25 a.m. on the 15th August two Canadian divisions attacked the enemy's trench system on a front of 4,000 yards from the Lens-Bethune road northwards to Bois Hugo.

Our final objectives consisted of a line of German trenches which ran east of Cite Ste. Elizabeth and Cite St. Emile, then just west of the defences of Cite St. Auguste and east of Bois Rase. The greatest depth of our objectives from the old German front line was 1,500 yards. The southern half of the ground attacked was covered with the ruins of a group of mining suburbs of Lens, Cite Ste. Elizabeth, Cite Edouard, Cite St. Emile, and Cite St. Laurent. The northern half included the rising ground known as Hill 70, together with Bois Rase and the western portion of Bois Hugo. The whole was defended by an elaborate network of trenches and barbed wire, and studded with strong points and machine gun emplacements.

Hill 70 Stormed.

Our infantry attack, admirably supported by our artillery, was immediately successful. By 6.40 a.m. both divisions had captured the whole of the German front line system to a depth of some 500 yards, and were established on the line of their first objectives. After a short halt to enable the assaulting troops for the remainder of our objectives to pass through the attack was resumed. Hill 70 was carried by assault, and less than an hour later the whole of our objectives were in our hands, except for a short length of trench at the apex of our attack opposite Cite St. Auguste. Here our troops were held up within a short distance of the enemy's trench line by heavy machine gun fire from Cite St. Auguste and the brick fields at this southern end. The attack on this position was accordingly delayed until the German machine gun emplacements had been located and dealt with by our artillery.

German Attacks Fail.

Between 8 and 9 a.m. a series of counter-attacks were delivered by the enemy's local reserves east of Cite St. Emile. These were all driven off by rifle, machine gun and artillery fire. At mid-day a counter-attack developed from the north against the left flank of our attack. The enemy advanced across the open under intense fire, in which the neighbouring British division joined, and the attack collapsed with very heavy losses. An hour later two other counter-attacks in the neighbourhood of Sois Hugo and opposite Cite St. Auguste were similarly broken up.

During the morning the troops on the right of our attack made further progress and seized half a mile of German trench running from Cite St. Elizabeth to the Lens-Bethune road. At about 2 p.m. the enemy made a determined counter-attack and re-occupied this trench. Later in the afternoon it was again captured by us and linked up our positions further south, where in conjunction with the main attack patrols had pushed forward our outpost line west of Lens.

Firmly Established.

By this time the enemy had moved up the 4th Guard Division, which he had held in close reserve in the Lens area as a counter-attack division. Soon after 4 p.m. large bodies of German troops were seen assembling in the neighbourhood of the woods east of Bois Rase and were heavily shelled by our artillery. At about 5.30 p.m. these troops moved out across the open to counter-attack and were at once engaged by our infantry and artillery with such effect that the attack collapsed almost before it had begun. Other small counter-attacks were beaten off later in the evening, and when night fell our troops were firmly established in the whole of the positions they had gained.

On the following afternoon the remaining portion of our objectives west of Cite St. Auguste were attacked and captured. In the evening the enemy counter-attacked in great strength and momentarily regained his positions, but our troops returned to the assault and by midnight had re-established themselves on the line of their objectives.

Effective Rifle Fire.

By this attack the operation of the 15th August was successfully completed. During the following days and nights, indeed, the enemy made a number of other counter-attacks, but none of these met with any success, though sharp fighting took place at different points. A marked feature of these several counter-attacks, and one which accounts to a large extent for the exceptional severity of the enemy's losses, was the effective use

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"So, Mistress Devereaux," she remarked, toying nervously with the ends of her mantilla, "you have come. And quickly, too, it would seem, for you look quite red and flustered. What has happened that thus I find you, brawling with my servants?"

The woman in green released her hold upon the hunchback's ear, and looked up. A wave of anger swept over her, flaring dangerously in her eyes, crimsoning her face.

"Your servants, forsooth!" she exclaimed with a look of scorn. "God 'a' Mercy! Fine talk, from Bull Ormiston's latest light o' love!"

The girl came slowly down the steps and made her way across the garden to the hammock. The bitterness of the older woman's words caused her cheeks to burn; for a moment she seemed about to turn upon her with some retort, but she controlled herself, and a look of pride replaced the anger in her eyes. She stood beside the hammock, regarding her visitor with a disdainful smile.

"'Tis an honor, Mistress Devereaux," she said, in even tones, "that I would gladly turn over to you. What a pity the Firebrand no longer finds you sufficiently attractive."

"He did, until your doll's face turned his head,' burst out the other angrily.

"You flatter me. No woman can turn the head of Bull Ormiston. He was tired of you, that is all." She sank into the hammock, and with careless indifference took a guitar from the carved tabouret beside it. "Lucia—Pedro—away with you." She dismissed them with a gesture, then struck a succession of discords upon the strings of the instrument. They seemed indicative of her state of mind.

The two servants left her at once, apparently glad of the opportunity to escape. Lucia crept quickly through the tangle of shrubbery at the side of the house. The boy, however, seemed in lass of a hurry. Whistling softly to himself, he made his way through the gate at the rear of the garden, and disappeared down the road without cracking his whip at the glowworms in the bushes.

The woman in the green dress was clearly at a loss. Her anger had rendered her self-conscious.

"Devil!" she muttered beneath her breath, glaring the while with an expression of vindictive hatred at the girl in the hammock.

The latter regarded her quite unconcernedly, and indeed not without a certain amusement.

"Pray be seated, Mistress Devereux," she remarked, strumming idly upon her guitar. "What can I do for you?"

"You? Nothing. I'll speak with your master."

The younger woman ceased her playing. For several moments she gazed musingly toward the sea, yet it was not upon its silver-shot surface that her thoughts were fixed. She looked further, beyond the sweeping horizon, and what she saw there darkened her features like a shadow.

"Master," she repeated, presently. "Yes—you are right. Many men even call him that. The boldest and the cruelest, save only Henry Morgan, that frets the power of Spain." She turned quickly toward the other woman, a vast bitterness in her voice. "Who am I, that you should envy me—would to God that you were in my place! A slave—a doll—a plaything to be cast aside, even as you were cast aside, when he is through with me. Madre de Dios!" She accompanied her words with a sweep of her fingers across the guitar strings. A rasping discord filled the garden. "What do you want here, Mistress Devereux?" she demanded in tones of weary indifference.

"To see you cast aside, even as I was."

The girl raised her eyes very slowly.

"That wish I also share," she said.

"You?" The woman's hard eyes flashed their incredulity.

"Yes. Even I. Take the Firebrand and welcome, if so be you can get him. I'll not interfere, of that you may be sure."

"You lie," she cried, "by all the saints!"

"Dios!" she exclaimed. "You forget yourself. Would you have my servants throw you into the road?"

"So, you'll not interfere then, eh? You'l give him up." Her jarring laugh swept through the garden. "Not for all the gold in the Indies would you give him up."

"Why not? At least I should no longer be forced to have traffic with such as you." The girl sank back into the hammock with an almost imperceptible gesture, a shrugging of the shoulders that had in it a suggestion of hopelessness. "Go away, Mistress Devereux," she said after a moment. "You annoy me."

The woman in green made no move to go. Instead she approached the hammock, an ugly smile playing about the corners of her mouth.

"Not yet," she announced. "Your wish may come true sooner than you think. I wait for the Firebrand. There are many things that I must say to him—things concerning you, my sweet angel."

"Things concerning me?" she asked, carelessly. "Such as what?"

"Twice have I seen you in the plaza beside the market place," she exclaimed, "speaking with the young trader from New England." A note of cruelty colored her voice; she watched the girl's face closely, but if she expected to find there any indications of alarm she was disappointed. The air of indifference with which the younger woman had up to now greeted her persisted. There was still the covert suggestion of amused contempt in her eyes.

"Even so, Mistress Devereux," she said. "The man is a sailor and spoke to me of ships. Did you not know that I am greatly interested in ships? La—la—la." She laughed, strumming her guitar. "So you saw him? How nice. A handsome fellow, is he not? He comes from the north, where it is cold, and black, and people think it is sinful to sing, and dance, and—love. La—la—la—oh—such a handsome fellow. So big—so strong—so—"

"If the Firebrand knew," broke in the other, "he'd slit the fellow's throat—and likely your own, as well."

"Santa Maria!" exclaimed the girl, with a light laugh. "If Master Ormiston undertakes to slit the throats of all those with whom I speak, faith, he'll murder half the town. Come, come. Why speak of such fearsome things? 'Tis a night for music—for love. Let me sing you a song." Her slender fingers fluttered lightly over the strings of the guitar, as in a careless way she hummed snatches of a Spanish air, more to herself, indeed, than to the woman before her.

The latter scowled.

"I want none of your songs," she muttered. "You'll sing a different tune when I have told the Firebrand the truth."

"'Tis one I often sing to him, to soothe his savage tempers," the girl went on apparently enjoying her visitor's annoyance. "You should learn it. Who knows when it might serve to do as much for you." Her voice rang out, high and sweet, in the words of the song.

It was with the greatest difficulty that Mistress Devereux contained her rage.

"You think yourself a fine lady, with your airs and your graces," she cried, "just because Bull Ormiston is fool enough to like your pretty face. Wait till I have told him of your goings on——"

He strode through the gateway with the air of one who is both proprietor and master, his eyes, fearless, and cruel, sweeping the scene before him. As he caught sight of the woman in green, a hard frown wrinkled his forehead into a series of vertical lines.

He was a big man, quite evidently an Englishman, in spite of the copper hue that the wind and sun had given to his face. The small dark moustache that shadowed his upper lip, the carefully trimmed imperial, the long hair falling in waves upon his shoulders, gave him a peculiar air of distinction, that was accentuated by the white ruffled shirt with falls of lace at the neck and wrists, the crimson sash into which was thrust a pair of silver-handled pistols, the breeches of claret-colored velvet, the high boots of yellow Spanish leather. Altogether a dashing and notable figure, a man with whom few, even in those venturesome days, would have sought to pick a quarrel, to try conclusions by facing the jewel-hilted rapier that hung from his red leather baldrick.

"Bull" Ormiston he was sometimes called, because of his great strength, but to his men he was "the Firebrand," as many a blazing galleon had hitherto testified. Henry Morgan, prince of buccaneers, had many captains who enjoyed his confidence, but none to a greater degree than Ormiston, the Firebrand.

He glanced swiftly from Mistress Devereux to the girl in the hammock, then once again his eyes, cold and uncompromising, sought the former's face.

"What do you want here?" he demanded.

The woman went up to him. There was mingled fear and admiration in her face. She spoke, striving to give to her voice, her manner, a suggestion of allurement.

"A scurvy welcome, I must say," exclaimed, "for one who seeks to serve you."

Ormiston brushed aside her advances as one might an entangling cobweb. Scarcely did he afford her time to finish her sentence.

"Have I not forbid you the place?" he asked harshly.

"That was two years ago, Firebrand. In two years my heart has grown heavy with longing——"

He turned away with an impatient shake of the head. The long hair about his shoulders shook like the mane of an angry lion.

"Spare me your ravings, woman." He pointed to the gate. "Go!"

The girl in the hammock had been watching the two with amused eyes. Now she raised herself slightly and addressed the man, a mocking note in her voice.

"Listen to her, my lord and master," she said, her tone so light, her manner so free from care that it would have taken a keen observer indeed to have detected its underlying tone of tragedy. "The woman has an amusing tale. Let her be heard."

The slurring contempt that lay in her words stung the older woman to a sudden and bitter rage.

"Must I then stand by," she exclaimed, "and let this lying wench——"

"Hold your loose tongue, woman!" he roared. "Out with your business, if you have any, and go!"

"Very well, Firebrand. I'll speak. And do you listen, for the tale concerns you much. Ever since you cast me aside for this Spanish jade you took from the Rio del Oro, I've waited my time. Well, I knew that some day her cunning foot would slip. Now that it has——" she paused, and swept her rival with a look of fury.

"What old wives' tale is this?" interrupted Ormiston angrily, his eyes straying from the face of the woman before him to that of the girl in the hammock. "By the Lord, if you lie to me——"

"I speak the truth, by Our Lady!"

"The worse for you if you do not. Go on!"

"Twice each year, Firebrand, as you know, there comes from the north a ship, trading salt fish for satins and rum. The Thanksgiving she is called. The first mate on that ship is a young man, John Barton, by name, as big and strong even as you, Bull Ormiston. Twice have I seen him and your sweet dove yonder cooing in the market place, their heads together like lovers." She laughed hardly. The gleam of triumph in her eyes blazed brighter. "The fool scarce knows her name, and thinks her a very saint."

There was a wealth of suggestion in her manner. The frown on Ormiston's forehead deepened. He turned to the girl in the hammock, his eyes boring into hers.

"What do you say, girl?" he exclaimed. "Is this story true?"

"Quite true, Firebrand, save for the part about lovers. I have talked with the fellow, yes. He told me much of this strange country to the north. I listened for his tales amused me greatly. And why should I not?" She strummed lightly on the guitar, striving to hide her agitation beneath a manner of careless concern. "Would you have me stop my ears with wax and wear a nun's veil?"

"How came you to speak with him?" demanded Ormiston, sternly.

"Listen, Firebrand, and I will tell you. Three days ago, as I went to the town, a drunken fellow—one of your own men, as it happened, came upon me in the road, and would have kissed me——"

"One of my men? Who was the dog?" The buccaneer's hand sought the hilt of the rapier. "By Our Lady, I'll——"

"Nay," she interrupted, soothing him with her voice. "The man was drunk. I'll breed no trouble by telling you his name. The Puritan, who stood nearby, saw my distress, and knocked the fellow down. After that we spoke. Surely it was no sin, to thank the man." With wide eyes she searched Ormiston's face.

"Is that all?" he demanded.

"All, save that on another day he doffed his hat and walked with me a space, telling me of his strange country. He would have me believe that in winter the rivers turn to stone and one may walk upon them. Could such things be, Firebrand?"

Lake Boats For Atlantic Service

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—In order to meet the great demand for steamers to handle the traffic between Canada, the United States and British and European ports the Department of Marine and Fisheries is collaborating with the United States Shipping Board in transferring boats formerly plyong on the Great Lakes to the overseas routes. A representative of the United States Shipping Board has been in conference with officials of the department and arrangements have been made for the transfer of a number of United States steamers now on the Great Lakes to the Atlantic service. These vessels when too large to pass through the canals will be cut in two. Some will be docked at the Canadian Vickers plant at Montreal and others at the Marine Department shipyards at Sorel, where they will be put together again for the trip around to an Atlantic port. The Marine Department has for a considerable time been making arrangements whereby a number of boats on the Great Lakes will be put on the Atlantic routes before the close of lake navigation.

COAL FOUND IN N. B.

Geologist Exploring for Silver Strike Deposit of Fuel.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Sept. 28.—Anthracite coal has been discovered fifty miles from this city. Captain Russell Bellaney, of New York City, a student and geologist, secured a license from the New Brunswick government to explore for silver, which he believed was to be found in the Salmon River district of Queen County. His investigations brought him to a strata which proved to be coal very closely resembling the anthracite of the Pennsylvania fields. Tests made showed it to produce an intense heat and to be almost odorless and clinkerless. It ignites quickly and burns slowly. It is estimated conservatively that there is at least a half million tons in sight.

My Limbs Would Twitch

And Awaken me—Unable to Rest or Sleep, I Walked the Floor in Nervous State—When Specialists Failed I Found a Cure.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 1.—This is the kind of cure that has set Windsor people thinking and talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The action of this food cure is so radically different to the usual treatments for the nerves that everybody wants to try it. Gradually and certainly it nourished the starved nerves back to health and vigour and the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

Mrs. M. Smithson, 27 Arthur street, Windsor, Ont., writes: "I was suffering from nervous breakdown, which was caused by a shock when fire broke out in the adjoining house. My nerves were in such a state that, after going to bed I could not get my nerves quieted down sufficiently to go to sleep. I used to get up and walk around the room, or go downstairs. Even when I would be dropping off to sleep my limbs would twitch and waken me. I used to have cold, nervous, night sweats, sometimes would become unconscious and lie that way for quite a little while. I was always cold and it seemed impossible for me to get warm or keep warm. When on the street I would see two or three objects at once, and did not want any person to speak to me or bother me. Any little noise irritated and annoyed me very much. I had consulted specialists and tried many remedies during this time, but could not gain relief. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before long could see that the treatment was proving of benefit. I am now feeling so much better that I can go out on the street without any difficulty, can go across the river and go about the same as usual. I sleep well at night, and am feeling more like myself every day. I am pleased to be able to write you to tell you how much good the Nerve Food has done me. It has strengthened and built up my whole system. I am recommending it to everybody I find suffering from nervousness of any kind."

CONGRESSMEN CLINCH.

Representatives Heflin and Norton Clash Over Former's Charges.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—A row in the House over Rep. Heflin's charges culminated to-day in a fight between Heflin and Rep. Norton, his chief critic.

The climax came at the end of a gusty session of the House, which did not approve the action of the rules committee in refusing to begin investigation of Heflin's charges that certain Congressmen acted suspiciously about the time Count von Bernstiff was asking his Government to authorize the expenditure of $50,000 to influence Congress.

Norton had gone over to the Democratic side to talk to Heflin. The row broke out at once, the two men clinched and fell over on a row of seats, while friends on both sides of the hall piled around and separated them before blows were struck.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 28.—Councillor Grimmett, of the South Vancouver Council, yesterady filed a complaint with the military authorities against his fellow councillor, Mengel, charging him with seditious utterances. Mengel declares he is the victim of a political conspiracy and denies the charges.

CHEERED THE JAPANESE.

New York Chamber of Commerce Welcomes Commissioners.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Japan is in the war "to make herself as unpleasant to the enemy as her political make-up will permit or her ingenuity conceive," declared Viscount Ishii, head of the Imperial Japanese Commission, at the New York Chamber of Commerce here to-day. There were present about 1,000 foremost American bankers, merchants, industrial chiefs and railroad heads, who rose and cheered the Japanese commissioners for several minutes.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Suphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This perparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Eight Enlisted Men Alleged to Be Involved in German Plot.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—Five members of the U.S. Aviation Corps, an army recruiting officer and two navy ensigns are said by Federal officials to be involved in a plot against the Government, alleged to have been headed by Licut. Erwir Schneider, of the German navy, and Theodore Kasinger, a department store employee, both of whom were taken into custody here recently.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Redfield Will

It Looked All Right When Made, but Did Not Pan Out Well

By F. A. MITCHEL

When the late John Redfield's will was opened it was learned that all his property—a goodly fortune—was left to his daughter Anne, with the condition that she marry the testator's right hand man of business, Theodore Griffin. Griffin had been in charge of the Redfield company for some time before its founder's demise, and since he was the only man who could squeeze a profit out of it there was no necessity for making any other provision for its management. Nothing was said in the will as to a refusal of Griffin to marry Anne Redfield. Her father when she was passing into womanhood had told her that it was his intention to give her a good manager for the fortune he would leave her, in the person of Griffin. Anne was then too young to consider the importance of the plan to her, and her father was led to believe that she would make no objection to it when the time came to fulfill the conditions. There was no doubt about Griffin's acceding to it.

This is why the will made no mention of a refusal on the part of Griffin to marry the heiress. If she refused to marry him the stock of the Redfield company, which would otherwise be hers, would go to Griffin. The residue of the estate would in this case be divided between several charitable institutions in which the testator had been much interested during his life.

Mr. Redfield died four years after mentioning the matter to his daughter. When he did so she was fifteen. At the time of his death she was nineteen. She had told some of her schoolmates that she was to marry Griffin and had made no objection to doing so. At that time it was a matter for the future, and she considered it a matter of course, as a boy may do who is brought up to understand that he is to enter a certain profession.

But when Anne Redfield at nineteen found herself an orphan and called upon to fulfill the conditions of her father's will she was a woman and had a lover who had nothing whatever to do with the condition except that if she married him she would give up a fortune.

David Corwin was the young man who had stepped in to prevent John Redfield's well conceived plan from being smoothly worked out. David had been attentive to Anne for some time before her father's death, but Mr. Redfield was not observant, and quite often parents who are watchful fail to detect a love affair that is developing right under their noses. This one came to a head during Mr. Redfield's last illness.

When the will was read Anne was reminded of something the importance of which she had not realized and which, never having been mentioned to her since she was fifteen years old, she regarded as a dead letter. But even now it did not occur to her that Griffin would force himself upon her, she being unwilling. She sent for him and told him that she could not marry her father's choice for her without violation to her feelings. Griffin replied that he had promised her father to do his part in carrying out the plan; if Anne would not do her part he saw no way but that the property, other than the business, must go to the charities named in the will.

Anne consulted a lawyer, who told her that under the terms of the will she must marry Griffin to inherit her property. There was but one way out of the dilemma, and that was for Griffin to refuse to marry her. This would make the will inoperative, and she would inherit as heir at law, the same as if there were no will, she being the only child and there being no widow.

Anne did not understand the legal distinctions in the case, but she did understand that her inheriting her property and marrying the man she wanted depended on Griffin's declining to marry her. She sent for Griffin and reported what the attorney had said.

"This plan," replied Griffin, "was inaugurated by your father. It received my sanction, and he told me that you had made no objection to it. I would not be justified in thwarting it by putting you in a position to render it inoperative. I regret that the carrying it out has become obnoxious to you, but that fact would not excuse me if I become a party to nullifying it."

"But father could have had no object in making such a will except to insure, so far as he could, my happiness. Four years ago he told me about this plan, and I gave my consent to it. Had I refused that consent I am quite sure he would not have made such a will. I was then a child. Now I am woman. Father never intended that I should marry a man I did not wish to marry."

"Your father doubtless knew that your happiness largely depended upon the possession of the fortune he had been at such pains to build up. He was aware that a girl of your age is not able to manage a large concern. His money is all invested in the business, and every one knows that a business without a manager will soon go to ruin. If you marry a man who is not capable of managing yours you will be reduced to poverty. I am sure I am warranted in saying that no man is capable of managing it who has not been brought up for the purpose. Your father brought me up for that very purpose. His object in providing in the will that you should marry me was to insure to you the enjoyment of the wealth he was leaving you. Had he left you free to marry whom you liked you would doubtless have married some young man utterly unfitted to manage a fortune that was tied up in a very intricate business. The result would have been what I have said—ruin for the business and poverty for you. He brought you up with the understanding that you were to marry the manager of the business he left you."

This sounded so plausible that for the time being Griffin appeared in Anne's eyes a very noble man. It seemed to her that she was the guilty one in not carrying out her father's wishes, to which she had tacitly consented. Nevertheless her whole being rebelled against a marriage with Griffin. Indeed, it was not to be thought of. She would marry the man of her choice even if she must relinquish a fortune. She was quite sure he would marry her even if she were poor as a church mouse.

But Anne found on consultation with others that they were not disposed to take her view of Griffin's noble motives in not permitting her to enjoy her inheritance with the man she loved by refusing to marry her. Her lawyer told her frankly that Griffin wanted the half million of dollars he would get with her. Corwin said that he wanted her, fortune or no fortune, but some way must be found to persuade or force Griffin to refuse to marry her, thus enabling her to come into her own. He consulted lawyers, who told him that to comply with the statutes Griffin must voluntarily refuse. He could not be trapped or forced into a refusal.

There was a time limit in the will to Anne's marriage with Griffin. By the time she was twenty-one she must marry him or lose her property. When her father died she had just turned nineteen. Therefore two years remained before she was compelled to decide. It was decided between David and Anne that David should go to some unknown place. Anne had not told Griffin that he had a rival, and it was determined to still keep the matter a secret. There was no difficulty in doing this, for thus far it was known only to Anne and David.

Theodore Griffin was one of those men who combine the social and business world. His success lay in becoming intimate with rich persons and using them in a business way. He used his club, his friends, even his church, for profit. One evening at the opera, scanning the occupants of the boxes, he encountered a pair of binoculars in the hands of a handsomely dressed woman leveled upon him. The glasses were dropped at once, but Griffin wondered why the woman, who was young and well favored, had been gazing at him. Later, pointing to the woman, he asked a friend who she was and was informed that she was Senora De Barancas, the widow of a Brazilian coffee planter and worth millions.

"I certainly would," was the reply.

"I am a friend of hers, and if you will give me references I will be pleased to present you. She has only just arrived in the city and is unknown."

Griffin found a friend who vouched for him and was presented to Senora Barancas. He found confirmation of his belief that he had attracted her attention, because she had admired his appearance, in the reception she gave him, which was, to say the least, cordial. She lamented being in a great city where there was so much to enjoy with no one to enjoy it with except her business manager, the man who had introduced Griffin, and Griffin told her that it would give him great pleasure to make her stay pleasant. She told him that she had but a week in the city, for she had the misfortune, though a woman, to be burdened with the management of large interests.

Griffin devoted himself to the young widow for a week, at the end of which he prevailed upon her to remain another week. One morning Anne Redfield received a note from an attorney suggesting that a compromise might be effected in the matter of the condition in her father's will requiring her to marry Griffin. Anne referred the note to her attorney, who advised her to begin negotiations by offering Griffin $10,000 to refuse to marry her.

But before a reply to the offer was received David Corwin turned up and, taking Anne in his arms, announced that Griffin had been married the evening before.

Corwin was in a position to give his fiancee a lot of information as to the bride, for he had brought her from Rio de Janeiro himself, had arranged her meeting with Griffin—indeed, had arranged a trap for that gentleman which had been worked out very successfully. Senora Barancas was a hired adventuress, and David had agreed to remunerate her handsomely out of Anne's fortune if she could by marrying Griffin insure it to its rightful owner. The senora needed considerable funds to pose as the widow of a multimillionaire coffee planter, and David had been obliged to borrow the necessary amount.

The wedding was sudden, for the senora received a telegram (sent by David) that her interests needed her presence on her plantation, and Griffin concluded to snap her up without delay.

David and Anne did not wait for the courts to pronounce her an heiress before being married. But it was some time before she received her inheritance. Then all the expenses David had incurred in bringing out Senora Barancas were paid and the bride and groom began to enjoy their fortune.

Armed Americans Guard Huge Crop Of Sugar In Cuba

J. B. PHELAN SAYS PRICE REGULATION WILL NOT BE NECESSARY AFTER DECEMBER.

AN ATLANTIC PORT.—Passengers arriving here from Havana related how large bodies of armed Americans are guarding what is believed to be the largest sugar crop Cuba ever has grown.

The Americans are encamped at strategical points so that they can protect the sugar crop in case of trouble. While the entire island apparently is now enjoying peace and tranquility and is looking forward to its most prosperous era, a small band of rebels could cause great damage in the sugar fields unless promptly crushed by superior force.

The presence of the Armed Americans is welcomed by all classes, as they are an assurance for peace, and peace is what all Cubans want now, excepting a few politicians, according to those who arrived here.

Regulation of sugar prices by the Washington government will not be necessary after the Cuban crop begins to move in December, according to J. B. Phelan, a prominent sugar planter who was among the arrivals, early in December the Cuban mills will begin grinding the biggest sugar crop in the history of the island.

"The sugar acreage in Cuba is greater this season than ever before, and weather conditions up to this time have insured an immense crop there," Mr. Phelan said. "Well informed planters have told me that Cuba's crop will be ample to take care of the real requirements of the United States and the Entente Allies, with never a chance of a sugar famine in any of these countries. There is plenty of labour, and it is receiving good wages. There is peace everywhere on the island and real prosperity."

Mr. Phelan said that while the revolution early in this war was responsible for a considerable curtailment of the last crop, this shortage will more than be made up by the crop that is now growing.

It was reported in high government circles in Havana five days ago that General Jose Miguel Gomez, leader of the last revolution, and his son, Miguel Mariano, soon are to be taken from the penitentiary and lodged in their home, the Gomez mansion, in the Prado, under a strong military guard.

"General Gomez' physicians have reported that his health is fast failing, and that unless he is removed from the penitentiary he will die," said one of the arrivals. "While this is regarded as a mere subterfuge to obtain the release of the one-time President of Cuba from prison, it appears that the government has considered favourably the recommendation. A little more than a week ago it was announced semi-officially that General Gomez and Miguel Mariano were to be deported to Spain. Before the vessel aboard which they were to go to Barcelona steamed from Havana the order was changed, and I was informed in high circles that General Gomez and his son were to be allowed to return to the Gomez mansion, in the Prado, where they will be under guard."

He said that if this is done it probably will mean that General Gomez and Miguel Mariano Gomez son will be pardoned or that they will leave Cuba.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS WITH ECZEMA.

Mrs. Link, 12 Walker Street, Halifax, N.S., states: — "After three years of miserable torture and sleepless nights with terrible eczema, and after trying over a dozen remedies without obtaining anything but slight temporary relief, I have been perfectly and entirely cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. After the third of fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure.

NO MARKET FOR GREEN HIDES IN CANADA'S WEST

WINNIPEG, Sept. 27. — The hide and leather market in Canada is in a discouraging condition after having enjoyed the most remarkable era of prosperity in its history for three years. Green hide prices have slumped twenty-five per cent. since Aug. 15, and there is little activity even at these reduced prices. Western jobbers assert that the tanners of Ontario and Quebec are overstocked with high-priced leather and simply won't buy. All buyers of eastern tanners have been withdrawn from the western territory. The western stock goes to eastern Canada for tanning, and ninety per cent. of the hides are then usually purchased by United States manufacturers.

Since the war the allies have been the chief purchasers. The orders from the allies usually come in chunks, but for six months the warring nations do not appear to have required any leather goods. A ray of sunshine was the order placed by the United States Government Sept. 23 for five hundred thousand leather halters. The stock for these must come from Canada, but unless followed by others of a substantial character the congested market on this side can not hope for any immediate relief.

M. Finklestein, general manager of the Northwest Hide and Fur Company of Winnipeg, the largest western dealer in green stock, said today that the green hide market had declined five cents since Sept. 1. His house sold the last large consignment of country cured hides Aug. 15, at 24 cents per pound. Now the eastern tanners are quoting but 20 cents for this class of stock and do not want it apparently at any price until relieved of their present high-priced stock.

His quotations to the trade now are: Green No. 1, 16 cents; city packers, 18 to 19. The prevailing high price of beef is partially based upon the high prices which have ruled since the war for sides. Practically the situation to-day in western Canada is that there is really no market for green hides and will not be until the eastern tanners are able to move the stock, the last of which they purchased in July and August at prices ranging around 25 cents. This means that western packers and country dealers will be forced to hold their green hides until such a time as the allies place a large order, "for," explained Manager Finkelstein, "the domestic or civilian market is dead. This class of trade is out of the market, unable to compete with the high standard of prices, the level of which was established by war time purchases."

made by our infantry of their rifles, while the excellence of our observation enabled our artillery to engage hostile concentrations quickly and accurately.

Apart from these attacks no further fighting of importance took place until the morning of the 21st August, when a minor operation was undertaken by two Canadian brigades against a line of trenches which skirted Lens to the west and north. The attack of the brigade operating north of the town coincided with an attack by a German guard regiment against our positions on their left, and severe fighting took place all day. The German attack was repulsed with very heavy loss, but our own attack was also unable to make any permanent progress in the face of repeated enemy counter-attacks.

Trench Full of Dead.

The right brigade successfully carried the German trench line west of Lens, beating off two counter-attacks, and gained the whole of their objectives with the exception of a short length of trench on their left. This trench was ultimately captured by us on the 25th August, when it was found to be full of German dead.

Throughout the whole of the fighting, since the commencement of the Canadian corps attack on the 15th August, the enemy's resistance has been most obstinate, and he has constantly reinforced his troops, regardless of the severity of his losses. In the fighting of the 21st August four German divisions were identified, including two guard divisions, and in the struggle for the Green Crassier on the 23rd August at least two guard battalions had to be employed by the enemy before he could dislodge three Canadian companies from the ground we had captured.

Huns Stick to Lens.

From the extent of the sacrifices he has already made, it would seem that the enemy has no intention of evacuating Lens until he is forced to do so, and that he is prepared to face heavy losses to his best troops in order to retain his hold on the town. Nevertheless our progress continues and at very moderate cost to ourselves the circle is being drawn even tighter and tighter around Lens.

ELECTION DATE UNCERTAIN.

December Favoured Because of Bad Weather in Following Month.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.— When to fix the coming general election causes some worry to those who will determine the matter. The great amount of preparatory work gives rise to doubt whether things can be got ready for December. On the other hand, if the vote were taken in January or February weather conditions might be bad all over the country, and especially in the west. Deferring the election till the early spring would cause supply to run out.

The election, whenever it is held, will make no difference with the war loan campaign which will be launched in November.

"It's Just Grand" Says Mrs. O'Brien

Toronto Woman Tells of Her Wonderful Recovery With Tanlac

It is not what the manufacturers claim for it, but the testimony of the multiplied thousands who have been benefitted by it that has made Tanlac the most famous medicine in the world today. Mrs. Amy O'Brien, a life-long resident of Toronto, whose husband is with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, "Somewhere in France," in an interesting interview at her home, 184 Lansdowne avenue, recently said:

"One day I saw in the paper where a lady who described my symptoms exactly had gotten relief by taking Tanlac, and that's what caused me to take it and find relief from my troubles. So no one knows the good they may do by telling what helped them out of their suffering. I have been afflicted with rheumatism for five years and my general health had become all broken. And although I spent lots of money for treatment and medicines of various kinds my condition grew worse until I began taking Tanlac. I would have attacks of acute rheumatism when it seemed like the pain would drive me destracted. Just sharp, shooting pains all through my arms that left my muscles so sore I could hardly bear to touch them. I was swollen around my waist, my joints were swollen and so stiff and painful I could hardly bend them. There were knots puffed up on the backs of my hands as large as an egg and many a morning I have gotten up with my fingers so swollen and hurting me so I couldn't slice up the bread for breakfast. I didn't seem to have much strength, couldn't sleep well, and always felt tired and worn-out. I never felt like even getting out of the house and my work was a burden to me.

"Tanlac has certainly been a God-send to me. It is truly wonderful how the two bottles I have taken have helped me. I don't feel the rheumatism now at all, those unsightly knots have disappeared from my hands and the pain and swelling has all left my arms and fingers. My sleep is sound and peaceful and I get up in the mornings feeling fine, and my general health has improved more than I can tell. I honestly believe my rheumatism is a thing of the past and my tired, worn-out feelings are gone, too. I really feel better than I have in many years and can not only do my work with ease but feel like getting out and going somewhere every day. Tanlac has been a grand thing for me and I will gladly tell anybody personally how it has helped me."

BETTER TRAIN SERVICE.

Not Likely to Be Repetition of Last Winter's Curtailment.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—The railways of Canada this winter may escape the cutting down of train services, which characterized last winter's operations. At that time, because of freights congestion and the shortage of coal, a lot of passenger trains were taken off, and expresses made accommodations. The outlook for the present season is better. Though it has been difficult to obtain the necessary rolling stock, some of the roads have succeeded in doing so, while every effort is being made to obviate freight congestion. The fall schedule of the roads, which are in effect next Sunday, do not provide for any great reduction in services apart from the suburban lines.

Argentine President Adheres To A Course Of Neutrality

Irigoyen Regards Germany's Explanation of Luxemburg Incident As Satisfactory--Russians Make a New Advance in the Riga Region---British Naval Air Patrols Destroy Two Enemy Machines and Bring Down Another---Enemy's Artillery is Active.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Charles P. Stewart.)

BUENOS AIRES, October 1.—President Irigoyen regards Germany's explanation of the Luxburg incident as satisfactory, and will firmly adhere to a course of neutrality for Argentine, according to a detailed outline of his position made public to-day by the National Juvinel Committee, which favours a rupture with Germany. The statement contained the first explanation by Irigoyen himself of his views on Argentina's position and announced that he would soon call a congress of American neutrals to decide South America's attitude on the war. It was a detailed narrative of an interview which the committee had with the President on September 26. In this conversation President Irigoyen insisted that "Argentina cannot be dragged into the war by the United States."

PARIS (Official), October 1.—Germans attacked last night on the Verdun front on both banks of the Meuse. Violent artillery fighting is in progress in Verdun sector. French aviators dropped a hundred tons of projectiles on the German city of Stuttgart in reprisal for the bombardment by the Germans of Barleduce. Stuttgart, the capital of the Kingdom of Wurttemberg, is a city of nearly 200,000, about 100 miles from the French border.

PETROGRAD, October 1.—General Gurko, former commander of the southwestern front, has been expelled from Russia by way of Archangel, because of a letter he wrote to the former Emperor, expressing loyalty.

(By Carl P. Groat.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, October 1.—"Official Washington to-day regards the pledge of Viscount Ishii, head of the Japanese Mission for an "open door" in China as the most important utterance from the standpoint of American foreign relations made by any of the Allied representatives who have visited this country. It is believed the Ishii statement has removed the most sinister weapon of the jingoists who have been persistently agitating the menace of a Japanese-American clash. The statement of Japan's representative was made Saturday night in a formal prepared speech suggesting that its full weight and importance had been considered in advance.

MANY RAIDS BY THE FRENCH AIRMEN

PARIS, October 1.—The French official statement says: French bombing squadrons sprayed with projectiles the railroad station and barracks at Fresnoy-Le-Grande, where fierce fires were observed, and also dropped bombs on railway stations of Thionville, Mezieres and Dieuze, and bombardment of the open town of Bar Le Duc ..... hSflkh(..... ..... on the factories of Hagondange.

As a measure of reprisal for the German bombardment of the open town of Barleduc, two French aviators on the night of September 30-October 1, threw down 300 kilograms of projectile on the fortified town of Stuttgart.

In Belgium we bombarded aviation ground in the region of Roulers and Thielt and the railroad stations at Lichstervelde, Staten and Cortemarck.

Russians Advance In Riga Section

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 1.—Russian troops have made another advance in the Riga region, according to to-day's War Office announcement. German posts were pressed back south of the railway in Spitals Farm sector, the Russians advancing between eight hundred and a thousand yards.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 1.—Two hostile machines were destroyed and two others driven down by British air patrols, says official announcement made to-day, recounting bomb raids over Belgium on Saturday night, and air combats that resulted from patrol activities.

(Canadian Press Desptech.)

LONDON, October 1.—The week-end air raids established a record as the noisiest that London has experienced. This was due entirely to the increased number of anti-aircraft guns and the continuity of the firing. In discussing the raids in fact the Londoners now find little to say except that the gun fire was greater or less than on former nights. Last night the only unusual incident of the raid was the cheering which was heard from different parts of the metropolis due to a belief that some of the raiders had been brought down. The public which has been looking forward to darker nights that are approaching for a cessation of the raids, has been warned that although recent raids occurred on moonlight nights, there is no reason to assume that, as more experience is gained, they may not be attempted on any night when the atmospheric conditions are favourable. The taking of necessary precautions to provide shelter is urged.

(Canadian Press Desptech.)

LONDON, October 1.—(Official)—British naval air patrols destroyed two enemy machines and brought down another. A Gotha also was brought down and is believed to have been damaged. All British machines are safe.

(Canadian Press Desptech.)

LONDON, October 1.—The enemy's artillery has shown pronounced activity in night time in the Nieuport sector and east and north of Ypres, says to-day's official report. Otherwise there is nothing to report.

(Canadian Press Desptech.)

WASHINGTON, October 1.—Shaken, but still powerful, is the estimate of Germany's defensive strength on the Western front, given in this week's official statement issued by the War Department here. The superiority of the British over their enemies, the statement says, has conclusively been proved by last week's fighting, while it has been demonstrated that the fighting stamina of Germany is deteriorating. Of the activities of the American force in Europe, the report says absolutely nothing.

FIRST 93RD MAN TO REACH FRANCE INVALIDED HOME

Pte. R. Morairty Was Transferred From the Peterborough Battalion Before It Left Here and Went Overseas With the 59th Battalion

AT FRONT WITH R.C.R.

Pte. R. Moriarty, well known in local soccer circles, and the first member of the 93rd Battalion to reach the firing line in France, arrived home on Saturday morning, having been invalided from the front suffering from nephritis and heart trouble after eleven months service.

Pte. Moriarty who was employed at the Brinton Carpet Works before he enlisted in the 93rd Battalion was transferred to the 59th Eastern Ontario battalion in March, 1916, before the 93rd left Peterborough to continue its training at Barriefield. A Peterborough soldier in the 59th desired a transfer here to be with his brother in the local battalion and Pte. Morairty volunteered to exchange. He joined the 59th as they were leaving for England.

In June of last year, Pte. Morairty went to France in the first draft of the 59th, going to the Royal Canadian Regiment. He was, therefore, in France before his former comrades in the 93rd had left Canada. He served with the R.C.R.'s in the Ypres salient, through the battle of the Somme and the fighting in the Arras region that preceeded the Vimy Ridge attack. He was taken ill during that engagement and invalided to England where he has spent many weeks in hospital. He has to undergo some treatment at Queen's Military Hospital, Kingston. Pte. Morairty's wife returned from England with him.

40 Delegates To Attend Convention Of S.S. Teachers Here

The Peterborough Sunday School Teachers' Association at a meeting in Murray Street Baptist church yesterday afternoon advanced the arrangements for the Provincial Convention of the Sunday School teachers of Ontario to be held in this city on October 30 and 31st and November 1st. Mr. Joseph Wearing is president of the local association and Mr. J. J. Turner is secretary. It is expected that four hundred delegates will attend the convention which meets in Peterborough for the first time in twenty-five years. The detail of decorations, reception and billeting of delegates and other arrangements have been practically completed. An appeal will be made to the Council this evening for a grant of $150 for reception purposes. The session of the convention will be held in George Street Methodist Church.

A MEMORIAL FOR THE UNRETURNING BRAVE

War Veterans Plan a Permanent Headquarters to Be Dedicated to the Memory of Peterboro's Sons Who Have Died For the Empire---Mayor Duffus Has Called a Public Meeting For Thursday Night.

Already public bodies and private people are discussing how they shall commemorate the men of their city or town or village, who have given their lives for the Empire, and how too they shall record the sacrifices of those who fought and survived.

The Great War Veterans' Association of Canada, of which Peterborough has a flourishing branch, have hit on a plan that is not only novel and practicable but that promises to honour the past in the best possible way—by benefiting the future.

Briefly the suggestion is this—that instead of each community erecting some cold austere monument of marble and brass to stand lonesome and neglected in a square or park, plans should be immediately set on foot to secure a central site, and as soon as possible to erect thereon a building to serve as a headquarters and home for the veterans who have fought and suffered, but who have been spared to come home. This building will be dedicated to the memory of the unreturning brave who sleep where "poppies grow in Flanders fields."

What more fitting way to honour Peterborough's heroic dead than a splendid building where the comrades of those who fell in France and Belgium could meet to assist one another and their families, to perpetuate the memories of their chums who will not come back and to keep alive the recollections of the days when they stood side by side and fought for the safety of democracy and freedom? Can Peterborough, mourning, for the hundreds of her sons who have died for liberty and glorying in the deeds of her citizens, who have been spared to come back or who are still to return, do less than this?

Such is the aim of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association. Some cities have already acted upon the suggestion. Toronto, always to the forefront when patriotic work is on hand, has purchased for her war veterans a splendid building. Brantford, Hamilton and other cities have adopted a similar plan. Peterborough with a record second only to Winnipeg in the whole Dominion in regard to the number of enlistments according to population, cannot fall behind.

Mayor Duffus has called a a public meeting in the Council Chamber for Thursday night of this week. It is hoped that every patriotic organization and public body in the city will be represented on this occasion. The Local Council of Women, the Daughters of the Empire, the Red Cross Society, the Progressive Club, the Kitchener League, the Ashburnham Patriotic League, and all the other organizations of women who have done such noble work, are urged to send representatives. It is desired that the meeting shall represent Peterborough thoroughly and patriotic citizens are asked to keep the evening open. Either Comrade N. F. Knight, of Ottawa, the Dominion Secretary of the Great War Veterans, or Comrade W. E. Turley, of Toronto, Secretary of the Toronto Branch, will be here to address the meeting.

A number of very interesting pamphlets in regard to the aims and objects of the G.W.V.A. are being mailed to citizens to-day. The Veterans believe that they will be found well worth reading, and they ask their friends to study them carefully.

Once again the meeting is Thursday night, October 4th, in the Council Chamber.

SIXTY PER CENT. OF MEN EXAMINED FOUND FIT FOR THE TRENCHES

Local Medical Board Commenced Its Sessions This Morning --Some of the Men Examined Were Rejected But Three Were Found Fit For Duty in Canada Only--G.W.V.A. Executive Meets---To-day's General Military News.

Applicants Examined—10.
Placed in A Category—6
Placed in B Category—1
Placed in C Category—3
Rejections—None.

The above summary represents the results of the first session of the local Medical Board which began its work at the Armouries this morning. As will be seen, sixty per cent. of the men who presented themselves for examination were found physically fit for the trenches, and were placed in A 2 category, which signifies that they are untrained men, who are fit for any branch of the service on the firing line.

The categories have been explained several times, but a repetition will not do any harm now that the Board has commenced its examinations. "A" category means that a man is fit for fighting units. "B" means fit for service on lines of communication, forestry and construction battalions, or other non-combatant service overseas, and "C" signifies that a man is fit only for duty in Canada. It is likely that the proclamation will only call Class "A" to the colours, although this has not been announced definitely.

There were several men waiting to be examined when the Board, composed of Majors Cameron and Eastwood and Capt. Greer, assembled at 10 o'clock this morning. Others arrived later from the factories, the majority C.G.E. men, and by twelve o'clock ten men had been examined. Several of those applying this morning were men who had been rejected before, and they were placed in "C" category on this occasion. The Board is very careful in its examinations, and no effort is being made to hustle men through or to crowd them into the ranks. As soon as an applicant is examined he is given a copy of his medical history sheet. This sheet must be pinned to an examination form if the man wishes to claim exemption from service or to a report form if he is waiving his claim to exemption and is ready to report. It is expected that both exemption and report forms will be available at the Post Office as soon as the proclamation calling men to the colours is issued. Every man coming in Class I. under the Act, bachelors, widowers without children and men who have been married since July 6th, between twenty and thirty-four years of age, inclusive, must either report for service or claim exemption when the proclamation is issued, and as a medical sheet must accompany his papers in either case, the first duty is to be examined by the Medical Board as soon as possible. Any man who is passed as fit can volunteer for service and join an overseas unit as a volunteer if he wishes to do this.

The next session of the Board is being held this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and there will be a session to-night at 7.30. The Board will meet daily until further notice.

G. W. V. A. EXECUTIVE

At Saturday night's meeting of the executive of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association a letter was read from Lieut.-Col. Walker stating that he thought there would be no objection to the Association making use of the recreation room at the Armouries for meeting purposes. Col. Walker pointed out that the room was utilized for band practices on Tuesdays and Fridays, but would be available for any other nights in the week. It was decided to use Monday night as meeting night, instead of Tuesdays, and there will be a regular general meeting to-night at 8 o'clock in the Armouries. Members are asked to note this change in the date and place of meeting.

BIG BRITISH VICTORY OVER TURKISH FORCES

General Maude's Captures Include Guns, Ammunition and Several Thousand Prisoners, Including Ahmed Bey and His Staff.

ENEMY SURROUNDED

LONDON, Sept. 30.—A British official report concerning the operations in Mesopotamia announces the capture Friday of Mushaid Ridge, in the region of Bagdad.

The British attacked the Turkish main position in the region of Ramadie from the south, east and west, and continued the attack Saturday, the enemy everywhere surrendering.

The captures by the British include guns, ammunition and several thousands of prisoners, including Ahmed Bey and his staff.

ENEMY IS SURROUNDED.

The report of Major-General Frederick S. Maude, Commander of the expedition says:—

"After an advance Thursday night we attacked the enemy's advanced position at Mushaid, four miles east of Ramadie, early Friday morning. Mushaid Ridge was occupied with little difficulty. A column, continuing to advance, manoeuvred away from the river, attacking the Turks' main positions about Ramadie, to the south-east, while our cavalry moved wide around to the west of Ramadie.

"A severe battle ensued, lasting throughout Friday. By nightfall our troops had carried the main positions and were encircling Ramadie from the east, southeast and south, at a distance under two miles from the town. Our cavalry completed the land cordon west of Ramadie, while the Euphrates runs on the north side of the town. The enemy, during the night attempted to break out westward, but was headed back by our cavalry."

TURK COMMANDER TAKEN.

"Our troops resumed the attack vigorously Saturday at daybreak, with the result that at nine o'clock in the morning the enemy was surrendering everywhere.

"Included in our capture are guns, arms, ammunition, stores and equipment and also much other booty, several thousand prisoners, Ahmed Bey, the Turkish Commander and his Staff.

"The enemy was taken entirely by surprise, and practically the whole garrison of Ramadie fell into our hands. Our troops displayed great gallantry, determination and endurance under the most difficult conditions.

"During Thursday night, another column moved out northeast of Bagdad, after a sharp skirmish with a Turkish cavalry detachment, inflicting casualties and capturing four prisoners and three hundred Turkish supply camels."

WAR VETERANS MEET TO-NIGHT

The regular meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans Association will be held to-night at 8 o'clock in the recreation room of the armouries. All members are asked to note the change in the date and place of meeting and make a special effort to be on hand to-night. There is more comfortable accommodation at the armouries, than in the Club headquarters in the Barrie Building and there will be room for every one.

VIGOROUS DEMAND FOR MORE DEFENSES AGAINST AIR RAIDS

General Agitation in England For More Anti-Aircraft Guns and a More Complete System of Warning Signals

REPRISALS WANTED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 1.— A vigorous demand for more defenses was the aftermath to-day in the London press of last night's air raid over London—the fifth in a week. The general demand for more anti-aircraft guns was coupled with an agitation for a more complete system of warning signals. The public accepts the air raids as inevitable and likely to occur every midnight, but there is considerable dissatisfaction over the inability of the British defenses completely to push back the baby killers.

Editorials to-day demanded that the British airmen over the continent retaliate on Germany by raids over the German depots.

DEMONSTRATION IN THE HOME OF THE KRUPPS

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A demonstration against the German government on Saturday at Essen, the home of the Krupp Works, in consequence of the decision of Chancellor Michaelis not to state German peace terms, is reported in an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam. Women formed the majority of the demonstrators, breaking the windows of the town hall and shouting demands for more food, peace and for the return of their men folk. The police and military were called out to quell the riot. Two women were injured and several were arrested. The whole of Essen is reported to be in a state of ferment.

Sam Hughes Is Here To-Day

Sir Sam. Hughes was in Peterborough this afternoon for a few minutes on his way from Ottawa to Lindsay. The ex-Minister of Militia motored from the capital, and was at the Roy Studio when the Examiner saw him.

"Nothing new," he replied when asked if there was anything doing.

"What's new in the war?" was his counter question.

And then he asked about the personnel of the local Medical Board, jumped in his car and was off for Lindsay.

SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH

The annual Sunday School rally at Murray Street Baptist Church yesterday afternoon brought out the largest attendance of the year with other evidences of the flourishing condition that prevails in all the departments of the school. Rev. J. R. Webb gave a special address, dealing with the Sunday School and its work, and a reading by Hughston Johnston, Jr., was excellently rendered.

VOTES FOR INDIANS.

The Indian chiefs of the province are alive to the importance of enjoying the full privileges of citizenship, and the Indians in general have generally well performed the duties of citizenship. To-morrow at Chemong Indian Village there will be a conference of all the chiefs of the different Indian tribes in the province to consider the question of votes for Indians, possessing the qualifications of age, residence, etc. Heretofore Indians have been debarred from voting. They are wards of the government and obviously they are in respect of voting in the same class as civil servants, who owe their emolument to the government. There does not seem any good reason why the Indian should not have a vote. In the first place it is due him as a part of a broad scheme of reparation. The white man has virtually seized the territory, the lands and waters, and hunting grounds of the Indians, who were the real owners by right of possession. The Indians of the country, who once owned all the country, have been crowded into corners, and been patronizingly granted "reserves"—of their own property. Then, by virtue of service, Indians deserve concession of the rights of citizenship represented by the vote. They have been notably loyal to the Crown ever since the British occupation of the country. They have fought in our defensive wars, and in this present war they have enlisted in large numbers, and fought, and are still fighting valiantly for Britain and Canada. We shall look for the results of the declaration of the chiefs with interest. Their conference, understood to be in demand of the vote, is evidence of progress and enlightment, that makes for giving our Indians a more positive place in Canadian citizenship.

A Montreal man has invented a device for the protection of ships. Its resting powers, he claims, are a thousand times greater than the heaviest torpedo.

UNION GOVERNMENT.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals in the Borden government, declares that there will soon be a Union Government for Canada. If he means a union government containing a mixture of Liberals and Conservatives, he is out in his forecast. No real Liberal will join a government of which one of the proposed coalescing elements is the Borden government. This government, by its leadership, its component elements, or its record, does not invite coalition or political union. Assuming that the Minister who is so positive about the formation of a union government, remains a member of the government, there remains a type of politics that will attract no honourable and loyal Liberal to cooperate. He is the man who introduced the disloyal Bourassa into loyal Ontario in the year 1911, as "one of our leaders," and helped tie up the Borden government with the disgraceful compact with Nationalism.

There seems to be no prospect of any responsible and loyal Liberal allying himelf with a discredited government. The names mentioned as likely new members of the "union" government are not Liberals, or if they are they are renegade Liberals who have denied the faith. They are the false Liberals who voted for the Borden government under the lure of Cabinet positions. They voted for the government's C.N.R. deal, for the iniquitous franchise act, contrary to the principles every self-respecting Liberal stands for. If the "union" government Mr. Cochrane promises, includes these men, it will still remain the same old government with the same patritzan list—the same discredited record and Prussian policy.

The etymological water in Hydro won't put out a fire, or prevent a quarter million loss.

UNREST AND DISCONTENT.

There seems to be a universal prevalence of strikes in the world, and Canada is not exempt from them. Elsewhere they are in some considerable degree due to the plotting of German intrigueurs; but in Canada they are chiefly in connection with the matter of wages. The wide disproportion of the rate of wages to the cost of living, may be an excuse, if not a justification, for strikes. And there is little reason to doubt that one of the contributory causes, the moral temper and spirit of workmen, arises from the inequality of treatment and opportunity, as between the capitalist, of some brands, and the working man. The wages of working men, outside perhaps of munition shops, do not share in the advance of price of the commodities of life. These high prices are largely caused by the operations of strongly financed individuals and corporations; and, while the wage earner and the ordinary labourer have to bear the brunt of the high prices; the big interests, whose operations and manipulators are regarded as principally responsible for high prices, have immunity and are permitted by the authorities to ply their activities and reap large profits at the expense of the commonalty, without being called upon to surrender a fair, or any share, of their excessive profits to public uses, but are, if not specifically protected, left profitably alone in the pursuit of wealth. The spectacle of many favored profiteers almost literally coining money, at the common expense, has no doubt operated in discouraging recruiting; there being too big a disparity between permitted profits and demanded sacrifice, to stimulate the patriotism of recruiting; and it has operated also in creating a feeling of injustice, a spirit of resentment, that conduces to the unrest and discontent, with relative conditions, favourable to strikes.

Statistics show that there is a scarcity of hogs in Canada—but what about the food profiteers?

WASTE OF SOLDIERS.

We have a good many things to look after in this war. We have to economize and discriminate in the use of food in order to keep up the supply for our soldiers. We have to supply more soldiers to keep our combatant forces at the front up to requirements. Yet we legally permit the waste of millions of pounds of food grains in the making of intoxicating beverages. We permit food combinsters and food profiteers to make millmillions by the arbitrary manipulation of foods and food prices, with the result of food prices that are a grievous burden and a gross injustice. And we have no adequate action of the government to meet the situation—only the assertion of a government official, the food controller, that it would be disastrous to fix prices of food, though there is no official impediment provided to prevent food manipulators from "fixing" the prices at the expense of the consumers. We expect governments to do things for the people that the people cannot do for themselves. The government is organized for this purpose—it has the machinery—it has the power;—only the will seems lacking.

The government's only blame does not arise from its attitude towards food conditions. We are making mighty efforts to get more soldiers, and we must get them, and the government control. And the evil has see that the soldiers we get are not wasted. We hear much of the ravages of venereal disease; of its wide prevalence. We can't altogether prevent it in civilized life; but it should be different in the matter of enlisted soldiers, under military discipline and government control. But the evil has grown to a great extent among soldiers, who have been made unfit by the thousands. Dealing with this serious and unsavoury matter, The Globe says—

With fifteen hundred cases of diseased soldiers in the base hospital of the Toronto military district in one year— * * * * And out of those recruited in Canada in the first three war years, and passed as physically fit and free from disease when they enlisted—with twelve thousand of them reported diseased and unfit before their date for sailing came—twelve thousand diseased and smitten during their stay in camp in Canada, called and turned back before their regiments ever saw the shores of Britain!—where is our boasting?

This seems a very sorry record. Could not the government have done something to protect the Canadian soldiers from the peril that has unfitted them by the thousand for active service—involving not only the waste of the cost of equipment, training and maintenance, but the waste of prysical and moral manhood. The military authorities can and do place drinking places "out of bounds." Was there, is there, no means of placing a far more hideous evil "out of bounds"?

Food Controller Hanna says there are too many "small middlemen." What the people complain of is that there are too many "big middlemen."

ASSESSMENT RETURNS SHOW AN INCREASE IN POPULATION

Increase in the Assessment Taxable Over Last Year Is $305,674—The Amount Taxable For All Purposes Is $11,966,174—Population Increase Is 783—Figures Indicate a Steady Growth.

A SUMMARY

The assessment roll for 1918 has been returned to City Clerk Armstrong and the appended summary will indicate the progress of the city during the past year. The figures show an increase in population of seven hundred and eighty-three over last year. The taxable real also shows a substantial increase. The 1916 roll upon which the 1917 taxes are based have the amount of taxable real liable for all rates as 10,456,560. On addition to this the sum of 802,990 was liable for school rates and Patriotic Fund only. The roll just returned upon which next year's taxes are based gives the sum of 10,704,499 liable for all rates and the sum of 766,690 liable for school and patriotic rates only.

BUSINESS ASSESSMENT.

The business assessment for 1917 was 1,489,540 of which 876,820 was liable for all rates and the sum of 602,720 liable for school and patriotic rates only. The business assessment on the new roll for 1918 totals 1,454,400 of which 911,550 is liable for all rates and 542,850 liable for school and patriotic rates only.

INCOME ASSESSMENT.

The income assessment for 1917 was 230,950 which was liable for all rates. Next year the income assessment will be 350,125.

The total amount taxable for all purposes in 1917 was 11,564,330 and the amount taxable for all purposes next year will be 11,966,174. The amount taxable for school and patriotic rates in 1917 was 1,405,710, whereas the amount taxable for the same purpose next year will be 1,309,540.

The total increase in taxable for all purposes is 401,844.

The decrease in school and patriotic rates only, is 96,170.

The last named decrease is due to a number of exemptions that have expired. As a rule exemptions are only liable for school and patriotic rates. When the exemptions expire they pass from under the heading of "liable for school and patriotic rates only" to the general column, where they are liable for all rates.

The increase in assessment taxable is 305,684.

NINE ARE KILLED

Dogs Wanted For French Army

(By Mail by Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Oct. 1.—France is short on dogs—thousands are needed for the army. Every dog found in the Republic is a contribution, every cur is picked up and numerous breeding societies are furnishing regular quotas, but still there aren't enough. So many diverse duties have been developed for dogs in the war that practically every canine, provided he is intelligent enough to be trained, can be used.

A dog kennel—large enough for the training of hundreds of dogs—is a regular part of the equipment of every French army now. It turns out trained animals for front service. Originally dogs were used for just two purposes—carrying aid to the wounded and accompanying patrols to scent out the enemy. The Belgians have always had a third duty, that of training dogs to draw machine guns, but the highly specialized sort of war to-day has resulted in the amplifying of these duties. Two of the most important roles now played by canines are "liason" work and sentinel service can be said to have attained supreme importance Liason dogs have the most dangerous and the most useful parts to play. They carry messages between attacking troops and the batteries to the rear, which shield these troops by barrage fire. The intensity of enemy counter barrages to prevent this, kills hundreds of dogs, but still many trained animals slip through. For every dog that died on the field of honour, France considers it has been the life of the soldier messenger who otherwise would have to do the work.

Any dogs who fail to show aptitude for liason work develop into excellent sentinels. Those particularly fitted for this work take their place at the top of the trench alongside the gun barrel of their master and detect every patrol or every individual soldier that attempts a passage of the barbed wire entanglements ahead.

Many Sportsmen's Names In Casualty Lists

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The latest casualty list issued contains the names of a large number of famous British sportsmen who have fallen on the western front. Amongst the wounded are two English Rugby Internationals in Major S. H. Williams, D.S.O., and Captain J. A. Schofield.

Captain H. R. Foster, reported missing, is the well-known Marlow Rowing Club oarsman, who rowed in the eight at Henley in 1913 and 1914, and won many prizes at the up-river regattas between 1909 and the outbreak of the war. He is a cousin of Lieut. J. W. Shaw, another member of the Marlow eight, who was reported missing in June, but is now known to be a prisoner of war.

Major Harry Denison, an old Etonian, who has died of wounds, was a good all-round sportsman. When at the famous college he held the record for bowling, taking on one occasion nine wickets for one run and five in one over. Lieut. A. Aldwinckle, now officially presumed killed in action, was a keen sportsman and distinguished himself in running, winning the mile, three mile and half-mile steeplechase two years in succession in the college sports. He represented London University against Cambridge and the South London Harriers in the mile and the one and one-half miles.

Lieut. M. B. Beaumont-Checkland, killed, was a splendid all-round athlete. At the age of eight he won the quarter-mile at his first school and at St. John's College sports in 1904, and later the 100 yards officers' race in the Yeomanry regimental sports. He also played hockey and cricket for his college. He hunted regularly with the Devon and Somerset Staghounds.

Lieut. B. B. New, killed, won considerable fame in the Bournemouth and Dorset district as a cricketer and fooballer.

Lieut. F. C. Stewart, wounded, played halfback for Watson's College in the fifteen of 1914-5 and 1915-6.

Lieut. P. J. Roche, who died of enteric, was the famous Irish sprinter who won the 100 yards championship of Ireland in 1907-8-9, and the 220 yards in 1907. He was the victor in the 100 yards International against Scotland in 1907-8-10, and in the 220 yards in 1907, and was one of the United Kingdom's representatives in the 1912 Olympic Games at Stockholm.

J. M. Bow of the Canadian forces, who 30 years ago was a prominent figure in cycling, cross-country and golfing circles in the east of Scotland, has been killed in action. He won the Scottish one mile bicycle championship in 1886 and won many prizes at cycle race meetings all over Scotland and represented his country in international cycle races in London.

Two well-known boxers have made the big sacrifice, Lieut. A. Burnett, the heavyweight, and Alfred Purton of the Grenadier Guards. Lieut. H. R. Power, killed, was a noted athlete and made a great name as a high jumper at Dublin University. Trooper R. G. Murray, Australian forces, who has been killed, won the Scottish high jump championship in 1901 and 1904, clearing 6 feet 10 1-2 inches in the latter year, then a Scottish amateur record. He also tied in 1904 for the A. A .A. championship with J. B. Milne and P. O'Conner and represented Scotland against Ireland in 1900-1-2-3-4. He is the fourteenth Scottish international athlete who has fallen in the war. Corporal R. E. White, killed, was an excellent oarsman. He was an old member of the Eton Echecelsior Rowing Club. At the last Windsor and Eton regatta he was a member of the club's crew that won the Van Praagh Cup for Eights and he was the holder of the cup for the club pair oar gigs. He stroked the four that won the junior challenge cup at Kingston regatta and he also won several other rowing prizes.

The famous golfer, Capt. J. L. C. Jenkins, Cameron Highlanders, was admitted to hospital suffering from a gunshot wound on the left thigh. He won the amateur championship a few weeks before the outbreak of war. While serving in the ranks of the Camerons he was slightly wounded at Loos in September, 1915.

C. P. R. CABIN AT THE GEORGE ST. CROSSING

The C.P.R. has completed a cabin for its gateman at the George street crossing, Mr. William Henry. It is said to be one of the finest along the line. All four sides afford a clear view in the directions upon which they open. This will enable the gateman to watch the traffic during cold and wet weather as carefully as in the past when the gate controls were open to the elements.

the Association to arrange for the bringing back to Canada of the wife and family of one of the local veterans was read, and the Secretary was authorized to cable the necessary information to Sir George Perley in order that transportation can be provided for the party as soon as possible.

Mayor Duffus was present during the latter part of the meeting and discussed the coming campaign of the War Veterans. His Worship explained that he had called a public meeting for Thursday night of this week to bring the matter before the public. He had heard that the present quarters of the Association were small and after inspecting them himself had come to the conclusion that it was his duty as mayor to see that the matter was taken up by the citizens, and better accommodation provided.

On motion it was decided that henceforth the membership buttons shall be issued only by the Financial Secretary.

There were present at the meeting President H. Staunton, Vice President, Geo. Toone; Secretary, Sid Whatley; Treasurer, Geo. Coleman; Comrades, E. Mesley and G. Fallon; Executive members and Comrade R. H. Muir, Sergeant-at-arms.

PTE. WM. WALKER.

Pte. Wm. Walker of Lakefield, who was some time ago reported wounded is now officially reported wounded and missing, according to a message received by his sister, Miss Mabel Walker, from Ottawa, to-day.

"Bill" Saxby, one of the newly-elected members of the Executive of the Petrborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, left this afternoon to join the party of Peterborough War Veterans who are touring the United States. The Trench Exhibit, after a most successful week at the New Jersey State Fair, at Trenton, N.J, open an engagement at Danbury, Conn., to-day. A number of other Peterborough Veterans will join the party in a few days.

Dear Mrs. McManus,—It is with a has received the following letters in regard to the death in France of her son, Pte. Walter McManus, formerly of the 93rd Battalion:

Somewhere in France, Sept. 3.

Dear Mrs. McMaus,—It is with a feeling of sorrow that I am writing these few lines in reference to your grandson's death. This is Sergeant R. K. Edgar who is writing, as I was your grandson's platoon sergeant. He was in my machine gun section.

On the night of the 24th of August everything was nice and quiet. Then all of a sudden we opened up a bombardment on our right. The Germans thought we were coming over at them. He threw up his S.O.S. and his artillery opened up on our trenches. They made a few direct hits on our trenches and one of the shells landed into out machine gun emplacement and struck three of our crew. Walter was struck in the back and stomach. We got him out as quick as possible to the dressing station, got him fixed up and then he was sent to the dressing station. He died at the clearing station on the 25th of August. Our whole company join with you in your sad bereavement for he was a splendid soldier, quiet and reliable and never knew what fear was. None better can take his place and it seems so bad that such a good man should be taken. From a friend—

Serget. R. K. Edgar,
B Company, 5th C.M.R.,
Canadians,
France.

Aug. 31—

Dear Mrs. McManus,—It is with a feeling of sorrow that I am writing you. Your grandson, Walter, has been with me in my platoon ever since he came to France. On account of passing through so many charges together our relations had become as friends rather than officer to man. His loss was a personal loss to me. He was severely wounded while with his machine gun at a critical moment when he expected the Germans to counter-attack. During the short time he lived I do not think he suffered a great deal from his wounds as the shock had numbed his senses.

He died six hours afterwards at a dressing station and was buried at Moeux-les-Mines.

If there is anything you wish to know I would be only too pleased to do anything I can.

Yours sincerely,
J. J. Harocd,
Lieut. 5th C.M.R.,

St. Alban's Mission May Be Made Independent Parish

New Church Building is Under Consideration and Campaign Has Been Begun to Secure Funds —Thanksgiving Service Was Held Yesterday.

MR. C. A. G. SPENCE IN CHARGE

The need of a new mission building for the worshippers of St. Alban's, Browntown, was demonstrated yesterday afternoon on the occasion of the annual Harvest Thanksgiving, when the mission could not accommodate the large number that assembled at the service. The room was appropriately decorated by the members. The service was read by the missionary in charge, Mr. C. A. G. Spence, and a very helpful and inspiring sermon was delivered by the Ven. Archdeacon Warren. The Archdeacon was visibly impressed by the great strides that have been made by the mission since it opened three years ago.

A representative gathering of the congregation met Archdeacon Warren, the Rev. James Price and Mr. Spence on Saturday evening in the mission room to discuss the advisability of forming St. Albans' into an independent parish and building a suitable edifice.

The legacy left by the late Dr. Burnham to St. Alban's will be a nucleus for a building fund and it was decided to inaugurate at once a campaign for securing sufficient funds to adopt the above course.

As an earnest of the congregation's ambitions a resolution was passed pledging the members to contribute a proportion of the incumbent's stipend.

More will be heard of St. Alban's in the near future.

"Mutt & Jeff" In Trouble

What "Toronto" Thinks of the No. 1 Co. of "Mutt & Jeff Divorced" Which Comes to the Grand Next Saturday

Mutt and Jeff arrived in town last night, and received their annual ovation at the Grand Opera House. In this particular musical comedy, Mutt and Jeff are in awful trouble. There are two divorces impending after two years of unhappily married life. Mrs. Mutt and Mrs. Jeff are two very lovely women, but according to their respective swains, are anything but lovely wives. A the crucial moment Jeff's pretty niece arrives. Jeff is elected her guardian, and pockets a bribe of $50,000. The appearance of the beautiful young heiress, unknown to all save Mutt and Jeff, immediately sets gossiping tongues wagging. Amid a court scene of extremely undignified procedure, all the tangles which ensue are straightened out, and the unhappy homes reestablished in peace and harmony. Throughout the three bright acts many catchy songs are introduced, with a dance specialty of a sensational nature. The chorus costumes are effective. Harry Kay, as "Mutt"; George Beach, as "Jeff"; H. P. Forsythe, as Harry Von Allen; Frank McCullough, as Baum, the attorney; Elsie Meadows, as Mrs. Mutt; Reta Abbott as Mrs. Jeff, and Dorothy Stoy, as Mary Moore, were chief among the principals to score, while excellent support was given by the rest of the company.

"MUST CLEAR OUT THE SIMONS"

Arrogance and False Pride Castigated by Rev. J. R. Webb

Arrogance and false pride received a severe castigation at the hands of the Rev. Mr. Webb in the Murray Street Baptist Church last night. It is almost impossible to conceive of a certain local musician ever again making it his business to neglect his own business to interfere with other people's business as he has been in the habit of doing in the past. The minister, as a representative of that class that can hardly tell a bass from a tenor voice, protested strongly against being stopped on the street by this devotee of Paderewski to hear him sing the Dead March in Saul over the graves of Peterborough's musical corps. Another man who takes unnatural pleasure in extolling the advantages of a University education when surrounded by men and women who have not had his opportunities will henceforth be best able to display his culture by boasting his Alma Mater only in the company of other graduates.

The text which was taken from the eighth chapter of Acts and the twentieth verse opened up a very wide field of which the minister took full advantage. In this he was ably assisted by the choir, whose anthem, "God of Our Fathers," fully deserved the special praise it received from the Rev. Mr. Webb. Simon the sorcerer has many counterparts among the men of to-day, and of the method that should be adopted in dealing with these the minister spoke in no uncertain tone. "The community, the state, the church, must get rid of every contaminating influence. We must exert ourselves to clear out the Simons who have prospered unfairly."

Paradoxical as it may seem, the minister was able to prove that such a course would strengthen the church He quoted the case of several ministers who were discussing revivals. After several had told how many had been converted in revivals in their churches, another one remarked quietly that during the revival in his church forty-two names had been struck off the roll.

A sermon without some reference to the great struggle in Europe would be quite an oddity. "I believe that absolute humility is the only settlement for the international troubles of to-day," declared the minister, with an emphasis that carried conviction to the minds of his audience. "Wealth and pride are not necessarily always associated," he declared, "and the poverty of the poorest man is no safeguard against the invidious advances of pride."

Convictions Illegal In London Court

London, Ont., September 29. — It has been discovered that all convictions of the police court within the last ten days were illegal.

Magistrate Graydon is ill and according to the revised statutes, the Mayor must appoint the temporary official. The authorities neglected to do this. A large number of very heavy fines for breaking the license law are involved.

BANK CLEARINGS FOR THE MONTH

The bank clearings for the month of September were considerably higher than for a corresponding period of last year. The figures for the past three years are as follows:

September, 1915 ..... $1,548,213
September, 1916 2,223,912
September, 1917 2,560,818

A NOVEL BED FOR SAVING FLOOR SPACE

In the new Goodwill Apartment house on Water street, there is being installed in some of the living rooms a movable folding bed of a very ingenius construction. It is called the Murhpy Bed, and is a wonderfully convenient piece of bedroom furniture for saving floor space. The most important features are the facility with which it can be folded and moved out of the way during the day when not in use, and the simplicity with which it can be replaced when used at night. Where it is intended to be used in a living room at night, the head of the bed is attached to one side of the opening into a clothes closet by a swinging device. The bed posts are jointed and fold over on the bedclothing, so as to keep it firmly in its place; and as the foot of the bed is raised up to fold back into the closet it swings round until the whole bed is snugly stowed away in the closet, when the door is shut and no bed is to be seen. The bed closes with all the bedding in perfect order, and is ready for the occupant at any time.

The Murphy bed is made in several sizes, single and double, with solid comfort springs of a new combination. It has a most attractive appearance—is finished in brass, absolutely sanitary.

Messrs. Ephgrave and Burnett, the local contractors for the Goodwill Apartment House, have secured the agency for this district, and will be pleased to show any enquirers its modus operandi.

Body of Canadian Found in Erie Canal

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The body of William Henry Butler, aged 53, was found floating in the Erie Canal here to-da He was clad in the uniform of the Canadian infantry. Papers in his pockets showed him to be a member of the 39th Battalion, whose headquarters were in Kingston, Ont. Butler came here on September 20 to visit his daughter, Mrs. Staia MacKie, employed at 719 Park Avenue. She notified the police of his disappearance on Tuesday. On Saturday night cries were heard following a splash in the canal near Meiggs street. The police learned that Butler had been in that locality, and had been in several salons and had he claimed been robbed of his money and a gold watch. Nothing of any value was found on the remains to-day. Coroner Killip is not sure the drowning was accidental. Butler was a native of Cobourg.

Members Come To Blows in House of Representatives

Committee Decides to Drop Biproduct of $50,000 Incident.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—After a heated session the House rules committee refused to act on resolutions proposing congressional investigation of Representative Heflin's charges that a number of members of Congress "had acted suspiciously" about the time Count von Bernstorff asked his Government for authority to spend $50,000 to influence Congress on the submarine warfare issue.

Norton, who led the attack on Heflin for his charges, had gone over to the Democratic side to talk to Heflin. The row broke out at once. The two men clinched and fell on a row of hats, while friends from both sides of the hall piled around and separated them before blows were struck.

Speaker Clark banged for order, while members leaped over seats and down the aisles to reach the strggling men. The sergeant-at-arms, hurriedly grasping his mace, ran toward the combatants. Disorder reigned in the galleries where people rose from their seats and rushed to the rail to see into the pit of the House.

George St. Methodist Sunday School's Annual Rally Day Had A Record Attendance

The annual rally of the George street Sunday school was held yesterday at three o'clock. In spite of the inclement weather there was a splendid attendance of scholars, officers, teachers and ministers, numbering 627, which makes a new record in the history of the school. The programme, which was in charge of the Superintendent, Mr. C. C. Parsons, was of such an interesting character that the attention of the children was gained and held throughout.

Rev. A. J. Thomas gave a delightful and instructive object talk on the lead pencils, from which he drew some very helpful suggestions for the moulding of the young lives. To the two youngest members of the beginners' department, Mr. Thomas presented two of the many pencils which he had used in his talk.

The splendid music of the orchestra under the direction of Mr. W. H. Cunningham, added greatly to the service and the solo by Miss Fern Johnston, a younger member of the school, was also much enjoyed.

During the session the members of Miss McKay's class presented a cheque for one hundred dollars towards the building fund. This is a most encouraging evidence of the interest of the scholars in the erection of a new Sunday school.

The management committee hopes that this record attendance may continue, and as the present facilities are inadequate, a new and an up-to-date school will be the result.

SEINN FEINER FUNERAL WAS A LARGE ONE

Irish Volunteers Attended in Body Armed With Hurley Sticks

Canadian Press Despatch:

DUBLIN, Oct. 1.—The funeral procession which followed the body of Thomas Ashe, Sinn Fein leader, who died in prison, from the City Hall to Glasnevin cemetery yesterday, was extremely large, exceeding in number even that of the Parnell funeral in 1891. The Irish volunteers wore their uniforms and carried Hurley sticks, although these were offences against the recent military regulations. There was also a firing party at the grave side. The Government authorities did not interfere with the demonstrations which were most impressive. The embittered feeling over the death of Ashe was much allayed by a change in the policy of the treatment of prisoners under the Defence of Realm Act. The prisoners are now allowed to associate together and are separated from the ordinary criminals. They are allowed to receive food from the outside. The hunger strike was abandoned when the Lord Mayor carried the decision of the government to the prisoners.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR PTE. R. WILSON

Impressive Service in Young's Pt. Church Last Night

A memorial service for Private Reyden Wilson, who was killed in action in France on August 24th, was held yesterday in St. Aiden's church, Young's Point. The church was appropriately draped in black and white and the service conducted by the rector, Rev. J. J. Robbins, who made touching references to Pte. Wilson, who before enlistment was a faithful member of St. Aiden's. Mr. Robbins also spoke of Pte. Hubert Stuart, another member of the Church who also made the supreme sacrifice lately.

SEVEN FIRES DURING MONTH

The Fire Department during September was given seven runs. Six were to fires of a minor order. Three chimney fires, two the results of boys playing with matches, and one an overheated stove. The only serious fire was a case of spontaneous combustion at the Grand Hotel yard, which, but for the prompt arrival of Chief George and the department, would probably have resulted in a serious fire. Seven miles were covered in the different fires by the department.

Baptie Is Acquitted Of Blame By Council

London, September 30.—The British Weekly states that a rumour is current that the War Council has completely exonerated Surgeon-General W. Baptie from all responsibility for the medical disasters in Mesopotamia after a careful examination of the facts. General Baptie was chairman of a commission of enquiry into the Canadian medical service.

An Assemblage of Fascinating Dresses

Charmingly varied are the silk, satin and crepe-de-chine Dress creations assembled on our second floor. The tendency of the mode toward draperies is evidenced in many of the most stylish numbers and characterizing the entire display is individuality and refinement.

Dress at $35.00

Black georgette has been employed in the making of this unusual model, but georgette alone was not sufficient to make it so pleasing. Therefore the designer used a drop lining of white and made an elaborate trimming of white soutache braid on hem of skirt and belt. The collar of white georgette, is very much in harmony.

Dress at $38.00

Silk crepe de chine in a pleasing shade known as Quaker grey; the waist is surplice style with draping crossed in front and fastened with pearl buckles; close fitting cuffs, and running the entire length of the sleeve is a narrow pleat; skirt is draped from the hips. The entire effect is enhanced by workings of marine blue and gold embroidery, judiciously placed on cuffs, collar and bodice.

Dress at $30.00

Silk crinkle crepe is the material employed in this charming number and to those who are lovers of taupe, this garment will have a particularly strong appeal. A narrow tie girdle emphasizes a high waist line; immediately above and below the girdle are two embroidery designs worked in pink, grey, rose and green, the collar comes to a point at the back and is decorated with a gold ball ornament; the sleeves are of georgette cut on the new flowing style and garnished with bands of crinkle crepe.

Dress at $39.50

In this model of black satin the draped skirt has acquired a remarkable amount of attractiveness. From a wide panel that extends down the front the drapes fall in graceful folds and then taper in towards the bottom. The bodice is garnished with two arrow shaped designs done in black embroidery; the sleeves are of black georgette with a cluster of seven narrow tucks and two wide. White georgette collar with black embroidery.

The GRESSMAN Co. Limited

The "Golden Lion" Trade Mark Has Been Removed

Trade Mark of the Robt. Fair & Co. Store For Many Years—Replaced By Handsome Gold Sign

The Golden Lion which has stood out for years in the front of the dry goods store of Robt. Fair & Co., was removed a few days ago on account of its being unsafe to the public.

The Golden Lion has been the guiding star for many shoppers, both in and out of town for years, and was about the only mark on George street that former residents of the city could recognize on visits back to Peterborough. However, it was found necessary to take it down, and no doubt Mr. Fair felt like losing an old friend. It has been replaced by a handsome new and up-to-date gold sign, which it is hoped will have as many years of service as the old trade mark, the Golden Lion.

Kingston's First Semi-ready Store

Kingston is to have it's first real Semi-ready Store. David J. Will, of Huntingdon, is opening a new store on Princess Street. Every garment in his store will be a genuine Semi-ready with the price label in the pocket.

It has been demonstrated that men's fashion shops, selling only these high-class goods, can be profitably maintained in other than the largest cities.

The fact that the margin between the cost and label price is so small has prejudiced most merchants against selling Semi-ready clothes alone; they want the unpriced clothes upon which larger profits can be made in mid-season.

FULL-BLOODED IROQUOIS IN THE "SKY PILOT"

A picturesque addition to the company presenting "The Sky Pilot," the play taken from two of Ralph Connor's famous stories of the Northwest, is Chief Deer, a full-blooded Iroquois Indian, whose features and physique might serve as a model for artists or for Government coins and banknotes. He has had quite a career on the stage and acting for the screen and is considered an admirable specimen of his race.

Chief Deer, when a young man, lived in the Indian settlement of Kanawaki on the St. Lawrence River, opposite Lachine, Quebec, and not far from Montreal. Here he was a member of a noted Indian lacrosse team who were the champions of Canada in their day.

Many Barn Fires Throughout Ontario

The crop of barn fires throughout Ontario is far too abundant, according to the reports which are being filed with the Provincial Fire Marshall. Mr. Heaton stated that the barn fires reported during August represented a loss of a quarter of a million dollars and during the last few weeks the money losses have been considerably increased by reason of the fact that in many cases the entire storable portion of the year's crops have gone up in flames, owing to spontaneous combustion in the mows, where insufficiently dried crops have heated to the point of ignition during the frequent warm spells which have occurred since harvesting.

ONION GROWER IS LIKELY TO CLEAR $40,000 THIS YEAR

Toronto Man Tries to Buy Five Carloads of Tomatoes.

LEAMINGTON, Oct. 1.—A Toronto dealer who was here trying to secure five carloads of late tomatoes failed. Late tomatoes here are very scarce, as they are only one-third the crop of former years.

The onion crop has been the best in years, and dealers are now buying at $2.30 per bag. One large grower will probably realize $40,000 from his crop, and others all the way from $1,000 to $20,000.

Onion land has increased materially in value this year.

A BIG FISH CAUGHT AT CHEMONG

The Catch of the Season—Took Three and One-half Hours to Land

Mr. L. B. Treacy, who with his family has been spending the season at Chemong Park, has found the fishing the past week the best so far this year. One of the catches he made which is thought to be the biggest in this district this season, was a monstrous 26-lb. lunge which took three hours and a half to land. Mr. Treacy is having the head mounted which looks about as big as a shark.

Girl Appears On Serious Charge

Charged With Concealing Birth of Child.

On Wednesday Miss Minnie Nellins appeared before His Honour Judge Ward on a charge of concealing the birth of a child on or about the 12th day of August, 1917.

From the evidence it appears that Miss Nellins had been working for Mr. and Mrs. James McCullough of Clarke Tp. A young boy, Roy Sanford, also worked for them. On the afternoon of the 12th Mrs. McCullough and her son went away to visit some of the neighbours, not returning until late in the evening, while Miss Nellins, Roy Sanford and the husband, a man of about 80 years of age, remained at home. It appears that about 10 p.m. or a little earlier all retired to their rooms for the night. However, a little later Sanford was awakened by the girl knocking on his door and telling him she was sick. The boy, got up and dressed and came downstairs and was going to telephone for the doctor when Mrs. McCullough came in. He then went out to put the horse and rig away. In the meantime the girl got downstairs and out into the yard, where the child was supposed to have been born, as there was evidence of it in the berry patch. The boy returning from the barn found the girl at the door in a fainting condition and he carried her into the house, and the doctor arrived shortly after. Dr. Dougal McKenzie stated he found the girl in an exhausted condiion. The doctor said he could not swear that a child had been born—he hadn't examined closely enough although it was quite possible.

Chief Jarvis of Bowmanville said the girl told him she had had a child but the grounds had been searched and nothing had been found.

RALLY SERVICE AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

Rev. Mr. Rowand Addressed the Children at the Morning Service on "The Flag."

THE CHURCH NOTES

The Sunday school held a rally service with the congregation at the morning hour of worship. There was a large attendance of children, young people and adults. The choir for the service was composed of boys and girls, and their bright young faces and melodious voice gaves emphasis to the service of praise.

The pastor, Mr. Rowand, gave an address to the children on "The Flag," and showed how the three crosses of St. George of England, St. Andrew of Scotland and St. Patrick of Ireland, were combined to make the Union Jack. St. George's Cross was made the battle-flag of England by King Richard on his return from the Crusades. In 1606, on the ascension of King James the Sixth, of Scotland to the English throne, it was combined with St. Andrew's Cross of Scotland to make the Union Flag of England and Scotland. In 1801, when Ireland was united with England, St. Patrick's cross was added, and the three crosses form the Union Jack.

The pastor exhorted the children to be good followers of St. George and to slay the dragons of tyranny, intemperance and sin; of St. Andrew, and be manly and brave, as the name Andrew means, and to bring others to the Sunday school, and church and Christ as Andrew did, and also of St. Patrick, who went back to Ireland as a missionary to the very people who held him in slavery for six years, thus forgiving his enemies, and seeking to win them for Christ.

The pastor afterwards gave an address to the adults, speaking on the duties of parents, and that the church should support the work of the Sunday school on account of its great importance.

Many kind words were spoken of the service, and the hope was expressed that a similar service might be held frequently.

The Rev. Dr. Lee conducted the service in the evening, and delivered a sermon on "The Odour of the Ointment That Filled the Room," which was much appreciated.

A number of meetings will be held during the week.

On Monday a Rally meeting of the Willing Workers Mission Band will be held at 4.15 p.m.

On Tuesday at 8 p.m. the Young Ladies' Mission Band will meet for sewing.

Prayer service will be held on Wednesday at 8 p.m.

On Thursday the Red Cross Society meet from 3 to 5 p.m. for receiving and giving out work.

The Managing Board meet on Thursday evening at 8 p.m.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society will be held in the Ladies' Parlour on Friday at 3.30 p.m.

Caring for Jewelry

Plain gold brooches, rings, bracelets and chains may be cleaned easily, by washing them in a lather, made by a good, pure, white soap and warm water. Be sure to dry them well, then rub them gently with a piece of chamois skin. That will polish them.

Never put pearls in water, as it is quite likely to darken them. And the same applies to turquoises; water is not at all good for them.

If you get your diamond ring very dirty, you may wash it carefully in good white soap suds, but be sure to dry it carefully and polish it gently with chamois.

One thing that is wise for every woman to keep in her room is a Jewel Box, for holding her Jewelry. We show various designs, engraved and plain, inexpensively priced.

No Evidence That Liquor Was Sold

A Charlotte street young married man appeared in police court this morning on a charge of selling liquor without a license. Receipts of packages from Montreal on September 14th and 21st were admitted. The first, he stated, was a one quart imperial bottle of whisky, which was invoiced seventeen pounds. Three pints on the 21st weighed only fourteen pounds. It was shown that the liquor had been shipped in heavy maple boxes as strong as shell cases. Magistrate Dumble dismissed the charge which was laid by Inspector Stewart on strong suspicions that were aroused by the quantities of liquor received and the presence at the Charlotte street house of an inveterate "drinker" whose last appearance in court was only a few days ago.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES A. STOREY.

Mrs. James A. Storey died this afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, at her residence, 464 Weller street. Further particulars, including the funeral arrangements, will be published later.

MRS. DAVID BYERS.

Mary Watson, beloved wife of David Byers, died this afternoon at 2.30, at 335 Sherbrooke street, after an illness of a few days' duration. Mrs. Byers was born in South Monaghan and had until six months ago resided in Bailieboro practically all her life. Of a retiring disposition and a faithful and loving mother, Mrs. Byers' death will be keenly regretted by all who knew her. There are left of the immediate family to mourn her death, besides her husband, six sons, Wm. J. and Robert of Byersville, George and John Albert of Hamilton township, Wesley of Byersville and Thomas of Peterborough, four sisters, Mrs. Thomas Moncrief, Shelbourne, Mrs. John Finney and Mrs. James Thompson, South Monaghan and Mrs. Hogg, New Zealand, and two brothers, Mr. Robinson Pacey and Mr. Wm. Pacey, of Shelbourne.

The funeral from the residence of her son, 335 Sherbrooke street, will take place on Wednesday at 2.30 to the Little Lake cemetery, Rev. Mr. Mackenzie officiating.

JOHN JAMES MARTIN.

The death occurred on Saturday in the Toronto General Hospital of John James Martin, Bethune street, in his 68th year. He was born in Shoreham, Sussex, Eng., and had lived in Peterborough about three years. Mr. Martin was a familiar figure as flag bearer of the Temple Corps of the Salvation Army, and speaking of his fidelity to duty, Adjutant McElhiney said that he had never met a man who was more faithful to his charge. Mr. Martin had never been late for the open-air meetings, and he was usually the first member at the appointed places. Fair or unfavourable weather made no difference to him, and his death will leave a gap in the Army ranks. The deceased leaves his wife and three daughters: Mrs. George Ouston and Mrs. D. Hill of this city, and Mrs. Hayward of Cobourg. His son, Sergeant Peter Martin, D.C.M. of the 93rd Battalion which he joined after returning from the front, was killed in action several months ago, after extensive and gallant service.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday aftrnoon at 3 o'clock, from the Salvation Army Temple, Simcoe street, following a public service, commencing at 2 o'clock. The Temple Band will attend and accompany the funeral to the Little Lake cemetery.

PRIVATE EDWARD PAYNE
Killed in Action, October 1st, 1915.

In memory of Private Edward Payne, who was killed in action on October the first, nineteen hundred and sixteen.

Short and sudden was the call

The blow was great,
The shock severe,
We little thought his death so near,
And only those who love can tell
The pain at not saying
The last farewell.

RUSH OF ORDERS FOR CITY COAL TO-DAY

The lower temperature this morning was reflected in the increased number of orders for coal received at the City Treasurer's Office. Evidently the reports that the local demand has been largely supplied in advance of the cold season have been a trifle optimistic. The demand on the municipal depot has shown practically no relaxation and the orders already booked will be largely supplied with the arrival of the cars that are expected here shortly.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Fat bulls have been selling in Denmark at 20c to 24c per lb.

The Caledonia Junior Farmers' Association has given orders for thirty-two bushels of kiln-dried seed corn.

Calves suffer in bad weather and a few days' exposure to cold and dampness have stunted thrifty, growthy calves.

An abnormal development of rust on grain in Carleton County this year was attributed to buckthorn hedges in the neighbourhood.

Mr. Vance, of Bosanquet Township, has been growing sweet clover for a number of years. He considers it one of his most valuable crops. Many of his neighbours are following his example, and many fields of sweet clover are to be seen in the township.

Official figures show that cattle in France at the close of 1916 had decreased 17 per cent. in three years, sheep 33 per cent., swine 38 per cent.

It appears now more than ever before as if commercial apple growing were a specialized business beyond the reach of the average farmer. — Farmers' Advocate.

The directors of the Thunder Bay Co-operative Marketing Association decided to market this year's potato crop through the association, a manager being engaged to work on a commission basis of 4 per cent.

It is as necessary for the student of agriculture to know as much about farm engines and machinery as he does about horses and cattle. Does he get the same training at our agricultural schools and colleges? If he doesn't he should.—Farmers' Advocate.

At a co-operative auction sale of cattle in Thunder Bay district one grade cow and her calf sold for $166 and another for $150. Forty-three head of cattle, including some beef type animals of cows, two-year-olds and yearlings, brought a grand total of $3,830.

If the remnants of old garden crops are destroyed immediately after harvest and weeds are kept down along fencerows, injuries by insects and diseases to vegetables next year will be materially lessened, according to specialists of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

Man and Wife Killed in Draft Trouble Fight

Georgians Die in All Night Combat With Citizens.

HAWKINSVILLE, Ga.—Mrs. Thomas Simon and her husband were killed here in a fight with citizens lasting during most of the night, and which started as a result of trouble over Simon being certified for draft in the national army. A posse is searching for Mose Simon, a brother of the dead man.

Three citizens aiding the officers were injured. Allen Dortch fell wounded in a lung; M. L. Dembray was shot in an ear, and John Hill, a planter, received a bullet wound in the arm.

Claimed Exemption.

Thomas Simon maintained he was an alien enemy and had a brother in the Turkish army, when he claimed exemption from the draft. This could not be established to the satisfaction of the exemption board and he was certified.

Simon met a member of the exemption board in a drug store and it is said struck him and ran to the store operated by Simon and his brother. Parsons who saw them enter the store said that they and Mrs. Simon immediately armed themselves with pistols and rifles.

Greeted With Bullets.

Some time afterwards officers went to the store to to arrest Thomas Simon for the alleged assault. They were greeted with a fusillade of bullets, but returned the fire, and Mrs. Simon fell dead. Every cartridge in the pistol found by her right hand had been discharged.

After this first brush the two men in the store barricaded themselves in a vault and it is said fired at any one showing himself. Several vehicles were struck.

At 4 o'clock in the morning the officers and citizens closed in on the store and the two men attempted to escape by the rear door, firing as they went. Thomas Simon was killed, but Mose got away.

Argentine Is Cut Off From The Outside World

Stevedores Join the Ranks of the Strike and Cut Off the Last Line of Communication—Martial Law May Be Declared

FOOD PRICES TREBLE

(By Chas P. Stewart.)

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 2. — Food prices already doubled by the general strike, trebled to-day, when the last line of communica n between the city and the outside world was closed by the strikers. The decision of the stevedores to join the strike tied up the entire port of Buenos Aires. All railroads are already stopped. The Government still withheld a declaration of martial law throughout the nation. Such a step had been advertised as likely to be made effective yesterday. No explanation was given of delay. Great suffering has been caused among the poorer classes by scarcity of food, particularly milk.

TWO MEN SPENT THIRTY HOURS IN FLANDERS MUD

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Major-General Frederick B. Maurice, director of Military Operations at the War Office, who has just returned from one of his frequent trips to the front in France, was asked by the Associated Press correspondent what phase of battle-front activity had on this occasion impressed him most.

"Always the same thing—the mud" he replied. "It is the most remarkable mud in the world. As an enemy it is more persistent than the German and more deadly than his artillery.

"I had a remarkable object lesson of the power of the Flanders mud during my week in the battle area. I visited a hospital where they had two of our men who had been rescued after spending thirty hours in the grip of a Flanders mud-hole. The two men, advancing across No-Man's land in the semi-darkness, had stumbled into an old shell hole and found themselves inextricably in the clutches of the thick mud at the bottom. When they were found, they had been there for thirty hours, and had been drawn waist-deep into the clay.

"All sorts of expedients were tried to extricate them, and it was finally deemed necessary to fit a harness to them and pull them out with a team of mules. Both men had their hips and knees dislocated in the process. That is Flander's mud!"

ENNISMORE EXTENDS A WARM WELCOME TO PTE. THOMAS MURRAY

PRESENTATION MADE

In St. Martin's Parish Hall, Ennismore, on the evennig of Thursday, Sept. 27th, assembled in goodly numbers joyous and enthusiastic members of the congregation to give welcome to another recently returned soldier boy. This time this brave young man was Pte. Thomas Murray, of the 21st Battalion, who had spent two years overseas, during which period he several times was gassed and received shrapnel wounds.

Pte. Murray was especially honoured on this occasion by the presence of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien and Rev. Dean McColl, of Peterborough, and Rev. Father McCauley, parish priest of Ennismore. During the course of the evening His Lordship, whose fatherly interest in Ennismore is much appreciated and whose untiring efforts in patriotic circles are well known, gave in his own fluent style an appealing address on "Win the War Measures," while the Rev. Dean McColl, for whom "the latch key always hangs outside the door" in Ennismore, was perhaps never heard to more advantage. His ready wit and good, sensible remarks followed in pleasing succession. Rev. J. V. McCauley, in highly congratulatory phrases, expressed his own and the parish's pride in Pte. Murray for his self-sacrifices on behalf of mankind, while the Rev. Father, as chairman of the evening, proved beyond doubt that, in him, Ennismore has a live wire, not only in religious, but social affairs.

St. Martin's choir and their Chemong friends, ably assisted by the pupils of the High School, rendered the following appropriate programme:

Opening Selections by the Orchestra.

Chairman's Address—Rev. J. V. McAuley.

Chorus—"We'll Fight for King and Country"—St. Martin's Choir.

Solo—"Ireland Must be Heaven," Miss L. O'Donoghue.

Recitation—"When Pa Takes Care of Me," Eileen Young.

Solo—"Good-Night," Gladys Kennedy.

Recitation—"Cause of the War," Master James Gifford.

Address and Presentation to Pte. Thomas Murray.

Selection by the Orchestra.

Recitation—"Young Fellow, My Lad," Bernardine Young.

Solo—"Wee Lassie," Mr. C. Telford.

Recitation — "Johnny's First Moose," Mr. J. Jopling.

Solo—"We're Just Plain Folks," Mr. J. K. Galvin.

Recitation—"The Bachelor's Sale," Bernice Scollard.

God Save the King.

To Pte. Thomas Murray:

It is but four months since we people of Ennismore assembled in this same hall to welcome our first returned soldier. Happy were we then, but happier by far as we now, for we know that a second boy, willing though he was to make the supreme sacrifice, has been honourably discharged.

We cannot claim the honour of numbering you among those who enlisted in one of our county battalions, yet we feel proud that this is your home, and we count the glory you have won in some measure ours. We all know that the 21st Battalion, Kingston, played no small part in the fierce struggles at St. Eloi and Hooge, Loos, and we have only to glance at your frank, open countenance to be fully convinced that in the cruel test while your strength endured yours was a manly role.

How often later during the long, weary nights as you suffered in the hospital a nervous breakdown must you have longed to be back once more among your childhood companions, and what a feeling of joy must there be to-night, when you realize that you have served your country well and nobly, and that the terrible experiences you have undergone are to you now but as a hideous nightmare.

Once more then, Mr. Murray, let us welcome you back, and while we congratulate your good mother on having so worthy a son, we ask you as a token of our appreciation of your heroic deeds in our behalf to accept this purse. We hope it may in some slight manner serve as a tangible proof of our sincerity and we pray that God's blessing may be with you always.

Signed on behalf of the Township of Ennismore.

In replying, Pte. Murray showed that he was more than grateful, but begged to be excused from making any lengthy remarks.

Internal Troubles Will Not Crush Huns

MUST BE BEATEN ON THE FIELD SAYS EX-AMBASSADOR GERARD.

VICTORIA, Oct 1.—"If it had not been for Great Britain she would have had the world by the throat, and now we stand together on both sides of the line for the Monroe doctrine," said ex-Ambassador Gerard in his speech before the Canadian Club here, when he aroused his hearers to a high pitch of enthusiasm by recounting his experiences as ambassador to Berlin during the thirty-two months of war.

"In October, 1915, the Kaiser stood in front of me, his nose not three inches from mine, and told me 'After the war I shall stand no nonsense from America.' I wonder if the Kaiser has thought about that statement since. But Prussian development of South America had been the dream of pan-Germans and the war party for years.

"It will be impossible to put together again such a league of nations as is now combined to fight Prussia. Prussia hopes to bring about such a peace as will detach from that group a sufficient number of countries to give herself an unquestioned superiority to any ambitious war she may seek to wage."

Mr. Gerard said in conclusion: "We have got to beat them in the field. Have no illusions, no false ideas that we can win by using hunger or civil strife within Germany. We must get at it with every atom of energy and fight, and I think the Anglo-Saxons on both sides of the line have it in them to continue the fight until triumphant."

British Drive Believed To Be In The Making

German Official Statement Refers to "Intense Artillery Activity" —Haig Reports Counter Attacks

GROUNDS FOR RETICENCE

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The phrase "intense artillery activity in Flanders" in the German official statement, coupled with Field Marshall Haig's recent reticence in describing British operations, led to the widespread belief to-day that a new British drive is in the making. Haig adopted exactly this course of secrecy and of tremendous artillery preparations before his strokes at Messines Ridge, Vimy and in the Ypres sector. The enemy has been striving desperately now for three days to gain back some of the ground lost in the Ypres-Menin road sectors. Haig's latest report detailed this counter attack.

Korniloff Was A Peasant's Son

Military Leader Personally Arrested the Tsar and Tsarina

A great scholar, speaking no fewer than fifteen languages, and a highly scientific soldier to boot, General Korniloff, the new Russian Commander-in-Chief, is a self-made man, if ever there was one.

At the age of thirteen he was a shepherd boy on the Siberian Steppes. He could neither read nor write. But a political exile in his father's village taught him the alphabet, and after working practically alone for three years at the task of educating himself, he was received at the age of sixteen into the Siberian School of Cadets.

Thence he went to the Petrograd Military Academy, where he had a brilliant career, passing all his examiantions at the head of his class, and finally graduating at the famous Michailovsk School of Gunnery as a full-fledged artillery officer.

A Model Regiment.

Korniloff's military genius was first displayed during the Russo-Japanese war, when he earned the coveted St. George's Cross for covering the retreat from Mukden of one of General Kuropatkin's beaten armies.

At the outbreak of the present war he was given command of a division —the 48th—and he set to work forthwith to make it a model unit for the whole Russian army.

So well did he succeed that in the course of a few months his command owing to their bravery and dash, was unofficially dubbed the "Terrible Division." Unfortunately, however, their gallant leader was badly wounded at the disastrous Battle of Gorlice, fought on May 3rd, 1915, and after hiding for five days in the woods, feeding on roots and berries hunger compelled him to surrender to the Austrians.

He Escaped.

There followed fifteen months rigorous captivity, but in August, 1916, Korniloff escaped by night from his prison camp, and, eventually, after many exciting adventures and hair-breadth escapes, he reached Russia.

Reporting himself at headquarters, he was made Military Commandant of Petrograd. He was one of the leaders of the Revolution, and all through he has been a staunch upholder of the Provisional Government.

It was Korniloff, it will be remembered, who personally arrested the Tsar and Tsarina. Later on he asked to be relieved of his command at the capital and sent back to the front. "I am a fighting General," he said, "accustomed to act and not to talk. In Petrograd most of the time is spent in talking."—Pearson's Weekly.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"What matters it to you whether they be or not? By the Lord Harry, see that you let the fellow alone, or it will be the worse for you both." With sudden anger he swung about, facing the woman in green. "As for you, trouble-maker," he cried, "listen to what I say. If you come here again with your jealousies and your devilries, I'll have you stripped and beaten in the market-place. A pretty pass, by Heaven, when I must be annoyed by the back-biting tales of cast-off mistresses. Away with you. I hold my women by right of the sword, and no man from Panama to Barbados has yet dared dispute it. Leave me, before I forget that you once shared my bed."

"So be it." Mistress Devereux turned toward the gate. "You are master here. But watch your cooing dove, Firebrand. Watch her well. She has a silken tongue, the laughing devil."

"Go!" Ormiston thundered, pointing to the gate.

Mistress Devereux moved slowly toward it, her face sullen with rage. As she reacher the road she turned.

"Take care," she flung back, with a discordant laugh, "lest she laugh at you."

CHAUTER III.

"Bull" Ormiston was the product of the amours of a titled follower of the first Charles on the one hand, and a vicious French femme de chambre on the other, and it is probable that he inherited most of the worst qualities of both. Exception must be made, however, in favour of his personal appearance, which was doubtless his mother's most redeeming quality, and of his courage, which had to some extent distinguished his father.

The latter Ormiston had never known, nor is it at all certain that his sire was even aware, of his existence. His mother, with the unquenchable ardor of maternal love, had brought him to his teens in some sort of comfort, before her unimportant life was snuffed out as a consequence of her gay and iridescent past; from then on he had buffeted the world alone.

By devious ways he managed to live, drifting upon the stagnant waters of the half world, until, at the age of twenty, he found himself a stable boy in an inn at Bristol. Here in this, the second greatest seaport in England, he had unusual opportunity to hear the marvelous stories told by returning travellers, of the wealth and beauty of the new western world on the other side of the ocean, the colonization of which was then just in its infancy. Many a night did he spend hanging about the tap room of the inn, listening to these adventurous tales, which, we may be sure, lost nothing in the telling. Most of all was he attracted by the accounts of the buccaneers; in his eyes they seemed little short of demi-gods, fighting beneath the flag of England to rid the southern seas of the devildoms of Spain. Weird tales were told of these worthies, of Montbar, commonly known as Peter the Great, who, with forty men, in two small boats, had captured a Spanish galleon of forty-guns, and with her, a Vice Admiral of Spain; of Lolonnois, made famous, or rather infamous, as one might care to regard it, by reason of his having, on one occasion, lined the crew of a captured Spanish vessel along the rail, and with his own hand struck off their heads one by one, licking his sword after each stroke and crying out his hatred of Spain. Many a night, as the boy lay in his straw bed in the stable, he pictured himself captain of a freebooter crew, pacing his quarter-deck proudly as his vessel overhauled some plate ship, heavily laden with the golden loot of the treasure houses of the Montezumas.

His manner of going to the western world was singularly at variance with these efforts of his imagination. One night there arrived at the tavern a party of set-faring men, outward bound for St. Kitts. Ormiston, who at this particular period of his life answered to the name of Raikes, managed to hold some conversation with one of them, who approached him in the stable yard ostensibly to make inquiry regarding his luggage. To him the boy confided his ambition to go to the new world in search of his fortune; his listener, with a great show of secrecy, agreed to see what he could do to arrange a passage. Raikes did not know that the practice of kidnapping raw hands to work in the plantations of the western world had its headquarters in Bristol, hence it was with a good deal of surprise that he awoke from a drugged sleep to find himself in the forehold of the brig Swallow, far down the Bristol Channel on his way to sea.

The subsequent adventures of Master Ormiston, until such time as he realized his ambition, and became in fact a member of the far-famed "Brethren of the Coast," are unimportant. Suffice it to say that they transformed him from a raw country lad to a man whose name was known throughout the length and breadth of the Indies. During the long voyage from Bristol of St. Kitts he was thoroughly initiated into the mysteries of seamanship as taught at the end of a handspike. Once landed, he spent five years working as a slave in the sugar plantations of the island. Eventually he escaped, and made his way to the buccaneering settlement of Tortuga, off the north coast of Haiti, or Hispaniola, as it was then called. Here he served under one commander after another, acquiring with each expedition a greater knowledge of seamanship, and with it a greater blood-lust to say nothing of a goodly store of doubloons, the which he wisely laid away, instead of pouring down his throat, as was the habit of the majority of his companions. When later the headquarters of the buccaneers was moved to the town of Port Royal, on the Island of Jamaica, Ormiston, as he now called himself, had already become known as a leader of resource and daring. Before long he found himself in command of a ten-gun shallop, and within a year he raised his flag at the fore-peak of a thirty-gun barque, captured from the Spanish at the point of the sword. Since then he had become one of Morgan's most trusted lieutenants, and from Cartagena to the Windward Island men trembled at the name of The Firebrand.

It would perhaps be unjust to accuse Ormiston of cruelty. In the atmosphere in which he moved there was no law save that of the sword. A pretext of war between England and Spain gave warrant to the buccaneers for attack on all ships flying the colors of Aragon and Castile. Captives who were not murdered in cold blood, or marooned on some desolate bit of sand, were taken to Port Royal and sold from the block like cattle, to drag out a miserable existence as slaves in the cane fields of the island. The buccaneers gave no quarter. To have done so would have been a violation of their code.

Unlike many of his companions, however, Ormiston still retained some vagrant sense of decency. Perhaps it was merely his personal pride, perhaps some instinct inherited from his dissolute but titled father Whatever the reason, his treatment of Ramona, since she had come into his power, had not been entirely devoid of kindness. Hitherto, however, no feeling of jealousy had entered his soul. It was a new and irritating experience, to feel that some other man had looked upon his property and found it good.

"Pretty tales, by Heaven!" he growled, regarding with narrowing eyes the girl in the hammock.

She forced a laugh, assumed an air of gayety.

"The woman loves you, Firebrand" she cried with high daring. "'Tis plain as day. Why do you not take her back?"

"Don't play with me, girl," he grumbled. "What she tells me of you and this fellow—"

"Lies—lies—! Surely they do not frighten you."

'Frighten me! God's blood! Am I to be made a fool of by a parcel of women?" He rose, and walking over to where Ramona sat, stood gazing moodily down at her.

She hastened to soothe him with smiles, and a suggestion of affectionate interest.

"Come, Master Crosspatch," she said. "Sit here beside me, and I'll sing you a song." She made room in the hammock, all the while watching him with the closest attention. From her manner it was evident that with this man she was never entirely off her guard.

'I want none of your songs!" Anger still shone in his narrowed eyes, his wrinkled forehead. "You say this fellow spoke to you twice?" The matter of the young Puritan clung burr-like within his brain.

"Twice. Once, and once again." She smiled mischeviously. "Was it not shameful?"

'Is he still in the town?" pursued Ormiston, ignoring her playfulness.

"How should I know?" With a petulant shug of her shoulders she intimated that the matter was of small interest to her.

"Well for you that you do not. If he dares speak to you again, let him look to his skin, for by the Lord Harry, I'd gladly slice him to ribbons."

The girl again tried to mollify him, this time with more success. With a light and coquettish manner she masked her growing terror. Inwardly she blessed the darkness, that prevented her agitation from becoming apparent. Beneath her assumed gayety lay an ever-present tragedy; it made itself manifest, in the lurking fear in her eyes, the twitching of her hands, the tremor in her voice.

"Come, Master Firebrand," she cried, pathetically gay. "Why do you frighten me with your black looks? Have I done aught to displease you?"

He pulled restlessly at his moustache, his eyes embracing her tender figure, her eager and expressive face. A mounting satisfaction shone in his hard eyes. This woman was, he felt, worth even his while.

"Yes," he said shortly. "As well you know."

"But not much—not very much, Firebrand." She tempted him with her eyes. He did not see the fires that burned beneath their drooping lids. Hatred, rather than love, smoldered in their depths. It would have surprised Ormiston greatly, could he have read the thoughts that were passing through the girl's mind. He had never regarded her as other than an unthinkable child.

"Enough of your deviltries," he exclaimed, laughing in spite of himself, albeit a somewhat grim laugh. Then, as though regretting his return to a semblance of amiability, he threw aside her detaining hand and began to stride restlessly up and down the garden.

"Firebrand," the girl continued, following his movements with somber eyes, "if you want this Devereux woman back, I'll not stand in the way. A handsome creature, is she not? Fine eyes, too, although her complexion is a little—yellow." She broke into a reckless laugh. "But what of that, since she loves you."

Ormiston stopped and turned toward her. Some vagrant sense of humor possessed him.

"A silken tongue, God's truth," he muttered. "They say in the town you have bewitched me."

"Bewitched you? Oh—no—no. Witches are old—and ugly." She gave a pretended shudder. Her manner of speaking, with its quaint Spanish flavour, lent to her words a singular and piquant charm. "What matters it after all what they say in the town? You spend overmuch time there of late, listening to tavern gossip."

TEUTON GHOULS RAVAGE COFFINS OF OLD CHATEAU

By Gilbert V. Seldes

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The territory recovered from the Germans is at best a ghastly sight, but there are some who have to bear an added burden of misery in viewing the ruins. They are the French men and women who come "home" to the battle area after the Boches have been driven away.

A pathetic return of this kind occurred at Thiepval a few days ago. The nobleman who owned the chateau which stood high on the plateau of Thiepval and overlooked the river Ancre, obtained permission from the authorities to visit his home. He was warned not to expect to see anything of the beautiful house, because Thiepval had been under heavy bombardment for many months. But he insisted on seeing it. After losing friends and relatives in the war he felt that he could stand the shock of seeing his home in ruins.

HAPPENS TO THOUSANDS

What happened to him has happened to many thousand others. They had been prepared by description and by pictures to expect utter desolation, but when they saw the horror of reality they found it far worse than they had imagined.

The Marquis of Thiepval came up the familiar road from Albert, through the ruins of villages each one of which used to be a familiar landmark. As he neared the village he began to scan the horizon for the turrets and chimneys of his chateau, but they were not to be seen. He looked more closely for walls and windows, but there was no sign. Finally as he left his motor and began to climb over the shell holes and craters on the hill he prayed that the foundation stones at least might be left.

Suddenly his guide stopped and said: "Here." The brokenhearted man looked about him. "Here?" he repeated dully. "Here? The chateau, here?" The guide shook his mere yes.

The Marquis looked around him. It was more than mere destruction. Elsewhere in France towns had been battered so that no two stones are left together—but here no single stone remains. Walls, doors, chimneys, everything which was once the chateau, had been battered into one huge ugly heap of dust. In the heap lay stocks of German rifles, clips of cartridges, bits of equipment. But of human habitation there was not a vestige.

The old man was stupified. "It is here, the chateau?" he asked again. "But no. It cannot be. How do you know it is here?" he asked, looking around at all the hillside. It seemed impossible to distinguish one spot from another.

I will show you how we know," said the guide, and led the way down a slight descent. As they descended the Marquis got a glimpse of a huge piece of wrought iron. He caught his breath. "It is the grill from the chateau grate," he said, and stopped to finger it sadly. "Yes, I am convinced now."

Presently the guide, a military police officer, stopped by what seemed to be the entrance to a dugout. "Perhaps you would rather not go in," he said. "It is the burial vault—and the Hun has been here."

The old man drew himself up and said firmly, "I can bear to see anything now."

COFFINS ARE ROBBED.

They went in. Lying near the entrance of the vault was a comparatively new coffin, made of the vault's oak doors, torn from their hinges In it, still partially uncovered, lay a German corpse, terrible to look upon, and against the coffin leaned the coffin slab, with the name carefully cut into the wood. The words, in German, were still faintly decipherable:

Killed at Thiepval,——, 1916.

"They did not have time to finish," said the guide. "We got them out rather suddenly at the end. But they had time for this ——" He pointed to the coffins, which stood in rows around the walls.

The Marquis looked—and saw that every one of the old coffins had been broken into and robbed. While the Germans were carefully preparing a grave for one of their own men they were just as carefully ravaging the ancient graves of their enemies.

"A double advantage," said the Marquis. "Yes—they are pigs. Let us go."

He led the way out, down to the road, not looking back at the ruins. He walked as quickly as he could, looking straight ahead to the place where his car waited. He told the chauffeur to drive back. He thanked the guide for his kindness.

And then, once in the car, he covered his face with his hands and cried.

LIBERTY LOAN 'MOVIES"

Leading Theatrical Folk Donate Services for the Films.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Secretary McAdoo announced last night that leading theatrical and moving picture stars of the country have taken part in a series of five hundred feet of moving picture films, which will be shown in the moving picture theatres of the country in the interests of the second Liberty loan of 1917.

These films, five in number, have been officially approved, and will be known as the 'all star production in patriotic episodes for the second Liberty loan of 1917."

The various stars are presented by David Belasco, De Wolf Hopper and Wilton Lackaye. Each reel is complete in itself, opening with a historical episode, including the signing of the Declaration of Independence, Betsy Ross and the first American flag, and the representation of the famous painting, "The Spirit of '76."

Among those who have taken part in the pictures are David Warfield, Raymond Hitchcock, John Drew, Douglas Fairbanks, Will Rogers, Ethel Barrymore, Mary Pickford, Wm. Stuart, Lillian Walker, Nance O'Neil, Lillian Russell, Bily Burke, Margarette Carke and Pauline Frederick.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Sometimes a Clear Conscience Needs No Accuser

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

I was shopping one day when a woman in the place where I was buying dry goods was arrested for shoplifting. She seemed to be a lady and very much cut up. She endeavored to convince the proprietor that she was respectable and had no occasion to steal, but he was obdurate, and the poor woman was hustled off to a police station. A few days later I saw by a newspaper that the lady was the wife of a wealthy and prominent man. She lived in another city, and, there being no one at hand to vouch for her, she spent the night in a cell. Her husband came for her, got her out and commenced suit against the dry goods firm for $100,000 damages.

This matter made so great an impression on me that I dreaded thereafter getting into such a position myself. I never went to a counter to look over goods but that I felt that the eyes of a detective were upon me.

One day while buying some goods I laid my bag on the counter to examine them. Several other persons came to the counter while I was there. When I finished making my purchases—they were to be sent home—I took up my bag and went to another counter, where I bought a spool of thread and, opening my bag to put in the purchase, noticed some bundles that I could not account for. Either they had been put in my bag or I had changed bags with some one else.

Remembering the case I have mentioned, I became terror stricken lest I should be arrested as a thief.

And here is where an innocent person is liable to incriminate himself. Unless very cool and collected there are nineteen chances in twenty that he will do the wrong thing, and there are nineteen chances in twenty that one, especially a woman, will not be cool and collected. I certainly was not, and I did not do what I should have done—that is, take the bag to the office and report the facts. My one desire was to get out of that store before the lynx eyed detective on duty should pounce upon me. I went toward the door in a great hurry, doubtless showing by my expression that I was a thief running away with goods.

I attracted the attention of a woman, who followed me out. I caught sight of her staring at me and, looking back on gaining the street, saw her coming behind me. I did not doubt that she was a detective, employed by the firm to watch shoplifters, and that I would be arrested as soon as she could secure the services of a policeman. I hurried on, she following as fast as she could. But she did not gain on me, for she was older than I and somewhat corpulent.

Seeing a cab standing beside the curb, I jumped in and told the cabman to drive me to my house. The woman, coming up as we were driving away, endeavored to attract the cabman's attention, but he did not see her. I saw her plainly enough, but I looked away, pretending not to see her. There was no other cab near, and I succeeded in getting away from the woman. When I reached home I ran in as quickly as I could, locked the door behind me, and after calling to the maid to admit no one I went upstairs to my room.

I had not been there long before there was a sharp ring at the doorbell. I remained in my room, shivering, and the summons was not answered. There was another and another ring, but after that whoever was there went away. I heard some one going down the steps and, looking out of the window, saw a policeman riding away on a motorcycle.

I determined to get away from the house before he could come back, but first concluded to examine the bag. It was not mine and contained a number of articles of no great value that were evidently purchases of a woman. Then I recalled that I had been at my jeweler's and brought away a valuable brooch that I had left there for repair. I had exchanged my brooch for a yard of cambric, six handkerchiefs, half a yard of dress lining and a number of other articles of no more value.

While I was preparing to continue my flight I heard a latchkey fumbling in the keyhole of the front door. I knew it was my husband and, ran downstairs, opened the door and when he entered fell into his arms. In reply to his agonized appeals to be told what was the matter I finally gasped that I was about to be arrested as a shoplifter. This naturally astonished him, and he worked hard with me till he got the story.

"Nonsense!" he exclaimed. "Some woman has unintentionally exchanged bags. Doubtless while shopping at the same counter with you you both laid down your bags and she picked up the wrong bag. When you turned for yours you took what was left."

There was another ring at the doorbell, and my husband insisted on going to the door. I ran upstairs and hid in the closet. Presently I heard him calling, but I remained where I was till he came upstairs with my lost bag.

The woman who had followed me, finding that she had exchanged bags with some one and seeing me leave the store, recognized me as one she had seen shopping beside her and had tried to catch me. Failing, she had sent a motorcycle policeman after me. He had returned, reported that he had failed to gain admittance, and the woman had come to restore my bag with a $1,000 brooch in it for her own containing articles worth very little.

Job's Star, Arcturus.

Arcturus, star of ancient poets, priests, astrologers and mystics, "Job's star," as it has been called, as it is mentioned in the wonderful book of that first dramatist, is 6,000 times more brilliant in its marvelous luminosity than our own little central luminary, which has a pitiable diameter of less than a million miles. By means of the spectroscope Arcturus is seen traveling across our line of vision at the inconceivable speed of probably 300 miles per second! Yet even at this amazing motion it would require 3,000 years for Arcturus to traverse the distance to us from the star nearest to our sun, that nearby star being the chief in the constellation of the Centaur and just a little matter of 25,000,000,000,000 miles distant from our sun!

The Discovery of Iron.

The Bible speaks of Tubal Cain as the discoverer of iron and the father of smiths. The Egyptians imputed to Hephaestus the same honor, while Pliny mentions it having been discovered by Dactyles on Mount Ida after the forests on the mountain side had been destroyed by lightning, this about 1432 B. C. Jeremiah and Ezekiel both mention iron in their Scriptural writings, the latter especially mentioning two qualities of the metal, calling one "bright iron," which was probably steel. Moses mentions an iron furnace, and Job speaks of iron as being taken out of the earth.

Genuine Felt.

Genuine felt is an "all wool" product. Alone among wool workers the felt manufacturer can take a whole fleece from the sheep's back and bring it out in the form of cloth. All the parts of the fleece rejected in other branches of the wool industry can be utilized by the felt maker.

ITALIANS TAKE 1,400 PRISONERS IN NEW DRIVE

ROME, Sept. 30.—In another powerful drive the Italians have captured the high ground to the south of Podlaca and southeast of Madoni, in the Isonzo sector. The official announcement of this by the War Office reports also the capture of 1,400 prisoners.

The text of the statement reads:

"By a sudden bold action we improved our position toward the southeastern edge of Bainsizza Plateau, capturing some high ground south of Podlaca and southeast of Madoni. We also captured forty-nine officers and 1,360 men.

COUNTER ATTACKS REPULSED

"Subsequently violent attacks, accompanied by a heavy bombardment, were repulsed and the positions maintained.

"Friday night and Saturday fresh attempts to dislodge us from the positions we had occupied between Sella di Dol and the northern slopes of Monte San Gabriele failed completely. Eighty-six prisoners, including six officers, were taken. On the remainder of the front there was considerable artillery activity, and numerous patrol actions took place.

"Air fighting was very brisk on the whole Julian front. Our air squadrons yesterday bombarded enemy ports at Beri, northeast of Nabrenina, and last night military works of the fortress of Pola with excellent results. The reaction of the enemy was vigorous everywhere. One of our machines has not returned. Two enemy airplanes were brought down in aerial combat in the neighborhood of Monfalcone and east of Ternova."

AIRMEN BOMB POLA.

The Saturday statement follows:

"Yesterday, by a completely successful surprise attack, our troops rectified our line between Sella di Dol and the northern slopes of Monte San Gabriele. Eight officers, 216 men, and a few machine guns were captured. The position was maintained and strengthened, notwithstanding the fact that the enemy, having recovered from his surprise, repeatedly counter-attacked.

"Our air attacks were concentrated on the military zone of the Carso, which was effectively bombarded with about three tons of bombs, and on the fortified naval centre of Pola, where the submarine base and arsenal were again bombed with numerous projectiles by a strong bombarding squadron.

"An enemy machine was forced to land near Tolmino, and was subsequently destroyed by our artillery.

"Last night hostile aircraft dropped incendiary bombs on the town of Palmo Nova. Very slight damage was done, and there were no casualties."

GREECE'S PROSPERITY HAS SET NEW RECORD

DESPITE INTERNAL DISORDER AND BLOCKADE ONLY THE REALLY POOR HAVE NOT THRIVED.

ATHENS.—Despite the governmental chaos in Greece during recent months, culminating with the blockade of Greek ports by the allied fleets and the abdication of King Constantine, the country has enjoyed a year of unexampled prosperity, with huge profits piling up, enormous fortunes being made, and such an accumulation of riches as modern Greece has never known before. About the only people who have suffered are the really poor, who have been reduced to a state bordering on starvation by the high prices and the lack of foodstuffs caused by the blockade.

Even before the blockade the Entente Allies had exercised a control so that not even the ordinary necessaries of life, such as oil, could be brought in from America without a special license issued from one of the allied legations. The Allies were in control, too, of railways, telegraph, post offices and a good many other functions of communication.

But these very restrictions seemed to stimulate people to greater economy and thrift, and, as a result, the last year shows this unprecedented prosperity and increase of wealth. Banks made more money than ever before, and people had larger bank deposits. The big corporations paid the largest dividends in their history. Greek money was at a premium over French and Italian money, and the rate of exchange at all the great financial centres continues to be strongly in favour of Greek money.

Greek shipping made a profit for the year of $45,000,000. This was chiefly before the blockade, but the profits are reckoned for the year. The National Navigation Company paid dividends of 76 per cent. and the Hellenic Company paid a dividend of 35 per cent. Bank shares soared in the same way during the year. So also the big trading companies paid from 15 to 23 per cent. dividends.

About 12,000,000 francs of the French loans were taken in Greece, 1,000,000 rubles of the Russian loans, and similar amounts of the British loan New banks were founded to take care of the growing business, and building operations went ahead with a boom.

One theory for the high premium on Greek money is that the presence of great numbers of allied warships poured a flood of foreign gold into the country. But the chief reason is believed to be the practice of economy. The blockade and restrictions kept out a lot of high-priced luxuries. People lived simpler and got along with their home products.

(By Edmund Yare.)

When after mobilizing and equipping armies of volunteers to the number of 5,000,000 England found that she could make certain of complete victory, only by employing her entire manpower, she after much hesitation adopted conscription.

It was a system which the mass of the people had looked upon with great distrust and it was only the grave injustices, the inequalities, and the wasteful expenditure which were the outcome of the voluntary system which persuaded the people to accept that to which their traditional sentiment was entirely foreign.

Once conscription was agreed upon steps were immediately taken to provide every possible safeguard and for the rights of free men and the appeal tribunals were appointed. These tribunals were to consider all cases in which men on various grounds claimed exemption from military service. Every man had the rights to make such an appeal and it was of course of the greatest importance that the men who were appointed to these bodies to adjudicate should be elderly men ineligible for service, men of affairs, capable of exercising a wise judgment without fear or favour. Accordingly throughout the country in every town and in the rural districts were set up the tribunals, consisting of the Mayors, Local Magistrates, Councilors, business and professional men who, being acquainted with the local conditions, would it was thought see that justice was done and the right men into the army.

To each tribunal was attached a miliary representative to watch the interests of the War Office. He was either an army officer or a barrister given commissioned rank for this purpose.

Through the tribunals it was hoped to safeguard the most essential trades of the country and exempt heads of businesses and employes whose presence was proved to be absolutely indispensable.

It seemed an excellent scheme, but in the very first few weeks it was in danger of breaking down for want of adequate machinery to deal with the hundreds of thousands of appeals.

The Day of the Slacker.

Almost every employer discovered that every man he could possibly spare had volunteered and gone long since. Also as the tribunals were also to consider appeals made on the ground of great domestic hardship, large numbers of applicants were found to be keeping surprising numbers of dependents.

From the very outset it became clear that there was danger of infinite delay before all these cases could be heard and that indeed the war might be over before they were settled.

In time the tribunals in London and the big industrial centres were multiplied and considerable progress was made, but it meant in many instances that if a man wanted to make sure of keeping out of the army for a few months all he had to do was to put in an appeal.

Thus in the City of London, where over a million workers are employed in the banks, the shipping offices, warehouses, the tribunals at one time was faced with about 40,000 appeals. Working long hours they were lucky to get through fifty cases a day, so they might have got finished up in two years. Eventually matters were speeded up by having five courts sitting simultaneously, but it ought to have been done at the very beginning.

The whole business was further complicated by the fact that most of the exemptions were for fixed periods of three to six months, at the expiration of which the applicant had either to join the army or could put in a fresh appeal.

If he appealed again, there was a wait of two to three months and more before the case was reached, when perhaps he got a final exemption of two months. Thus a man who legally had been granted altogether five months' exemption had, including the delays before his case came up, actually eleven to twelve months—and all the time the army was clamouring for men.

Men had also the right to go to an appeal court and appeal against the decision of the tribunal. Large numbers engaged the services of barristers and solicitors who occasionally secured further delays by raising a variety of objections based on the wide provisions of the act.

A Court Dialogue.

Employer Applicant—This man is my manager and is absolutely indispensable to our business. He is the only man left who knows all about it. It is impossible to replace him; if he goes we shall have to close down. Our turnover is £100,000.

Military Representative — Good does he earn?

Employer—£200 a year.

Military Representative — Good heavens! £4 a week for a manager! And he is only 26, and passed for general service!

The Chairman—Appeal disallowed. The man must join the army in fourteen days.

Where there were two partners in a business the junior partner had to go. The greatest difficulty was experienced with the "one-man business," the little shopkeeper whose business would have to shut down if he went, while the big stores could carry on. Some were exempted on these grounds, but the demands of the army made it impossible for all to be left off and often the man's wife was able to keep the business going.

In the big cities the constitution of the tribunals has proved satisfactory on the whole, but in some of the small towns and in the rural districts the proceedings have been farcical; local farmers and tradesmen who had come before them, cases in which they were intimately concerned. When Farmer Jones' lusty young son of 21 came before the tribunal, Farmers Brown and Smith, whose sons had also been exempted, decided that this young man was also indispensable, likewise Farmer Jones milkman. Men whose families had been neighbours, sometimes for generations, were not going to make enemies for life by sending their sons into the army.

The military representative might appeal and protest, but it was no good. In this way in each of these country districts hundreds of single young men under thirty were exempted, while married men of forty with large families were leaving their homes in the city to fight. Unquestionably young plowmen could ill be spared from the land, but many of the farmers sons did no skilled work and should have been sent to the army. And women were coming forward in thousands quite capable of taking many of these farm workers' places.

The same understanding existed among the tradesmen in some of the small towns. When the Mayor himself pleaded the indispensability of his only son, whether he was right or wrong, who was going to deny him when perhaps the previous day he had exempted the sons of his neighbours?

It has been suggested that these rural tribunals should be abolished and Government Commissioners appointed to hear the cases, but that would now be difficult and would meet with violent opposition in the districts concerned.

But certainly an independent body of some kind was badly needed.

Of course, you can buy cheaper teas, but "SALADA"

is undoubtedly the most economical and what appears to be 'cheap' in price will prove to be extravagant in use. The fresh young leaves of "Salada" will yield you generous value for your money. B 118

$50 REWARD FOR THE ARREST OF SLACKERS

BOUNTY TO AMERICAN CIVILIANS WHO DELIVER "PINK SHEET" MEN TO CAMP.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The first steps toward the apprehension of National Army slackers were taken when the War Department authorized the announcement of a reward of $50 to be paid civilians for the delivery of any person liable to military service to the nearest military reservation or cantonement camp.

This reward will be paid to any person not in the military service of the United States, including all local, county and State police authorities. The War Department expects immediate results from the offer, since hundreds of men selected for service have not answered the call.

This is the first move in a campaign that is intended to become nation-wide in the search for the "pink sheet men," as the National Army slackers are called. They are termed "pink sheet men" for the reason that when they failed to appear their names were placed on a pink sheet and certified for service in the National Army.

Pastor's Help Fails To Save Lad From Draft

St. Louis Youth Must Serve Despite Objection to Killing.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 29.—Although he worked on a farm and later pleaded he was a "conscientious objector" and backed it up by an affidavit from a minister and the probate judge, Herbert A. Hausman of 5956 Clemens Avenue, will have to serve in the national army.

The district appeal board turned down his voluminous exemption appeal, containing supporting affidavits from the Rev. Dr. E. Combie Smith, pastor of Maple Avenue Methodist church, and Judge Charles W. Holtcamp.

Hausman obects to killing his fellowman, but the board thinks he may be assigned to some non-sanguinary duty.

Pastor Explains.

Dr. Smith a week ago delivered public invocation to 430 drafted men who had paraded to Francis field, and told them they were the "instruments of divine wrath," and expressed the hope they might 'strike hard in a just cause."

In his affidavit in support of Hausman's claim for exemption, he terms Hausman a "conscientious objector, actuated by the highest convictions, hos conscientious scruples and his interpretations of the teaching and example of his Lord and Master, Jesus Christ."

When asked to explain the seeming disparity between his prayer and his affidavit, Dr. Smith said:

"There is a large body of believing Christians who do not believe in war and the shedding of blood. While the Methodist Church is not opposed as a church to war, there may be a great many men in various churches who entertain beliefs somewhat different to those of the church as a body.

"I was very careful in wording my affidavit for Hausman to state that he so interpreted his religious convictions."

Called Himself "Farmer"

When Hausman designated himself a "farmer" on his registration card, the rarity of farmers in the 'silk stocking" Twenty-eighth ward struck some of the board members, including James C. Jones, chairman. An inquiry was made and it developed that Hausman was working as a farm hand.

CRACK AT THE U.S. DOLLAR

Mexico Won't Take Greenbacks and Will Accept Gold Coin at Half Value.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 1.—After October 10 the Mexican Government will refuse to accept American bills, silver coin or drafts on the United States, in the payment of Federal taxes and duties.

A decree announcing this gives as a reason that the American Government, having prohibited the export of gold, it is impossible to change bills for gold. American gold coin will be accepted for taxes at the rate of two for one.

EVERYDAY READING

As an addenda to some statements regarding the ministers in our churches of to-day, I give you some particulars mentioned by Norman Patterson, a writer in the Canadian Magazine. He says, would that the word "compromise" were banished from the religious world, from our political life, and from even our business life., He says, we compromise with evils and immoralities, until they eat us up; and the prince of compromisers are the sleek, self-admiring, oratorical ministers of the gospel. He mentions that these epithets exclude a number of his best friends, men who in a small but honest way are pursuing the prizes of a high calling. The compromisers are the men who do not preach morals, but whose complex morality is printed pages of eloquence and bound in pliable smiles, and whose sermons are literary essays fit to adorn the pages of some nobleman's latest magazine. He says if the ministers condemned certain wrong doing their pulpits would be vacant. Of course it never occurs to the ministers to let them be vacant. I would add to get men to act for themselves, that is "to dilligently hearken unto the voice of the Lord their God," seems to be the key note of the religious revolution that must come sooner or later. Dissatisfaction and unrest prevails amongst the religious and non-religious. They indefinitely see the need of a change in the religious government now existing. Methinks I see a rift in the cloud that hides His loving face. There is an undercurrent working, that possibly only a very few see or even know of. What seems to be almost improbable and very improbable may come suddenly. And then God will bring about order and blessing out of the now chaotic confusion. Possibly some of the very ones who now are earnestly trying to uphold the present religious governments will be the chosen instruments used, in bringing men to entire surrender and utter abandonment to the Holy Spirit. Be that as it may, when God the Holy Ghost, is honoured, by having complete control, righteousness, libresult, and mighty works shall be done in the name of Jesus.

Germans Attempt to Stir Up Egyptian Nationalist Movement.

GENEVA—Abbas Hilmi, former Khedive of Egypt, who was deposed in 1914 and has been living in Switzerland the last nine months, has decided to reside permanently in Vienna, according to an announcement in Austrian newspapers.

A report has also reached here from Berlin of an announcement by Count zu Reventlow that Germany has secured valuable allies in the Egyptian Nationalists, who recently moved their headquarters from Geneva to Berlin. They have founded a newspaper under the name of Neue Orient with German capital. It is said here that the so-called Egyptian Nationalist Party number no more than a score of persons.

HAROLD WILLIS, LOST AVIATOR, SPURNED DEATH

WON FAME BY RESCUE OF WOUNDED FRENCH OFFICER—OTHER AMERICANS SCORN HUN BULLETS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Arriving in an Atlantic port last week from France where, for three years as section leader of the American Field Service in the Lorraine section, he knew Harold Willis, American aviator lost behind the German lines, Edward Salisbury, Harvard graduate, said Willis was a daring flier as an ambulance driver in the early part of the war took many risks under fire.

"I think it was in March, 1915," Mr. Salisbury said, "that the French troops first encountered German machine gun fire directed from hidden redoubts or pits. It was in the Les Esparages district to the right of St. Mihiel. In front of the French lines was a level plain, on beyond was a wooden section, some hills and rocks and a general favorable defensive condition for the Germans. The plain in front was the first move, and for days the shells were poured into the ground and hills commanding the plain.

MACHINE GUN PLAYED HAVOC

"The order to charge," continued Mr. Salisbury, "came in due time and all good Frenchmen dashed forward with elan and nerve that characterizes their attack. I don't remember exactly the number of men, but it was well into a full corps d'armee. Not many came back. In the plain, German machine gun workers rose up in their pits. There was machine gun fire in front, machine gun fire behind and to the side. It was new, no one had seen it before and no one had distinguished the pits before the lids were thrown back. The attack failed.

"Later, reports came in of the organization of these pits. They were known to be cylindrical affairs, sixteen to eighteen feet deep, connected at the bottom by radial tunnels to a central magazine pit, the magazine in turn was connected to a long escape tunnel leading under and back of an entrenched defensive line.

NEVER WANTED TO REST

"In this connection was Jim McConnell, who was killed later, in the aviation service; Harold Willis, who was lost behind the German lines a few days ago, and Walter Lovell, who, in yesterday's reports, has just brought down another German plane. They were all good men and worked under me in the ambulance.

"There was work to do. Especially I remember Jim McConnell, Harold Willis and Walter Lovell. Time after time, after days of attack, I would suggest going back for a few hours' sleep during the lull between two and four in the morning.

"Nearly, always, Walter, or some one of them, would say that sleep was not necessary and that they preferred to stay in. Later, perhaps, wounded came in and these men kept doggedly at it. I was a great privilege to work with them.

"About six o'clock in the afternoon of July 4, 1915, the General of the division sent back word that he was encombre (overburdened) with wounded; that machines would have to be sent to the first wounded pits. Harold Willis' machine was the first to go.

BROUGHT IN FRENCH OFFICER

"The conditions up there in the stretch of forest were undescribable. On the blinded road to the other side of us were Germans. Their particular cry in the hand-to-hand encounters stays with me always.

"Willis' particular job was to bring in a French officer who had been apparently wounded in the head. He was a splendid type, about six feet, four inches tall, and too tall to go into the ambulance easily; furthermore, his stretcher stuck in the runners. Willis changed his stretcher, put him in and filled the remaining places in his car with the wounded. His machine was pretty well riddled with bullets.

"On the ground near him were two men who had lost their reason and were attempting to dig into the ground with their nails, while passing soldiers would kick at them and mutter, 'Il est fou!'

"Under such trying conditions one can't but stand by with reverance and respect for the courage of men like Jim Connell, Harold Willis and Walter Lovell, who unostentatiously do their work as ambulance men and thus later, out of regard for France and her cause, turned to aviation.

GOT WAR CROSS AND QUIT

"Not one of these men, or others who have done real work, ever has written about himself, or attended these little hero tea parties or lectured in the 'movies.' Of the men in my service who came home and 'turned out' one was so little adapted in physical courage for the work that Jim McConnell dubbed him "the human vegetable." They had done dramatics, whether he saw the theatrical side of it in the trenches I don't know. Both of these men received their citation for the cross, with the understanding they would stay until the end of the war. They left as soon as the cross was pinned to their coats. The fact is that the men with courage are there in France yet."

HUN STILL PLOTS IN U. S.

German Newspaper Man Who Tried to Start Peace Campaign Under Arrest.

WICHITA, Kansas, Oct. 1.—In the effects of Dr. George Barthelme, German newspaper correspondent from Cologne, under arrest here, was found a letter written on stationery of former Congressman Frank O. Smith, of Maryland, and purporting to have been signed by him. The letter, which was dated May 31, 1915, follows in part:

"The aim of the enclosed documents is terminate the war as quickly as possible, to the advantage of Germany. For this purpose the widest publicity is desirable. I am trying to bring the documents to the notice of the German-Americans not with a view to publication in the German-American press, for that would be like suing for peace, but in the hope that some German-Americans, through their relations with non-German papers may be able to aid in giving the subject the desired publicity."

LOYAL IRISHMEN ATTACK PLOTTERS

Strong Resolutions Are Adopted by Irish-American League.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The Irish-American League of, which Dr. Joseph P. Brennan is President, and which numbers among its members some of the best known American citizens of Irish birth or ancestry, gave out last night the report of a meeting held in the Emmet Arcade Friday night, at which resolutions were adopted condemning the efforts of certain individuals to appeal to Irish sentiment by clothing their insidious activities with the green flag.

Among the members of the Irish-American League are Fire Chief Kenlon; Patrick Egan, former Minister to Chile; David Kelly, James A. Cavanagh, James Quinn, James Connolly, Patrick J. Collins, Edward Mullin and Christopher Murray.

Dr. Brennan said last night that the meeting was called to "protest against the misleading activities of the 'professional' Irishmen in the United States, who are comparatively few in number but very noisy."

Carl H. Schultz, 3d, Declares Mother Would Kill Herself if He Is Drafted.

NEW ROCHELLE, Oct. 2.—When Carl H. Schultz, 3d, son of Mrs. William B. Craig, of No. 39 Decatur Road, Sutton Manor, New Rochelle, appeared with his attorney, Edward Scott, before the New Rochelle Exemption Board on Friday, it is said he told the members of the Board that his mother would kill herself if he were made to serve in the American Army.

Mr. Schultz declared he is the sole support of his mother, and that, though his grandfather founded the well-known Schultz bottling establishment in New York City, and his grandfather and an uncle now control the corporation by which he is employed at a salary of $3,600 a year, if he is sent to war his salary will stop. The Board learned, however, that Mrs. Craig has $9,000 and her son has $3,000 in the bank. His claim for exemption was not allowed.

COLLEGE STAFF KILLED BY AXE

Terrible Slaughter of Armenians Described by Returned Educator.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30. — The slaughter with axes of all the Armenian faculty members of Anatolia College, Marsovan, Northern Asia Minor, together with 1,200 others by Turkish peasants, whose pay for the work was the privilege of stripping the clothing off their victims' bodies, was described here last night by Rev. George E. White, President of the college, recently returned to this country. The massacres were committed at night by order of the Turkish Government, he said, the Armenians being sent out in lots of 100 and 200 to their doom, and their bodies rolled into prepared burial trenches.

"One group of our college boys asked permission to sing before they died, and sang 'Nearer, My God, to Thee.' Then they were struck down," Mr. White said.

"On the pretext of searching for deserting soldiers, concealed bombs, weapons, seditious literature or revolutionists, the Turkish officers arrested about 1,200 Armenian men at Marsovan, accompanying their investigations by horrible brutalities. There was no revolutionary activity in our region whatever.

SEES FIELD FOR REVOLT

Henderson Wants Truth Spread by German Socialists.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Belief that Germany is ripe for revolution was expressed by Arthur Henderson, deposed Labour representative in the British War Cabinet, in an interview in The Weekly Dispatch, justifying his attitude in favour of the Stockholm conference.

"Nothing is further from my mind" he said "than concurrence in a peace settlement that would not be final, democratic, and lasting. An inconclusive peace would be a dishonourable peace, and we have no desire to parley with unrepentant military despots. The final peace must be a people's peace, and one of the terms on which there can be no compromise must be the final and complete abolition of irresponsible autocratic government.

"I consider a democratized Germany an indispensable condition, and the most effective way of bringing this home to the German people would be through the representatives of the working-class organizations.

"In my opinion, a military victory of the Allies will not be sufficient. It might enable the Allies to secure a satisfactory and honourable peace, but it could not guarantee a lasting peace. This can only be secured by the good-will of all the peoples concerned. I want to supplement military effort by a properly organized and wisely directed political propaganda.

Both before the war and during actual hostilities the German people have been tricked and deceived, and even now they are by no means cognizant of the vital facts and developments of the international situation. They will coninue to remain hoodwinked and ignorant until the war ends unless the Allies final means of placing in their possession a complete and undistorted statement of the facts.

"To my mind the only satisfactory channel of communication is through the German Socialists, and particularly the German minority Socialists. I would rather consult with the German minority Socialists than with the official Government representatives after the war, even though Grmany has been completely defeated in a military sense. For it is to the lasting credit of the German minority Socialists that, though they formed part of a nation built up on military victories and inculcated from birth with a worship of militarism, they have in the midst of the greatest war of history stood aloof from their own Government and denounced in unequivocal language its crimes and designs of conquest and domination.

"I do not accept the view that the form of government in Germany is one for the German people to decide for themselves. So long as German Imperialism stayed in Germany it remained a problem for the German people to solve. But immediately it thrust its unwelcome and devastating feet across the frontiers of Belgium France and Serbia, it became a menace to all peoples, and they are all now vitally concerned in its extinction."

AIRPLANE AMBULANCE IN FRANCE A SUCCESS

Two Passengers on Stretchers in 15-Mile Test Flight Find No Jolting.

PARIS.—Tests made on Saturday at Villa Coublay of an airplane fitted with two stretchers for carrying wounded proved highly satisfactory. Dr. Chassaing of the Army Medical Service and Corporal Tetu represented wounded passengers during a twelve minute flight, the equivalent to a fifteen-mile journey.

Corporal Tetu declared that this form of transport was far superior to an ambulance of which he had vivid recollections when wounded two years ago. Dr. Chassaing removed a muffler from his head and unfastened straps during his flight. He expressed the opinion that there would be no innecessary pain to a wounded passenger because the equilibrium of the airplane was so perfect.

The airplane was constructed by the aeronautic service of the army, which hopes to use this form of transport for the severely wounded, declaring that the absence of any jolting fully compensated the patient for any risk.

BRITISH ARMY THEATRES.

They Charge 6 and 12 Cents and Are Conducted on a Business Basis.

LONDON — Eight official army theatres, regularly supplied with comedy, melodrama, musical comedy, and vaudeville, are to be established by the Entertainment Department of the Canteen Board for the amusement of the British soldiers.

In time, of the war continues, it is possible that this list will grow. It is the aim of the authorities not merely to enable the soldiers to witness good acting but to conduct the theatres on a business basis and hand something over to the Central Regimental Institute Fund.

At present a repertory company is on tour of the army and navy camps and stations, and melodrama and musical comedy companies have been recruited to entertain the fighting men. Vaudeville troupes are being organized. There is a common charge at all the theatres of 6 cents for the cheapest seats and 12 cents for the front rows. At the "second house"—for the theatres are run on the "twice nightly" system—a few rows are set apart for officers.

Ten Killed, Thirty-Eight Hurt In Last Night's Big Air Raid

Strongest Attack Yet Made on London Was Practically Frustrated by British Anti-Aircraft Guns ---French Aviators Retaliate For Attacks By Huns By Bombing Frankfort, Stuttgart, Coblenz and Other German Cities---German Attacks Against British and French Repulsed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 2.—Ten persons were killed and thirty-eight injured in last night's big air raid, it is officially stated to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 1.—The strongest air attack yet attempted on London and the coast towns by the Germans was carried out to-night by four groups of hostile airplanes.

Some of the machines got through to London and bombed the southwestern district.

A terrific barrage was sent up from the defence guns, and the roar of battle lasted intermittently for two and a half hours.

POPULOUS REGION SUFFERED.

The Germans bombed coast towns as they passed over and proceeded towards London. Two of the groups succeeded in getting a number of machines through the sky barrage. Numerous bombs were dropped on the southwestern district, which is thickly populated with the homes of the upper and middle classes.

The fire from the defending guns was longer and louder than ever before. A rain of shrapnel fell in all sections of the town, and the streets were virtually deserted save for a few police.

LONDONERS WELL WARNED.

The weather was perfect for air operations, as there was a bright full moon, with no clouds or wind. The people of London expected a raid, and were waiting for signals. Soon after 7 o'clock motors of the volunteer corps sped through the streets blowing their sirens and displaying an illuminated notice, "Take cover." The telephone exchanges notified their subscribers, and other measures were put into execution to inform the populace of the pending raid.

Many of the theatres were continuing their performances, despite the raids. At the conclusion of the performance in one of the leading London theatres to-night, the manager came to the stage and invited the audience and stage hands to vote on the question of continuing the night performances. All voted in favour of carrying them on as usual.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 2.—Although details of last night's aid raid were slow in coming, it was apparent that the barrage fire of the anti-aircraft guns again was effective in thwarting the Germans' efforts. As on other nights the guns made it so hot for the raiders that they dropped bombs in open places, their one concern being apparently to unload and get away. The growing confidence of Londoners in the ability of the anti-aircraft guns to keep the raiders at bay, was shown by the fearlessness and good behaviour of the crowds. The tactics of the Germans are so well known that they cause spirited betting among sportsmen as to the time of probable raids. It is pointed out in this connection that the Germans work like automatons and are not yet able to deceive anybody but themselves.

Early editions of the morning newspapers which were sought eagerly by the crowd who had remained up late, point to the feebleness of the German beast to "burn up London." They also call attention to "Germany's lying claims" regarding bombs dropped on military buildings in inner London and numerous fires." Newspapers publish accounts of thrills given London last week and comment on the fine behaviour of the populace. They print maps showing German towns within bombing distance of France and urge "bomb Germany now."

LONDON, October 2.—During last night's aerial raid on London as much ammunition as that expended in a small-sized battle at the front was shot into the air. The rattle of falling shrapnel on roofs and in the streets was constant over some sections. The Germans selected an ideal night for their sixth raid in eight days. It was clear and the moon was full. London expected a raid and quickly "took cover" when the warning signals were sounded.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), October 2.—There is heavy artillery fighting all along the front. German attacks were repulsed at all points.

(Special to The Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, October 2.—The Allies with America's aid are likely next year to take the offensive on the seas. This deduction is drawn in expert quarters here to-day as the result of recent Allied military operations with England striking at the rail arteries leading to Germany's Ostend and Zeebrugge bases. Such an offensive, it is felt, could be used in telling fashion later. Much will depend, however, upon the success England meets in her Menin road operations. While she has warded off counter attacks so far, it is a question in many military minds here if she will be able to accomplish before winter the cutting of the rail arteries. Even if she does cut these lines Germany can still use the nests from which her submarine pests emanate. But if England can accomplish a fierce blow at these communication lines she has done much to cripple the effectiveness of Germany's U-boat game. Then with powerful ships backing her up she may move in on a strangling process and stamp out the home of ocean pests, though she must still maintain a mighty land force to back the sea operations. Advocates of a stronger naval policy are still active in their urgings, and they feel the way things shape up on the northern end of the western front now is an argument for their proposals.

WHO WANTS TO HELP G. W. V. A.?

Somewhere in Peterborough there must be a writing desk which no one is using and for which the owner has no further use. The Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association is urgently in need of such an article of furniture. A roll top desk would be preferred. If any friend of the boys who have done their bit overseas has a desk that is not required, please let the G.W.V.A. know. A line to the Secretary, G. W. V. A., Barrie Buildings, will be sufficient.

STATEMENT IS SERIOUS

Lord Northcliffe Says British Shipping Controller's Statement is First Real Note of Alarm in Regard to Submarine Sinkings

UNCLE SAM'S TASK

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—In an exclusive interview with the United Press to-day, Lord Northcliffe, head of the British mission, and the most constructive war critic any belligerent nation has produced, said:

"The most urgent news that has crossed the Atlantic since I arrived in this country at the beginning of June is the official statement by Sir Joseph McClay, the British controller of shipping, to the effect that "unless the United States faces the shipping problem and constructs six million tons of shipping annually, the military efforts of the United States will be crippled from the start."

"This is the solemn warning of Sir Joseph himself—it has passed the censor and is the first real note of alarm of the seriousness of the submarine sinkings.

"Set aside German boastings, put aside the idea that Great Britain, who is increasing her own food production, can be starved out—the writing on the wall should arouse every thinking man to the greatest problem the world has ever faced—the transport across 3,000 miles of water of the new American army, which already amounts to more than a million of men, its cannons, shells, locomotives, railway tracks, munition plants, aeroplanes, observation balloons, hospitals, ambulances, convoys, doctors, nurses, machine guns, butchers, bakers, shoemakers, men of every trade."

"You ask me if I agree with Sir Joseph. I do not profess to have any of the technical knowledge of shipping possessed by men of hard-headed schools and who were chosen by Premier Lloyd George for a task that is much beyond me.

There is no real decrease in the total allied submarine sinkings.

AMERICA'S TASK.

This is the greatest of tasks for your boys have to travel nearly 3,000 miles, and across the very track of submarine ruthlessness.

Of danger to actual transports there is probably very little. Not one Canadian soldier has yet been lost at sea out of the 400,000 boys that have gone from that country to the battlefields overesas since the beginning of the war.

There yet remains the serious statement by the greatest authority on shipping in Great Britain that the United States requires five hundred thousand men to be engaged in shipbuilding, that you must build three times more than the British have ever turned out in one year, and five or six times what you have previously accomplished in like time. "I am well aware that progress is being made here and in Great Britain, but are you getting the six million tons a year that our controller of shipping states to be the minimum necessary to make successful what he truly described as your greatest military ef-

NATION-WIDE PLOT OF I. W. W. DIVULGED

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

CHICAGO, October 2.—A nation-wide plot to paralyse industries, thwart military operations, obstruct conscription, and cause America to lose the war is divulged in the evidence upon which 166 members of the I.W.W. were indicted in Chicago. William D. Haywood, of Chicago, the international secretary and treasurer, and Frank Little, who was lynched in Butte, Mont., are alleged to have been the ringleaders. About half the indicted men are under arrest, Federal officials stated to-day. Search for the others is being carried on in all parts of the country. The indictment which covers forty printed pages, alleges 15,000 offenses under ten specific charges.

PERCENTAGE OF MEN FIT FOR THE TRENCHES IS CONTINUING HIGH

So Far Fifty-two Applicants Have Been Examined by the Local Medical Board of Which Thirty-two Were Found Fit---Member of 93rd Battalion a Prisoner in Germany --To-day's General Military News.

British Hospitals Are Bombed By Huns

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Candidates examined	38
Placed in A category	25
Placed in B category	6
Placed in C category	3
Placed in E Category	6

The first day's results of the local Medical Board are summarized above and indicate that the quality of men presenting themselves for examination is above the average, two out of every three being accepted as fit for the trenches. Sixty-six per cent. of those examined were pronounced material for the firing line, thirteen per cent. fit for non-combatant service overseas, eight per cent. for duty in Canada and thirteen per cent. not fit for any military duty.

The Board worked six hours yesterday, ten being examined at the morning session, fourteen in the afternoon and the same number at night. The applicants for examination were most numerous at the night session, and a number went away without getting an opportunity to go before the doctors.

Col. Gardiner, the A.D.M.S. for Military District No. 3, in whose hands are all the medical arrangements for this district, was a visitor at the armouries last night and watched the work of the Board. Col. Gardiner is one of the busiest men in Eastern Ontario just now, with a very large district to look after.

THIS MORNING'S RESULTS.

Candidates examined	14
Placed in A category	7
Placed in B category	0
Placed in C category	4
Placed in E category	3

The biggest rush so far of men to be examined under the Military Service Act was in evidence at the armouries this morning. The ante room was comfortably crowded during the two hours the board was in session, the majority of the men having come from their work in the C.G.E. and other plants. It was not possible to examine all the applicants who presented themselves this morning, and a number were told to present themselves at later sessions of the Board. The percentage of men fit for the trenches to-day was a little lower than yesterday, exactly one half of the men who went before the doctors this morning being put in the AII category. Three were rejected as medically unfit for any military duty and four more as only qualified for service in Canada. None of the applicants for examination were placed in B category, which means fit for non-combatant service overseas.

The Medical Board have been impressed by the cheerful manner which the men examined have shown. Major Cameron, President of the Board, remarked after the morning session today that so far they had found no attempt on the part of the men to deceive the doctors as to their physical condition. Questions were answered cheerfully and frankly and the Peterborough young men who come in Class I of the Military Service Act have apparently decided to take matters philosophically. In intelligence and physique the applicants examined so far have been above the average.

Fit for the trenches	32
Fit for non-combatant service overseas	5
Fit for duty in Canada	7
Unfit for any service	8
Total examined	52

The Canada Gazette contains the following: The King has been graciously pleased to give directions for the following appointment to the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George in recognition of valuable services in connection with the war. To be dated 4th June, 1917: Brig.-General Thomas Devies Robinson Hemming.

Penalties additional to those imposed in the Criminal Code are to be provided to punish anyone guilty of attempting improperly to influence any medical board or local tribunal appointed under the military service act. An order in council to this effect will shortly be published.

In respect to the voluntary medical examinations now in progress it is pointed out that if a man feels he has not been placed in his proper medical category he can take his case to the local tribunal. Unnecessary applications for exemption will be strongly discouraged. But the local tribunals have been created that both sides of a case may be heard.

The regulations governing local tribunals will be issued at the time the proclamation calling out the first class of men is published. No definite date has yet been fixed, but the indicatoins are that it will probably be about the middle of October. After the proclamation is published about three weeks will be allowed for the filing of applications.

In all fifteen registrars and deputy registrars have been appointed. In appointing deputy registrars, the aim has been to bring military districts into line with provincial boundaries.

Quebec, September 28.—Although the Medical Board opened only on Saturday in connection with the military service act, the Quebec city examiners had examined more than a hundred young men to-day.

Officials in charge of the Medical Bureau at the Quebec Military Hospital stated this evening that so far eighty per cent. of the men examined have been found fit for service. This is regarded here as a record of excellent physical standing for the youths in Quebec.

Indications are that now the military service act has become law, no serious opposition will be made. A rush of applicants for examination is expected at the very opening of the bureau in the many centres established to this end in this section of the country.

Two Examiner Newsboys Get Prizes Last Week

Every Boy in the Contest is Gaining a Few Customers Weekly

The newsboys are taking a keen interest in the Examiner Newsboys' Contest. There are about fifteen boys who are working actively, the majority of whom will receive prizes at the end of this month, the largest of which is $25.00 in cash. Last week two boys won the weekly prizes. Harold Pollock and James Corkery will each receive a dollar for getting the greatest number of new subscribers last week.

Other boys who have been getting a smaller number of new subscribers weekly, but are keeping it up every week, if they continue to do so until the end of the contest, will win one of the big prizes. Boys, it is worth your while to work from now until the end of the contest. The big cash prizes are worth working for.

VETERANS WANT THE APPOINTMENT RATIFIED

THURSDAY'S BIG MEETING

Citizens are again reminded of the meeting called by Mayor Duffus on Thursday night in the Council Chamber to consider the question of a club building for Peterborough's War Veterans, as a memorial to the Peterborough men who have died in France. This is a most timely question and the attendance should be very large. All public bodies are urged to send representatives. It is expected that Comrade Knight, Dominion Secretary of the G.W.V.A. will address the meeting.

BRITISH RED CROSS AGAIN APPEALS TO CANADA FOR AID

This Year's Expenditure Approximately $16,000,000 As Compared With $9,000,000 Last Year

The British Red Cross Society requires this year approximately $16,000,000. Their present expenditure is practically $300,000 a week. Last year the Society expended, in its vast operations of caring for the sick and wounded British soldiers, $9,000,000 up to October 20th, 1916, and in the first year of the war $8,500,000 up to October 20th, 1915.

These figures were quoted by the Secretary of the British Red Cross, Mr. A. H. Abbott, in an appeal read at last night's Council meeting for an increased grant from Peterborough this year. The seriousness of the problem that faces the Society, the responsibility that rests upon Canada, and the urgent need for surpassing generosity on the part of the Canadian people are emphasized in the arresting statement of Mr. Arthur Stanley, chairman of the Red Cross Executive Committee, in which he conveys the gravity of the situation in these words: "If Canada fails us in October, we must curtail many of our activities."

The appeal is again made for a Trafalgar Day campaign on October 18th, when it is hoped that Canada will respond with a total gift in proportion to the present year's expenditure.

Leave to New Council.

The Council last night deliberated upon the method by which it could best meet the patriotic demands that are now coming due. For 1918 the Canadian Patriotic Fund will require at least 60,000, based on the 1917 contribution, for the soldiers' dependents in this city. Added to this sum is the Red Cross appeal, and others may arise during the year.

Ald. Stratton suggested that the Red Cross petition might be deferred for consideration until the Patriotic Fund is dealt with.

Mayor Duffus said that he felt the question was of such importance that it should be left for the new Council to decide.

This proposal was supported by members of the Council. The debenture method, employed last year, is regarded with disfavour as a plan for raising the 1918 funds, and the only alternatives are either the voluntary subscription method that served successfully when the war was young, or a direct tax on the assessment to provide the required amount.

This is the problem the Council gave a "once over" last night, and then backed away from it, leaving the problem for the 1918 Mayor and his assistants.

Ald. Dobbin moved, seconded by Ald. Stratton, that the Clerk reply to Mr. Abbott, that assistance for the British Red Cross Society will be forthcoming from Peterborough; that the Council is in full sympathy with it, but that in view of the obligations the city has to face, the grant will not be decided until early in the new year.

Former Grants.

In 1915 Peterborough gave to the British Red Cross Cross $5,341.50, of which $5,000.00 was from the Municipality; and in 19.6 the contributions totalled $8,226.46, with the city again giving $5,000.00.

In 1915 Ontario gave $1,515,000, and in 1916, $1,680,000. From the figures quoted above this Province will be expected to increase its aid, and naturally the obligation will rest upon the individual communities.

Local Branch to Inquire Cause of Delay in Appointing G. W. V. A. Nominee For Caretaker of the Armouries—Suspect Some Local Influence is at Work.

NEW EXECUTIVE MEMBERS

Two weeks ago Comrade R. H. Muir was selected by the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association as the Veterans' nominee for the position of chief caretaker of the armouries. The nomination was made at the request of Capt. J. H. Burnham, member for West Peterborough, who forwarded the recommendation to Brigadier General Hemming, the officer commanding No. 3 Military District.

Since then nothing has been heard of the matter. Comrade Muir has received no notice of his appointment and the Veterans have come to the conclusion that some local influence has been exerted to prevent the position from being given to the candidate chosen by the G.W.V.A.

The question was brought up at last night's meeting of the Veterans in the recreation room of the armouries and it was decided that the secretary should write General Hemming and Capt. Burnham to inquire what had been done about the matter and also as to the cause of the delay in making the appointment. The G.W.V.A. do not propose to be side-tracked in this matter and expressed their intention of backing their nominee to the limit.

Two New Executive Members.

Two new members were elected to the executive committee to fill the vacancies caused by the election of Comrade Whatley to the position of secretary and the departure of Comrade Saxby to joint the local War Veterans who are touring the United States.

There candidates were named for the positions and upon a ballot being taken Comrades Edward Bird and A. Naish were elected.

New Members.

Four applications for membership were received and favourably received by the meeting. The new members are Lieut. W. Elliott, who won the Military Cross in France and Ptes. Lawrence Campbell, Geo. Harris and Wm. Teabo, all of whom were wounded in action. The membership of the local branch is now close to the 150 mark and is growing every week. At last night's meeting, on motion of Comrade Toone, it was decided to have a roll of honour containing the names of the members, printed, framed and hung up in the club rooms. New names will be added to the list as the members come in.

A Lindsay Visitor.

Comrade H. White, of Lindsay, vice-president of the Lindsay branch of the G.W.V.A., was a visitor at the meeting and addressed the members briefly, expressing the hearty thanks of himself and his comrades to the Peterborough Veterans who had assisted in organizing in Lindsay. They would hardly have been able to get started had it not been for the assistance of the Peterborough members. He was glad to report that the Lindsay branch was making very satisfactory progress. The Tag Day campaign had been a success and the branch had now over $1,000 to its credit. The MacDonald building was being given the Association for use as a club room, and Sir Sam Hughes had accepted the position of honourary president of the branch. Comrade White offered his services to assist the Peterborough branch in any way possible and remarked that if they were putting on a concert he would be glad to give them an exhibition of rifle shooting.

Comrade White is an Australian who enlisted with the 1st Australian contingent and fought with the Anzacs at Gallipoli and afterwards in France, having in all seventeen months' service.

Comrade Sword of Bobcaygeon, who is a member of the Peterborough branch, was also a visitor at last night's meeting.

Congratulations.

The Veterans decided to send a letter to Capt. J. H. Burnham, Honourary President of the local branch, congratulating him upon his joining the ranks of the Benedicts.

Members are asked to note that the regular general meetings will be held on the first and third Mondays of each month in the recreation room of the armouries, while the executive will meet on the second and fourth Tuesday in the Barrie Building. The Club's headquarters are still in the Barrie Building, and the rooms there will be open at all times. All members are reminded of the public meeting in the City Council Chamber on Thursday night and are urged to be present on that occasion.

CITIZENSHIP WASTE.

When we consider the waste of the future citizenship of the country through the deplorable rate of infant mortality, and to it add the terrible waste of man-power through the war, we should be impressed with the importance of means of preventing a worse waste than war, the degradation of our future citizenship through parental neglect or parental incapacity. The waste of manhood in the war cannot be prevented; it is a beneficent waste, as the condition of the salvation of our highest interests. But the life waste of infant mortality and the moral waste and life waste through neglected children, are both practically preventable to a very large extent.

In regard to the latter the work of the Children's Aid Society is the only organized system of dealing with the unfortunate conditions due to neglected childhood. This work, for its financial machinery depends entirely upon the liberality and contributions of the public, and the necessity and duty of meeting the demands of Children's Aid Tag Day, needs no argument, only reminder of our responsibity.

The appeal is to the sense of duty, to the patriotism of the public, for it is the truest patriotism, the noblest work, pro patria, to help preserve and rescue our population from the degradation and menace to the physical and moral soundness of the life of our citizenship, that is sure to come from the neglect of the physical and moral wardship of neglected and dependent childhood.

The people of Peterobrough will not do their duty in the premics by abstract acceptance of belief in the necessity of doing the work for the rescue of our neglected and dependent childhood from the dark menace of vicious and criminal contamination; but a part of the duty demanded will be discharged by generaus and general response to the demands of Children's Aid Tag Day, next Saturday, October 6th.

The best Thanksgiving is giving.

CANADA'S FINANCIAL BIT.

It is announced that two British emissaries, Lord Reading and Lord Northcliffe, are about to visit the capital to consider with our government authorities matters of finance, credit and supplies. Canada has been pretty severely tapped financially, and the end is not yet. We have done well in spending money, and better in sending troops which have been, in ratio to their number, a splendid help to the allied cause and have heightened the military glory of Canada to a notable degree. And Canada's credit in a financial way has not been insignificant. Since the beginnig of the war, thirty-seven months ago, the Government of Canada has advanced to the British government a total of 443 million dollars in cash and securities, and if we add the credits provided since the end of August, the total mounts to 500 million dollars.

The week before last at a conference of the Minister of Finance and Sir Thomas White and the Executive of the Canadian Bankers' Association, credits of more than 150 millions were arranged. Of these credits, 75 millions will be applied to the purchase of food stuffs for the allies and 88 millions to the purchase of forty million bushels of wheat, this amount being regarded as necessary to acquire the surplus of this year's wheat crop available for export. These credits, which have nothing to do with the coming war loan, will permit of the purchase of supplies in Canada which would otherwise go to the United States.

Canada's very creditable amount of financing has been made possible by more or less systematic increased production, and the individual national thrift, whose potentialities we are just beginning to appreciate, in a heretofore unknown financial strength, leads the Monetary Times to say:

The magnitude of the financing which Canada has undertaken since the beginning of the war is a surprising demonstration of the country's previously latent financial power. It shows what can be done when based upon great production and thrift. Up to the present time the financing has been accomplished with comparatively little difficulty. From now onward it will not be so easy. We cannot continue to establish credits in this country for Great Britain's purchases unless every citizen does without luxuries, putting his increased savings and surplus funds into the national securities of the Dominion, and unless every corporation regulates profits according to a decent standard of honesty.

The suggestion above of the necessity of individual savings and renunciation of luxuries, in order to provide the silver bullet, comes to all of us. We need not stint ourselves at the table, nor go shabby, in order to be able to lend money to help finance the war, but by a more reasonable scale of personal living, by the avoidance of luxuries in dress, dining and pleasure (so-called), we can save a very considerable portion of our income for profitable investment, in a double sense—profitable in earning capacity and profitable in the sense of giving much needed food and other supplies, absolutely necessary as a measure of winning the war of humanity.

"Willy" and "Nicky," and "Old Nicky," made a great trio.

SACRIFICE SHOULD BE SOMEWHAT SYMMETRICAL.

The Ottawa Journal, a good friend to the government, or, if not a good friend, a most adulatory supporter, referring to a conference of the British mission and the Finance Minister, says:

> If a conference between the British mission and the Government discloses that still more can be done, the people of Canada will gladly support whatever is proposed. This is a war of treasure as well as of blood, and Canadians are not of the mould to give their sons and withhold their treasure.

This is all very true, but doing both is a work of considerable difficulty, on account of there not being demanded a symmetrical—an equal, all-round sort of sacrifice. This is a war of, and for, fair play, whose strategy is broadly based on British fair play. British fair play implies equality of treatment as well as equality of sacrifice. We should not demand all the sacrifice from the Canadian soldiers, who go forth to war, and wounds, and winding sheets—in the figurative sense—for many of them are buried where they fall, without rites or ceremonies—or of the freinds who have given their brothers, husbands and sons; nor of the common people who feel the pinch of high living, made keener by the sense that their high cost of living is contributed to by the works of food exploiters, who wax "fat and kick," while the suffering consumers wax thin and—also kick—not from the exuberant spirit of big profits, but in the way of vigorous objection.

The people would feel better towards saving to help finance the war, be less disposed to "withhold their treasure," if as far as this country is concerned, there was less waste of "treasure" in monstrous gifts to railways, etc.; if the government didn't give too free rein to big profiteers, to knighted; if not knighily profiteers, who make none of the sacrifices, made by the mass of the people, nor those made by the soldiers who are shot up, shelled, gassed and disabled. The soldier may lose a leg or two, or an arm or two, or an eye or two, in winning a distinguished service medal, while the profiteer fares sumptuously every day, sleeps every night in down—and coins the agony of war into money equal to a barnful of medals.

We are all benefitted by the war; it is for the good of all of us—for the good of the merchant prince, the manufacturer—some of whom make cent per cent. profits—who will ply their trade of money getting under safer and better conditions—for the farmer who gets for a hog the price of a horse, who will ply his occupation, till his soil, and market his crops, under safer and better conditions; for the workingman who will ply his trade—if he has a leg left to stand upon, or a hand left to work with, after he has done his bit—under safer and better conditions.

The benefits of winning this war wil be all-round; all-round should be the services and sacrifices. A sacrifice should be somewhat symmertical, and not jug-handled. Make the profiteers, the big dividend dividers, et al., pay their shot on more equal terms with the masses, and the people who sacrifice in a thousand ways, will be more willing to make good the Journal's dictum—"the people of Canada will gladly support whatever is proposed," more gracefully demonstrate that they are not of the mould to give their sons and withhold their treasure."

Fortunately the Kaiser and the Czar who plotted "something rotten for the state of Denmark" if the secret alliance, has not miscarried.

LIVING LONG A MORAL QUESTION

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The physical improvement of the people is a question very much to the fore in these days. Health conventions, all over the land, are being held and our foremost medical men are discussing the problem of disease prevention with scientific thoroughness. The statement is freely made that a large percentage of the ordinary death rate in modern communities is avoidable. A reasonable care about sensible living would increase the average human life, authorities state, by not less than fifteen years within a generation.

Dr. Hanen Emerson, health commissioner of New York, stated to a clergyman of his acquaintance:

"In the conservation of human life men of science have gone about as far as we can get. We have made the facts known; we have shown people what shortens their lives and what will lengthen them. The masses pretty generally know the truth nowadays about the diseases that cut men off before they have lived out a normal term of life—know how these diseases are contracted and know how they can be avoided. What is left a moral question—not a scientific question at all. It is the question whether men will do as well as they know. Today they see clearly the results ahead if they follow disastrous habits, and yet they keep on with those habits just the same. What they need is not more knowledge of more warnings. What they need is character, backbone, will-power—the qualities that carry knowledge into practice. The extension of men's term of natural life lies with the church to-day much more than it does with the medical profession. It is up to the church to take hold and put into men something that will make them willing and able to live as they know they ought to live."

J. H. HAZLEWOOD,
Department of Social Service.

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The Review, on behalf of Mr. Burnham, refuses to definitely face my question. Mr. Burnham takes the position that the only matter before the country now is that of winning the war; and that on this account, the election in West Peterborough should be "neither Grit nor Tory." In other words, Mr. Burnham appeals for a national spirit and united action in this riding in order that the best interests of the war may be advanced as far as this portion of the Empire is concerned. As I have already stated this appeal, if sincere, should meet with a generous response. But is the appeal sincere? As I see it, positive proof of its sincerity can only be given by the resignation of Mr. Burnham as candidate of the Conservative party. The reason for this is plain. Mr. Burnham is a dyed-in-the-wool, out-and-out Tory, and supported a Government which gave the country three years of mismanagement, incompentency, and neglect at a time when the very existence of the Dominion was at stake. He cannot expect or hope for the support of Liberals in this riding. But if he is really patriotic he will readily step down in order that the way may be open for the united action which he desires. Again I ask, will he do it? Otherwise, I am forced to the conclusion that what he has said and written lately as to unity during the war is what the men in France call camouflage, or what we Canadians call, bunk.

The Review suggests that I am looking for the Liberal nomination, myself. The Editor can set his mind at rest on that score; I am merely a humble member of the rank and file, and no more likely to receive the Liberal nomination that he is, himself. By the same token the Editor of the Review need not worry about Dr. Michael Clark. There are local Liberals big enough, loyal enough, and saturated enough with the spirit of winning the war to do their full duty to their constituency, their country, and their Empire, when the call comes to take up that duty.

Yours truly,
WIN-THE-WAR LIBERAL.

RECOMMENDATION FOR ASSISTANT CHIEF OF FIRE DEPARTMENT

H. C. Johnston is the Choice of Chief Grange—Extra Salary For Lineman

At a special meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council, held last evening, a letter was read from Fire Chief Grange, recommending the appointment of Fireman H. C. Both recommendations were adopted by the Committee and will be forwarded to the City Council for approval.

WEDDING BELLS

JENNE—BOTHWELL.

The marriage was quietly solemnized yesterday of Mr. Frank Llewellan Jenne of Peterborough, second son of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Jenne, of Sutton, Que., and Miss Mabel Edna Bothwell, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Bothwell of South Durham, Quebec.

HOSKER—WAGSTAFF.

On Saturday, September 29th, in St. James' Methodist church, Rev. B. Greatrix officiating, the wedding was quietly solemnized of Miss Grace Wagstaff and Mr. Joseph Richard Hosker. The young couple were attended by Mrs. Florence Wagstaff and Mr. Charles Friendship. The bride looked charming in a silk dress of Belgian blue with white hat and carried a bonquet of white roses. The bridesmaid's dress was grey silk with hat to match. The little flower girls were the little daughters of Sergt. Walter Wagstaff, who was killed in France, and Pte. A. Wagstaff, who is still in France. They looked very pretty in their white embroidered dresses and carried a basket of flowers each. The presents were numerous and costly.

Mr. and Mrs. Hosker will reside in Peterborough.

RICHARD REDMAN.

Richard Redman died early this morning at his residence, 612 Union street, after an illness of a week's duration. Mr. Redman was born in England 78 years ago and has resided in Peterborough for 30 years. He was a Methodist and a member of the Sons of England.

He leaves to mourn his death his wife, one son, Rev. W. H. Redman, Vancouver, and three daughters, Mrs. Wm. Boam, London, Mrs. George Blatchford, Owen Sound and Mrs. Rehill, George street, city.

The funeral, under the auspices of the Sons of England, will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, from the residence of Mr. T. A. Rehill, George street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

AMELIA STOREY.

Amelia Howden, beloved wife of James A. Storey, 464 Weller street, died yesterday at the family residence after an illness of some months' duration. Mrs. Storey was born in Cavan township 58 years ago. After her marriage 33 years ago she resided in Emily and Smith township before coming to Peterborough to reside in 1901. She was a faithful member of George street Methodist church and up to the time of her illness took an active interest in all branches of church work and societies. There are left of the immediate family to mourn her death, besides her husband and three children, Mrs. W. C. Dawson, Bailieboro, Mr. Merton Storey, Otonabee, and Miss Margaret at home, two sisters, Mrs. Alex. Walsh and Mrs. Hattie Lowes, Port Hope, and two brothers, Robert of Peterborough and Richard of Cavan.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 from the family residence. A service, conducted by Rev. Mr. Thomas, will be held at the house before leaving for the Little Lake cemetery.

CHARLES R. D. BOOTH.

A life of unusual interest was closed yesterday, when Charles R. D. Booth died at his farm at Burleigh, after an illness of some months.

Mr. Booth, who was highly connected in England, was born in 1837, and came to Canada when a young man to Col. Strickland's farm in Lakefield, where when Lakefield social life was at its height he was extremely popular and known as the "Black Prince." After his marriage to Miss Hawkes he took up a large farm in Burleigh and in 1907-08 represented Burleigh and Anstruther, as Reeve. In 1909 he became County Police Magistrate, and later Clerk of the Township, which position he resigned a few days ago. For a number of years he acted as Lay Reader in the English Church at Burleigh. His wife and one daughter, Amy, survive.

The funeral will take place to-morrow to the Church of England cemetery.

Second Crop Of Red Raspberries

Mr. Richard Orde, R. R. No 8, Peterborough was sent into the Examiner Office a raspberry branch from his farm, showing a second crop of fruit. He has already picked one good crop and if it was not for the cold weather he would have had another.

CHEAPER PRODUCTION OF NEWS PRINT

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—That the cost of producing newsprint has been reduced considerably since the Canadian paper manufacturers made their own sulphite, was one of the points brought out at the resumption of the inquiry before Commissioner Pringle this morning. The Ontario Paper Company of Thorold, for instance, get their sulphite at around $46 per ton, whereas they formerly paid from $65 to $100 a ton for it.

Embargo Only Temporary One

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—It is believed here that the United States embargo on coal by water from the United States to Canada is only a temporary measure and is undertaken so that Northwestern States can get full benefits of shipping before navigation closes. It is understood here that most Ontario people are pretty well stocked up with coal, and of course the railways will continue to bring it in.

The recipes for Salmon Loaf and the method of cooking Pot Roast follow:

Salmon Loaf—
1 1-2 cups salmon.
1 cup white sauce.
1 1-2 cups boiled rice.

Pot Roast—
Select a lean piece of meat as rump. Put into the bottom of the pot a granite saucer or rack to keep the meat from touching the bottom of the pot. Set the meat on the saucer. Put in a very small quantity of water, and keep just enough to prevent burning. Cover very closely and cook over the fire until cooked throughout. For this an iron pot is best and it should have a very close cover.

Y. M. C. A. IS SEEKING A BOYS' SECRETARY

Committee is in Touch With the National Council But in the Meantime Organization of Boys' Activities is Going Ahead.

Y. M. C. A. DOINGS

The opening of the Public Schools and the return of the boys and young men from their vacations, has served to bring the attendance at the Young Men's Christian Association building again up to normal. While the various privileges of the Association are being largely used, still the organization of the various groups has been somewhat delayed owing to the existing vacancy on the staff caused by the resignation of Mr. Galley.

A committee representing the Board of Directors has corresponded during the past month with about twenty-five trained Y.M.C.A. men, from which number they have endeavoured to secure a competent Boys' Secretary. Twice during the month the Secretaryship has been offered to men of the right qualifications, but, as other associations have also been in search of men, our committee has failed in each instance to fill the vacancy. The Committee is still in touch with the National Council and have not given up the thought of securing a trained boy secretary, but, at the present time, it seems necessary to go ahead with the organization of the boys' activities. A meeting of committee men will be held on Friday evening, October 5th, with a tea at 6.30 o'clock, to endeavour to get the full programme launched, with the help of such voluntary workers as may be available and the present members of the staff.

The senior billiard tables are quite active at the present time. The new English billiard table purchased from the Oriental Hotel has been set up and should appeal to business men. Mr. Edgar Walton is agitating the matter of organizing a church bowling league of men over thirty years of age, and a league is also contemplated for young men of eighteen to thirty.

The staff is being assisted at the present time in the supervision of the senior games by the following High School young men: Minto Bronscombe, Chas. Armstrong, Karl Kirn and Ralph Meserve.

The boys' gymnasium class as well as the business men's class, are organized and are now meeting regularly, being well attended for this season of the year. It is expected that the Sunday afternoon meeting will be started about the 15th of October. A membership campaign is being planned to open on the 24th of the month. We would suggest to boys and men that now is the time to become members of the Association, and, can assure them that the present season will be one of the very best in the history of the Association.

PERSHING REGIMENT ESCAPES AIR BOMBS

Germans Attack Them at Night While They Are Carrying Supplies to the French.

ENGINE LIGHT THE TARGET.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Sept. 26.—By day and by night the men of the American regiment of engineers, which has taken over an important line of French strategic railways, are hauling tons upon tons of ammunition and other supplies to the French Army units operating against the Germans.

The American regiment has been turned over to the French and is getting all its supplies except clothing from the French Government. The officers and men entered upon the work with the greatest enthusiasm and they already have been under German bombs and machine-gun fire from aeroplanes.

Within the last few nights a heavy rain of supplies hurrying toward the front was attacked by several airplanes. None of the bombs came dangerously close, but every time the firebox of the engine was opened for stoking the planes swooped down upon the train and pattered it with steel-jacketed bullets. This fire got so hot that eventually the train was stopped, the crew lating their experience afterwards these lating their experience aftrwards these trainmen rather "swanked" about it over their inexperienced brothers. The spirit of adventure is strong throughout the American ranks, and the engineers who so far have not been bombed are openly jealous of their more "fortunate" comrades. So far none of the regiment has been under shellfire, but the men may yet have a taste of the noisy German 5.9's and the whistling "Percys," "Wooly Bears," and "Whizzbangs."

The regiment was recruited from American railroads, and all classes, train operatives, dispatchers, etc., are included. There is a great spirit of comradeship among the officers and men, most of whom have worked together and have known each other for years. The regiment is known as an operating force, as opposed to the engineers enlisted as construction forces.

Before proceeding to the front the regiment was quartered in a pretty little French town within the zone of the French Army. The arrival of the Americans at this town was kept secret and they marched into the place late at night after all lights had been extinguished. The soldiers were not allowed to smoke, strike matches or say a word. Despite this stealthy entrance, however, the French townspeople knew quickly of the arrival, and soon the streets were filled with a quiet throng which joined in among the Americans and paraded with them arm in arm. It was one of the strangest welcomes any troops probably every received anywhere, but it was at the same time one of the most sincere.

Try Magnesia For Your Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity. Prevents Food Fermentation.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little magnesia—not the ordinary carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in your stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

Are Arranging For Tag Day

Ladies Will Meet To-morrow to Prepare the Rosettes and Tags

The ladies interested in the Children's Aid Society met yesterday afternoon in the Bank of Montreal Chambers and elected Mr. J. Knox convener and Mrs. W. A. Sanderson secretary, with Mrs. W. Stocker convener of the Rosette Committee. On Wednesday, at 2 p.m., there will be another meeting of ladies to prepare the rosettes and tags. All the old captains are asked to attend, and any ladies that can assist in any way at the same place, over the Bank of Montreal.

Bulgar's Presence A Menace, Panaretoff Plays A Role

Serbian Minister in U.S. Denounces Practice of Enemies' Officials in Assuming a Guise to Please Sentiments of Countries in Which They Reside

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Presence in America of Bulgarian Minister Panaretoff is a menace, according to Serbian Minister Michailovitch, in a statement yesterday.

Replying to Panaretoff's recent exclusive interview in which he declared that Bulgaria had joined the Teutons because the Kaiser made a better offer and that she was now ready for peace, Michailovitch to-day said the allies should "consider this danger."

"That system of the enemies' officials in neutral and allied countries playing a role to please the sentiments of the country in which they are residing, shows with how little scruples they are acting and with what confidence we should receive them," Michailovitch declared.

"The mere fact that they are able to do so is dangerous, and I think it is time the allies should consider this danger."

The Serb denounced Panaretoff's statement that Bulgaria would have preferred fighting on the side of the allies.

"While the Bulgarian King, Government and Parliament constantly profess great friendship for the central powers, the official representative of Bulgaria states here that "she had no particular love for the central powers," Michailovitch declared. "And this he dares to say in a country where there are now the representatives of the allies who had been negotiating with the Bulgarian Government on concessions which Serbia would have had to make, and to these proposals Bulgaria answered by a treacherous attack on Serbia at the moment when she was desperately defending her frontiers against the German and Austrian armies."

To the Bulgar's statement that his country is now ready for peace, the Serbian Minister replied:

"Just like Germany, which declares she is ready for peace at a time when she is occupying several French departments, Belgium, Roumania and Poland, Bulgarian agents also declare that Bulgaria has achieved her war aims, having divided Serbia with Austria. This desire of our enemies is easily understood. It is not so, however, that this declaration will influence American public opinion, which rose to fight and prevent the realization of these monstrous intentions."

In pointing out "a few misleading statements of the Bulgarian representative," Michailovitch added:

"The entry of Bulgaria into the present war was not caused by any national aspirations. For more than a year during the war Bulgaria had been neutral and did not mention any aspirations. When Germany and Austria assaulted Serbia in 1915, perhaps chiefly because of the danger from the allied action in the Dardanelles, Bulgaria entered the war as Germany's agent with two aims—the destruction of Serbia and the preventing of Russia to settle down at Constantinople. The whole Bulgarian press clearly and openly stated it."

HUMANITARIAN WORK AMONG THE BELGIANS

In a measure the food problem of Belgium has been solved by the Belgian Government financing the relief work undertaken by the Dutch authorities by means of loans from the United States.

But the daily ration under the present conditions cannot exceed a bowl of soup and a slice of bread to each person per day, and while this may stay the pangs of hunger for a grown person, it is pitifully inadequate for the growing child, with the result that hundreds of thousands of Belgian children are suffering from tuberculosis, rickets and other ailments due to underfeeding.

The Belgian Relief Commission still calls for funds to carry on the very essential work, two branches of which will appeal to every Canadian who realizes how Belgium stood in the breach when the world was in danger.

The first is the Belgian Children's Health Fund. This is to enable the bringing of starved, consumptive, ailing little ones from Belgium into Holland, where, under the guidance of properly constituted Dutch authorities selected by the Belgian Relief Commission, and approved by the British and Dutch Governments, they can be cared for, housed, fed, medically attended for a period averaging six weeks. Reports show that at the present moment more than 15,000 children are waiting in Belgium for their turn to go to Holland, and the number increases weekly because of the German deportations of parents.

The second fund is the Belgian Orphans' Fund. What with the rapid over-running of Belgium by the German army, the wholesale removal and cruel deportations of whole populations, the death of fathers who fought the Hun and the absence of those still in the trenches, thousands of children have been left alone lacking food, clothing and attention, and in ignorance whether their parents are dead or alive. An organization has been effected so thorough that at a cost of $3.70 per month per child, these waifs can be fed, clothed and educated. Further details regarding both these funds may be obtained and subscriptions forwarded through the Local Committee of the Belgian Relief Fund.

NO CLASH ON WESTERN FRONT BETWEEN THE HOSPITAL CORPS MORE GERMAN INTRIGUE EXPOSED

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM (By Mail) —German agencies recently have been spreading broadcast on the continent the report that serious differences have arisen between the British army medical service and the American surgeons and physicians who have been working with the British force in France. The story has been given much publicity by its sponsors in Belgium and France. For the purpose of proving or disproving this statement the correspondent of the Associated Press accredited to British general headquarters of the facts, visiting not only base hospitals which have been taken over by American medical units but casualty clearing stations in which American surgical teams are working. Here is the truth:

UTMOST CORDIALITY.

The utmost cordiality has and does exist between the British medical service and the Americans who are working with them. The assertion that there has been any quarrel between the two bodies is without foundation. As one eminent American put it: "The story is a gross canard. The reasons for circulating it are obvious. The Germans are trying to create between Belgium and French civilians a contempt for America and Great Britain, and, consequently, a hostility towards these two nations. The canard cannot be called humorous, but it certainly is an interesting demonstration of the fact that while the German may be a good soldier he is not a psychologist.

"He is merely discrediting himself in this instance, as he has done many times before since the war started."

LEARNING FROM BRITISH.

The six medical units which were sent over from the United States to take charge of six British base hospitals have become a part of the smoothly-running organization that the British have developed. The Americans feel that they are fortunate in their position. They realize that they have much to learn about war hospitals and they are having the opportunity of learning rapidly from men who have had more than three years' experience.

The British, on the other hand, recognize fully the sacrifices that have been made by the Americans, many of them eminent surgeons with big practices at home, to come to France to do their bit in caring for the wounded. These sacrifices are appreciated, and the attitude of the British medical service from the director-general down, has been most sympathetic and helpful. The excellent work being alone by the American units has frequently been the subject of the most complimentary remarks by all ranks of the British merical organization.

SIX BASE HOSPITALS.

Roughly speaking the six base hospitals conducted by the Americans have beds for about 1,500 patients each and there are many times when they are filled to overflowing, for base hospitals must care, not only for their own wounded, but for Germans as well.

The six base hospitals have in addition to their other work, furnishing some ten surgical teams for service in casualty clearing stations near the firing line. These teams usually consist of a surgeon, an assistant, a nurse and an orderly. American surgeons whose names are famous internationally are labouring beside youthful medical officers who have sat under them in the classrooms at home. Dr. Crile of Cleveland, Dr. Cushing of Havard, Dr. Brewer of New York, Dr. Harte of Philadelphia, Dr. Murphy of St. Louis and Dr. Beesley of Chicago—they call them majors over here—all have been on are at present working night and day in casualty clearing stations, which have been caring for the wounded from the last great offensive.

These surgical teams have had one characteristic experience. Their work is hampered and their lives are endangered by German airmen, who persist in hurling high explosives down among them. In one of the latest raids the German aviators killed or rewounded many of their own men who were prisoners being cared for in one of these hospitals.

FORM HABITS IN THE ARMY

Soldiers Who Learn to Perform Daily Duties by the Clock Never Forget Them.

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—One of the strongest recommendations for military life, in the opinion of men back from the front, is that it tends to give one settled habits of living. The soldier has a regular round of daily duties, including lengthy periods for recreation while in training, and he grows used to this method of ordering his existence quickly.

It is a tradition of the race that the easiest way to go through life enjoying oneself is to form good habits, such as regularity in rising, going to bed, eating, shaving, and the like. All these are learned by men in the army. Their duties are so ordered that they may perform the day's tasks with the least possible delay and without confusion.

Furthermore, the discipline maintained in the citizen armies which are fighting in the present war is by no means like that of former times, when harshness and severity were considered essential. It has been found out by those who did not realize it at once that the men of the present Allied armies work and fight better when treated as self-respecting individuals, each one possessed of his freedom if willing to observe discipline for the good of the whole. POPE BENEDICT SEEKS NEW SUPPORT FOR PEACE PROPOSALS

Appeal to the Rulers of Belligerent Nations Has Been Ineffective, But He Is Now Apparently Looking For Assistance From the People

A SIGNIFICANT EDITORIAL

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John M. Hearley.)

ROME, Oct. 2.—Pope Benedict is apparently seeking support of his peace plans from people of the belligerent nations, since his appeal to the rulers has so far been ineffective. Direct approval by the Holy Father of certain Socialistic aims was attributed to him in two separate statements to-day. The greatest significance was attached to an editorial in the Osservatore Romano, a newspaper frequently regarded as the Vatican's official organ, and which it was believed is approved by the Pope. The editorial declared the Holy See was in agreement with the Socialists of Italy and elsewhere in so far as they were seeking to safeguard democratic liberty and protect constitutional right by legal means. Those who professed to see the Pope taking the radical step of sympathizing with Socialistic ideals read the Osservatore Romano's comment in connection with a bitter editorial attack in the newspaper Corriere D'Italia on German Foreign Secretary Kuehlmann. Through these two editorials they held the Vatican had contrived a diplomatic hint to Germany as well as a bit of counsel to German people and especially German Catholics. Another direct intimation of the Vatican's position on development of people's rule was in the Pope's words of greeting to the new Russian diplomat accredited to the Holy See. Interviewed by the United Press this Russian flatly denied that the Pope favoured a reactionary Russia. He said His Holiness expressed personal sympathy with Russia's democracy regarding the revolutionary movement as a political and social evolution. "I found the Pontifical mind agreed," this diplomat asserted, "that peace is exclusive prerogative of parliaments, responsible to people or the people themselves."

J. A. McKONE, Principal

Council Grants $100 To Sunday School Teachers For Convention

The Council granted $100 last night to the Peterborough Sunday School Teachers' Association for the entertainment of the delegates to the Ontario Sunday School Teachers' Association to be held in Peterborough on October 30th, 31st and November 1st. This was $50 less than the sum asked for by the deputation of the local association of which Mr. Joseph Wearing and Mr. J. J. Turner were spokesmen.

Mr. Wearing stated that there would be between four and five hundred delegates to the convention, which was secured for Peterborough only after considerable competition by other cities. They would spend a great deal of money here and by their visit Peterborough would secure extensive advertising. The Board of Trade booklet is being distributed among the delegates who are all adults and come from every part of the Province. Moreover, it was the custom for the convention to assist in defraying the reception and entertainment expenses. The local Association intend to make the occasion a big success, and it was desirable that the visitors should receive the very best impression of Peterborough.

Mr. Turner added that he had tried to secure the 1916 convention for this city, but it had gone to Smith's Falls, but he had been successful in bringing it to Peterborough this year. The expenses would amount to more than $300, part of which, it was hoped, the city would provide.

Ald. Dobbin moved, seconded by Ald. Stratton that $100 be granted to the local Association of Sunday School Teachers and the motion passed by a vote of five to four.

The New Home Treatment For Ugly, Hairy Growths

(Boudoir Secrets.)

Here is a simple, yet very effective method for removing hair and fuzz from the face, neck and arms: Cover the objectionable hairs with a paste made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. Leave this on for two or 3 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have vanished. No pain or inconvenience attends this treatment, but results will be certain if you are sure to get real delatone.

Proposes A "Coney Island" In River Above C.P.R. Bridge

M. W. Peters, 179 Aylmer street, applied to the Council last night for a lease of the two islands north of the C.P.R. bridge, opposite the old Burnham wharf. He wrote that he intended to erect bathing houses, refreshment booths and other attractions and desired a right of way over the old "tail race." His request was referred to the Property Committee. Mayor Duffus remarked that this might solve the bathing problem.

Home Complexion Peeler Works Wonders

To keep the face, neck, arms and hands truly beautiful and youthful in appearance, the treatment which seems most sensible is one which will actually remove the skin itself immediately it begins to age, fade, coarsen or discolor. The only known treatment which will do this, aside from a painful, expensive surgical operation, is the application of ordinary mercolized wax, which is as harmless as it is effective.

The wax is put on at night, just as you apply cold cream, and washed off in the morning. It absorbs the dead and half-dead surface skin in almost invisible flaky particles, a little each day, no discomfort being experienced. With the disappearance of the old cuticle the newer, healthier skin underneath gradually appears, richly beautiful with the flush of youth. This mercolized wax, which you can get at any drug store in original package, is indeed a veritable wonder-worker.

Statement Is Very Serious

fort? The problem is almost entirely an American problem. The stoppage of food supplies from this country to Great Britain would be trying, but not fatal.

So far as our shipping is concerned we are not only able to look after our own needs but we are cheerfully allocating much tonnage to France and Italy. We are glad to do so by reason of our admiration for their work. It is vital that, hand in hand with the equipment of the splendid young men now flocking into your cantonment, must rise an army of American shipbuilders. The men who build the ships in Great Britain regard themselves, and rightly, as performing equal service with the men who face death in the trenches.

America can only fulfill her gigantic army requirements in France by depending on her own shipping and making the issue with Germany a personal one.

LETTER CARRIERS ASK FOR THE APPOINTMENT OF AN ARBITRATION BOARD

Resolution Passed Last Night in Regard to the Allowance of $1.86 Per Week Handed Out By the Dominion Government.

STREET CAR GRIEVANCE

The letter carriers of Peterborough at a meeting held last night unanimously decided to ask the Minister of Labour to appoint an arbitration Board to consider the matter of an adequate increase in the pay of the carriers. The Government has offered an increase amounting to $1.86 per week which the carriers do not consider nearly sufficient in view of the high cost of living.

In this connection the following resolution was passed:

Resolved that we, the letter carriers, porters and other grade employees of the Peterborough Post Office in meeting assembled most emphatically express our regret and disappointment at the totally inadequate allowance of one dollar and eighty-six cents per week, handed out to us by the Government of Canada, as compensation to meet the increased cost of living and be it further,

Resolved that we call the attention of the public to the fact that the Labour Department of the Government figures show that the increased cost of living for the past three years, as per their August report is over 47 per ment there has been corresponding increases in wages of four, five and six dollars per week and,

Whereas we have asked the Government to grant us an increase of twenty dollars per month to meet the present cost of living which, we believe, is neither unreasonable or unpatriotic. That after waiting patiently for over twelve months the allowance handed out to us creates the impression that those in authority drawing large salaries do not know, and do not care, how the workers exist and,

Be it further Resolved that the meeting instruct its executive officers to make application to the Minister of Labour for an arbitration Board on the matter of an adequate increase, under the Industrial Disputes Act.

ANOTHER GRIEVANCE

Another grievance that the local letter carriers have in connection with the street cars. In most of the cities in Canada the carriers when in uniform ride free on the cars. Here a ticket system is in vogue and it is complained that the allowance of tickets is not nearly large enough for the purpose and as a result the carriers have to pay their own fare to accommodate the public. At last night's meeting it was decided to do this no longer.

In regard to their plea for more wages the carriers point out that in order to keep things running, some of them have to undertake other work outside of their regular duties.

BOLO PASHA'S CAREER REVEALS DARK PLOTS

Nearly All Schemes of Man Held For Aiding Germans Failed

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The life story of Bolo Pasha, held charged with having relations with the enemy, appears in the Matin. It reads as if taken from a novel. According to the Matin he was born in Marseilles. After failing in several enterprises, Bolo Pasha went to Paris and started a sort of information bureau. It became the target for numerous complaints, culminating in the condemnation of Bolo by default for abuse of confidence and swindling in 1894.

In 1903, the Matin says, he turned up at Bordeaux, where he married a widow who had an annual income of 70,000 francs. He then enlarged his field of operations, appearing at Lyons as an agent for champagne and other wines.

The Matin says Bolo Pasha met Abbas Hilmi, former Khedive of Egypt, in Zurich in March, 1915, and concluded an arrangement which was approved by Gottlieb Von Jagow, then German Foreign Minister, under which 10,000,000 marks would be paid in instalments to Bolo through the former Khedive for the purpose of influencing the French press. In accordance with this arrangement 4,000,000 marks was paid by round about methods through Swiss banks, to avert suspicion. Abbas Hilmi and an associate are said to have collected 200,000 francs as a commission. After that time Bolo Pasha and Abbas Hilmi seem to have fallen out, for their relations ceased.

Destructive Fire Near Valentia John Day Is Heavy Loser

Entire Line of Farm Buildings Were Destroyed Including Brick Veneered House—Exact Cause is Unknown

LINDSAY, Oct. 2.—The brick veneered residence, stables and other outbuildings of Mr. John Day, who resided north of Valentia, was totally destroyed by fire on Saturday, shortly after noon hour. Besides the buildings there was also consumed $800 worth of hogs and the season's harvest, save a quantity of red clover, which had been cut but not harvested.

The cause of the destructive fire is a mystery, but it is believed it either started from a heated box in the wind mill or from a spark, which might have smouldered somewhere since the silo was filled the day previous.

Mr. W. R. Swain, said that he passed the Day farm on his way to Little Britain about 11.45 o'clock, but saw no signs of fire. He had not proceeded very far, however, when he was asked by parties he met where the fire was raging.

Mr. Day was assisting in drawing corn on the farm of Mr. Lane, close by, when the fire was noticed. Willing hands hurried to the scene but could do nothing to check the flames which were licking up all before them. The neighbors confined their efforts toward saving the contents of the house, and everything was taken out safely except a new coat valued at $65.00, the property of Mr. Day. The flames licked up the barns, stables, driving shed and pighouse like matchwood. In the latter was a quantity of pigs, valued at $800 and these were entirely consumed. A wood house full of wood also added its quota to the flames and all combine to make one of the fiercest fires ever seen in the section. Today there is nothing to be seen but smouldering embers, the walls and chimney of the house and the cement silo, the boards of the facing as well as the roof having been burned away. None of the horses or cattle were destroyed although a bull had a narrow escape.

Mr. Day had insurance on his buildings, but this will not nearly cover his loss, which will be very heavy. His friends throughout the district will sincerely sympathize with him in the misfortune which overtook him in Saturday's destructive blaze.

Animals are wiser than some of us human beings, mused Miss Cayenne. In what respect? They shed their furs in summer and have them in good shape to wear when cold weather sets in.—Washington Star.

17 Apartments In Snowden House Remodelled By Braund Brothers

The plans for the remodelling of the Snowden House which will be transformed into a modern apartment building were submitted to the Council last night by Messrs. R. C. and J. T. Braund, the owners of the property. There will be seventeen apartments with stores on the ground floor, which will be brought out to the street line. The east wall will be moved over, thus closing the present lane and giving the new building, a frontage of seventy feet, with seventy feet depth.

The Council decided that certain details should be constructed under the supervision of the City Engineer and the Provincial Board of Health.

The plans include three bay windows on each of the second and third flats extending 2 1-2 feet over the sidewalk. Mr. R. C. Braund stated that these were similar to the Crown Life Building windows. There will also be two fire escape balconies projecting five feet over Charlotte street. City Engineer Parsons reported that no projection should be more than 18 inches.

Ald. Duncan said he wished to give Braund brothers every encouragement in their enterprise, but he pointed out that balconies over the sidewalk presented a danger of ice or objects dropping on pedestrians.

Mr. Braund replied that the balcony was intended only as a fire escape, and it was desired to make it an adornment to the building. The Turnbull building escape was 4 1-2 feet wide.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Taylor that the fire escapes be erected under the supervision of the City Engineer.

Four inner rooms on each of the second and third flats will be illuminated and ventilated by the sinking of a light shaft and this must be approved by the Medical Officer of Health. One apartment will be located in the basement at the rear.

Mr. Braund explained that five escapes had to be provided at the front and rear because there would be no side exits. The new building will extend easterly close against the Sturgeon Motor Sales Garage.

The work of remodeling the Snowden House has already been begun, with Mr. W. J. Braund, of Toronto, as contractor. There will likely be four stores on the ground floor.

Appeal Against Magistrate Dumble's Verdict In Warne Case Heard in Toronto

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—"Rich, ruby and luscious" was the advertised claim for Wilson's invalid port in connection with which the Warne Drug Co., Ltd., was fined $300 under the Ontario Temperance Act at Peterborough.

To-day before Mr. Justice Masten, R. T. Harding of Toronto, and G. N. Gordon of Peterborough, moved to quash the conviction.

They argued that the port was medicated to such an extent that it was not a beverage and emphasized the fact that witnesses had said it made them sick, which they used as another argument against the beverage charge. Furthermore it had been sold to the drug trade exclusively for 30 years as a medicine, but not as a wine. Judgment was reserved.

ELEVATOR IS NEARLY COMPLETE

Huge Water Tank Will Be Erected on Top of Building—Sign May Be Erected

Work is progressing on the new plant of the Quaker Oats Company. The eighteen new silo tanks for storing grain are about complete, also the concrete structure south of the tanks, which is the elevator proper. In this building the grain will be cleaned and elevated before passing into the mill for milling purposes. On top of the entire structure will be placed a huge water tank that will extend as high as the present wooden tower for elevating concrete. This will supply water for the various services throughout the building, including the sprinkler system, and will supplement the city water supply. The company is seriously considering the possibility of placing a huge electric sign on top of this portion of the plant. Such a sign, properly illuminated, could be seen for miles around.

Presentation To Miss C. Lang

Receives a Club Bag From Girls of the Meter Department of the C. G. E.

A number of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. E. Chard, Western avenue, on Saturday night last to celebrate the birthday of her daughter, Miss Chard, and to say farewell to one of the party— Miss Caroline Lang— who is leaving the city.

Miss Lang was presented with a club bag from the employees of the meter department of the C.G.E.. The presentation was made by Miss Chard, while Miss A. Bird read the following address:

Dear Caroline:— We are assembled here this afternoon to bid farewell to you, who have proved yourself a kind and trustworthy friend.

You are leaving us to go to other fields of labour in which we all hope you will gain friendships. We may all travel far upon the ocean of life, but we find at last, though it may be humble, there is no place like home.

We are very sorry to lose your kind and cheery face, so we felt that 'ere you parted from our midst we must show our esteem and in a very small measure, the high regard in which your girl friends hold you.

We wish you to accept this club bag, not for its value in mere money, but as a remembrance of your many friends in Peterborough.

We wish you a safe and pleasant journey and should it be God's wish that you return remember we will have a warm spot in our hearts for you and will always give you the glad hand. Wishing you many years of health and prosperity, we will bid you adieu.

Signed on behalf of the girls of the Meter Department.

Russians Made A Mile Gain Yesterday

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 2.—Russian advanced detachments in the Riga region yesterday broke through the German lines and pushed forward for a distance of one mile, says the official statement issued to-day by the Russian War Office. South of the railway in Kronenberg-Spital-Grounduli sector, our vanguard detachments have advanced one mile.

PETERBORO' SHORT 10,000 CORDS OF MILLWOOD WILL REQUIRE 4,000 TONS OF COAL MORE THAN LAST YEAR

While the Great Lakes shipping continues, the supply of coal in Peterborough will remain light, according to a prominent local dealer. The heaviest shipments are going at the present time to the Lake Superior ports and to others that are reached by long railway hauls. By December, however, the local situation should improve, when more attention is paid to the demand from the cities reached by comparatively short railway routes. Thus, there is a tendency to supply only actual needs of consumers here until January first, after which it is fully expected the supplies may be large enough for all the requirements.

The gentleman who reviewed the current conditions is a close student of the market. He has estimated that the shortage of wood that has existed throughout the summer, and will become more accentuated, perhaps, during the winter, will have an appreciable effect on the coal market. On the figures of the Peterborough Lumber Co., and the McDonald Estate, there is a shortage of 10,000 cords of mill refuse, that is, the butts and slabs scrapped in the manufacture of lumber. This is believed to represent 4,000 tons of coal, and the dealer referred to proposes to urge upon the City Council or will take the initiative himself to enlist the assistance of Coal Controller Magrath to supply this estimated shortage of fuel. It will be pointed out that the extreme lack of wood has created a greatly increased demand for coal; hence Peterborough must receive at least 4,000 tons of coal in excess of last year's receipts. Many citizens have been burning coal since midsummer, and even previously, who formerly used coal only in the winter.

This is one phase of the situation which should not be lost sight of, and it has been emphasized by a dealer whose foresight and business connections were largely responsible for the maintenance of Peterborough's supply last winter when practically every other dealer found himself helpless before the problem that was suddenly thrust upon them.

The special dog by-law that has been in force here all summer, was rescinded last night. The former regulations now prevail, permitting dogs to be at large only on a leash. The Council felt that if this by-law is enforced dogs will not roam the streets and in the Spring the more stringent regulations may be renewed.

Woodmen Of The World Hold Social Evening

Number of Visitors Present From Out of Town—Interesting Programme Provided

A large number of members and friends gathered in the W.O.W. hall last night and the first of a series of concerts to be held during the Winter months was staged.

An excellent programme was compiled, which was thoroughly enjoyed; afterwards refreshments were served and games then indulged in till after midnight.

Those present from out of town including a party of Woodmen who motored down from Lindsay, viz.: Mr. Dan Cinnamon, head consul, Commander of the Order; Dr. Annis, clerk of Lindsay Camp and Sovereign Major Crawford; Sovereign Deadman and Sovereign Allan; the latter scored heavily in a new song entitled, "Blighty" later in the evening.

H. C. C. Cinnamon gave a short address, in the course of which he gave most encouraging reports of all camp in his jurisdiction and stated that quite a few new camps have been added quite recently to the Order, which is most satisfactory, considering the financial situation caused by this awful war and the turmoil which exists in this country. Before closing his remarks, he was delighted to see Peterborough camp at the head of the Honour Roll at the present time and the attendance to-night clearly showed the interest taken in Woodcraft in this city of Peterborough, and hoped he would soon have the pleasure to again attend one of these concerts.

Major Crawford was then called upon and only those present can understand the situations and predicaments he went through while on duty in the first line trenches. He gave a synopsis of his trip from leaving Canada to his return and he promised at some future date to return to Peterborough Camp and give them a fuller description of this war as it appeals to him, when he has more time at his disposal. He is returning to duty again in the course of about six weeks. He was loudly applauded at the end of his speech.

Dr. Annis and Sov. Deadman also spoke and were delighted by the manner in which they were received by Peterborough Woodmen, and extended a hearty invitation to visit Lindsay on Friday next at their meeting. The invitation was accepted and quite a few members will motor up to Lindsay on Friday.

The other local artistes appearing in the programme needs no introduction whatever. As entertainers, they certainly "know how" to fill the bill, and every item was heartily applauded. D. C. Jas. W. Plowman, of Toronto, the well known organizer, wound up the addresses in his own inimitable style, and asked for the support of the members for the October campaign which he is conducting in Peterborough.

Sov. A. Graham acted as chairman for the evening, and did all that was required of him in that position.

Clerk Sutcliffe was asked for a few remarks, and he gave a short report of the standing of the Local Camp, which is now in fine condition, and at the head of the honour roll, and assured the members, if Mr. Plowman got their support, Peterborough Camp will win the Silk Banner for 1917 donated by Head Office.

The programme:

1. Pianoforte Selection — Miss Francis.
2. Song (humorous) — Mr. V. Dredge.
3. Address — H.C.C. D. Cinnamon.
4. Reading—Mr. J. John.
5. Song (selected) — Mr. F. Hattshorn.
6. Address—Sov. Major Crawford.
7. Song—"Blighty." Sov. Allan.
8. Recitation—Sov. Miss White.
9. Address—Sov. Dr. Annis.
10. Pianoforte Selection—Sov. J. W. Worth.
11. Address—D.C. J. W. Plowman.

God Save the King.

Canadian Artillery Preparations Never Better Says General Currie

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—Success must ever be ours when co-operation between all services is so marked and when devotion to duty is so outstanding, said Major-General Currie, commanding the Canadians, in a general order to Brigadier-General Morrison, commanding the artillery, after the recent heavy actions. "The assaulting infantry maintain that the artillery preparation was never more complete and that the support was never better," said General Currie. "I am assured that S.O.S. calls were answered within thirty seconds, which shows discipline and vigilance most commendable. I understand that badly gassed gunners also discarded their masks in order to better serve the guns, for whose assistance the infantry was signalling. This indicates esprit de corps of the very highest quality."

LONDON, Sept. 22. — Peking dispatches say that the Chinese Government is willing to send 300,000 troops to France if the Entente Powers approve.

ENEMY TRADING BILL PASSED BY U.S. SENATE.

House Will Send Measure to President for Signature To-day.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—After brief debate the Senate yesterday adopted the conference report on the Trading-With-the-Enemy Bill, with only six negative votes. The House is expected to accept the report today and send the measure to the President for his signature.

The bill, which passed both Houses with little opposition, forbids trading by Americans with enemies or allies of enemies, provides for a custodian of enemy funds, for regulation of foreign insurance companies, for licensing foreign language newspapers, for censorships of all foreign communication, and authorizes the President to embargo imports.

MILITARY NEWS

under the Military Service Act. In Great Britain certain occupations were certified and a man so occupied received conditional exemption. But, while conditional exemption—i.e., exemption granted so long as the man remains at a specified occupation—may be granted by a local tribunal in Canada, there will be no trades or occupations granted exemption as a whole. This decision, it is understood, has been definitely reached, and local tribunals will be guided by it. It is pointed out here that the Military Service Act does not provide for the listing of occupations specially calling for exemption. The plan was not found to work satisfactorily in England. Further, the extreme variations in conditions prevailing in different parts of Canada render such a plan even less suitable here.

Driver Adam Davidson (No. 2[illegible]), has arrived safely at Halifax and is expected home any day. Driver Davidson has been overseas nearly three years and no doubt will be welcome to Peterborough by all his friends.

TAKE THUMB PRINTS NOW

Groves, of Omemee, who went overseas with the 109th Battalion, is also reported a prisoner.

KINGSTON, Oct. 1.—The 2,000 men to be conscripted in Military District No. 3 in the first class will be drafted into two battalions. The first of these is already organized here, under Lt.-Col. R. W. Smart. The other will be organized at Ottawa.

Caring for Jewelry

Plain gold brooches, rings, bracelets and chains may be cleaned easily, by washing them in a lather, made by a good, pure, white soap and warm water. Be sure to dry them well, then rub them gently with a piece of chamois skin. That will polish them.

Never put pearls in water, as it is quite likely to darken them. And the same applies to turquoises; water is not at all good for them.

If you get your diamond ring very dirty, you may wash it carefully in good white soap suds, but be sure to dry it carefully and polish it gently with chamois.

One thing that is wise for every woman to keep in her room is a Jewel Box, for holding her Jewelry. We show various designs, engraved and plain, inexpensively priced.

JUDGMENT RESERVED.

A. Simpson's seven-year-old daughter died of diphtheria while isolated in her home in Belleville, and the jury awarded the father $300 damages against the Board of Health for contributory neglect, but the trial judge dismissed the action. The Divisional Court has reserved judgment on Simpson's appeal. W. C. Mikel, K. C., for Simpson, stated that the place of isolation was an improper one, and on the last day of the child's life the Board sent a bottle of tonic "to make her eat," but the Board did not supply food for her to eat, and he argued that the Board's alleged neglect contributed to the child's death.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my son, No. 111590, Lance Corp. Horace William Stanley, killed in action Oct. 2nd, 1916, on the Somme:

Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep
From which none ever wake to weep,
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes;
Asleep in Jesus, far from thee
Thy kindred and their graves may be,
But thine is still a blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep.
—From the family.

In loving memory of my dear "Brother" No. 111590 Lance-Corp. Horce Wm. Stanley, killed in action, Oct. 2nd, 1916, on the Somme.

He marched so bravely up the lines,
Fearless of what was coming;
For the next shell that came did its work;
He cried to his pal "Oh, Charlie, I'm dying."

Oh, had this war never commenced,
He might have been here yet;
But he was put to the test,
And did his best,
And now God has taken him with with Him to rest.
—Inserted by his sorrowing sister, Maude.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM AN OTONABEE SOLDIER

Gunner Bullock Gives Descriptive Account of a Trip to Scotland—Met a Number of Peterboro' Boys—Has Now Been Sent to France.

Miss C. Bullock of Otonabee received this very interesting letter from her brother, Gunner V. E. Bullock, in training on the heavy Battery, at Shorncliffe Camp, London, Eng. Gunner Bullock and several others have since been transferred to France, after a short training of six weeks in England.

Shorncliffe, July 27, 1917.

Dear Sister and All,—Thought it was about time for me to write again, although I have not received a single letter yet from Canada, but I should any day now.

Things are going not too badly here at Shorncliffe, far better than I expected, and in fact it is ahead of life at Otterpool. We have been getting lots of training lately. Every day we take a (march), march of from six to eight miles, and sometimes even two a day. Besides, we have a great deal of physical training, but it's good for a person, even if it is strenuous. I now weigh 166 pounds, in uniform, which is twenty pounds heavier than I was two months ago. The exercise and out-door life does it, and the wholesome food, although it is not too plentiful.

Met Peterborough Boy.

I have met quite a few here that I know. Willie Ogilvie is in this camp, and so is Joe Lemay. The other day I met Leonard Pattrick here, who used to live in Smith, near Lakefield. I have also met a member (from) of old Belleville chaps who came over here some time ago. It's funny how you'll meet people you know no matter where you go.

To-day I am on guard. I have to march up and down a beat for two hours and then off four. We began last night at 6 p.m. and have been on guard three times of two hours each already, but am off till 4.30 p.m., and then will go on for two hours, and we will be through with the guard duty for some time.

I just got home night before last from my six days' leave. Clarke, Madill and myself got our ticket (free) for Inverness, but did not go any further than Edinburgh. I liked it so well I didn't wish to go any further. We left here, one hundred of us, and were marched to the Station, a mile away. We arrived in London at the famous Charing Cross Station at 2 p.m., then we went away underground and took a subway for a way.

We took a 'bus for the famous Wax Works, where all the famous people are there, only made of wax, but so lifelike that you felt like talking to them, and, in fact, we were just going to talk to a policeman when we discovered he consisted of wax. The famous kings and queens, and ladies, poets, writers, criminals, etc., were all there. The wax has a very flesh-like appearance.

Chamber of Horrors.

In the Chamber of Horrors, as it is called, there is a Chinese opium den and a Frenchman getting the guillotine. It was the most marvellous sight I ever saw.

We then visited the well-known London Tower and Bridge. They are well worth seeing. We then went to St. Pancras Station and left London about 9 p.m. and arrived in Edinburgh at 8 p.m. next morning. We passed through York, Carlisle, Hawick and Galashiels.

Edinburgh is a very pretty city and better than London which is many times larger. The streets are wider in Edinburgh and the whole city is cleaner and healthier. The people, too, look healthier, and say, but I like the "burr" in the Scottish voices. The stations are very large in both places. The Union (in Toronto) would only be a corner of them.

We got lodging and board at a home for soldiers. Say, it was good to feel a real decent bed again. The meals were fairly good, too. We went to the Art Gallery and saw the beautiful paintings, the best I ever beheld; I also climbed up a winding stair in a monument 150 feet high, to Sir Walter Scott.

Black Douglas.

You could see the whole city and the Firth of Forth. We also visited the famous Edinburgh Castle, where the Black Douglas scaled the wall, and captured it with only thirty men. The castle is a huge rock fortress on top of a high rocky hill. It has excellent natural fortifications. Inside are the historical rooms where the kings of nobility met; the walls are covered with coats of armour, spears, shields, huge flint lock guns, daggers, etc.

I also visited Holywood Palace, where Scottish kings used to live. It is a pretty old castle, partly crumbled away, and lying at the foot of a high hill. The banquet hall is 100 feet long and about 40 feet wide, and the walls are covered with oil paintings. This is the castle where Mary Queen of Scots lived, and I saw Ford Darnley's room and the stairway where his body was thrown down when she had him murdered. I was out to the Zoo Gardens, a few miles out of the city. It is a very pretty city, and has many animals, birds, snakes, etc. London Zoo, at Regent Park, is a great deal larger and has the most marvellous collection of animals, birds, insects, etc. a person could imagine. It covers about two hundred acres and took us four hours to see it; I also saw the great bridge across the Firth of Forth, a mile and a half long.

Back to London.

We came down to London and spent the last two days of our leave there. We stayed at the Y.M.C.A. for soldiers. The number of 'busses in London is enormous; there must be 25,000 of them. You can go anywhere on a 'bus for a penny to a pence. I was at the famous Piccadilly and Leicester Squares, and also the Strand. I also saw the Parliament Buildings, Westminster Abbey, and St. Paul's Cathedral. It is one terribly large city and a person could easily get lost, and in fact we did for an hour, but soon got back where I wanted to get. I got a couple of souvenirs of Edinburgh and will send them and some postcards and views, to-morrow.

It was one glorious holiday, and it was all too short. I would like a month to see the cities here.

How is everybody, all alive, I suppose. I hope you don't forget to write soon. As ever,

VICTOR.

LONDON PRESS SOUNDS ALARM

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—An Associated Press cable says that the London papers are becoming very critical of the government on air raids, claiming that the Germans are outstripping the British in number of machines being built.

An inch of rain falling upon an area of one square mile is equivalent to nearly 17,500,000 gallons, weighing 145,260,000 pounds, or 64,844 tons.

A Bowl of Soup and a Slice of Bread

HOW many of us grumble at the burden of planning three meals a day, day after day! How much more simple it is in Belgium, where most of the inhabitants stand in line for a few hours to get a bowl of soup and a slice of bread—the entire day's ration.

Imagine any little child you know trying to grow on such a pittance! Naturally the poor little Belgian children are breaking down. Tuberculosis, rickets and kindred ills are the common lot. As far as funds will permit these children are taken to Holland to recuperate under proper feeding and care. But funds are so low they cannot be kept longer than 6 weeks, and more than 15,000 children are waiting for this much. Generous contributions (marked for the Belgian Children's Health Fund) will enable the Dutch authorities, who have replaced the American Commission, to carry on this vital work successfully.

Then the orphans! Think of the thousands whose fathers have fallen in battle, are still fighting, or have been taken away into German bondage. Living in the midst of plenty, will you deny these orphans must be fed and clothed and educated? Yet this work, too, must depend largely on charity. Mark your contributions for the Belgian Orphans' Fund.

As you plan your own meals, remember Belgium's "Bowl of Soup and a Slice of Bread" and HELP until you feel the pinch. It's a debt we owe to Belgium.

Your contribution will go entire through the Belgian Minister of the Interior (in Le Havre, France) to Dutch authorities, who administer the relief work under the approval of the British and Dutch Governments, and Mr. Hoover's Committee.

What will you do for the waifs of Belgium?

NATION-WIDE PLOT TO SEIZE THE GOVERNMENT IS THWARTED BY ARREST OF I.W.W. LEADERS

William D. Haywood Among Those Taken in the Round-Up—Women Volunteer to Aid Agents—Gigantic Conspiracy for a Reign of Terror Bared by Papers Confiscated Recently.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 2.—The federal government inflicted a severe blow on the Industrial Workers of the World when they arrested William D. Haywood, the organization's controlling spirit, and many other agitators after the United States Grand Jury had returned indictments accusing 166 I. W. W. leaders of "seditious conspiracy."

In a few days government officials said the public would be fully informed of a gigantic plot by the I. W. W. to conduct a reign of sabotage, especially in factories engaged in war work, to capture the industries of the country and eventually to assume violent control of the nation.

The 166 indicted leaders, individually and as an organization, are accused of participating in a conspiracy to aid Germany by wrecking the munition plants in this country. A few minutes after the indictments had been presented to Judge Evans deputy marshals and agents of the Department of Justice, materially aided by prominent Chicago women, had arrested Haywood and thirty-five other leaders in a raid made upon the I. W. W. headquarters here. A second raid netted sixteen others and about one hundred and fifty were detained to be questioned.

Women Volunteer to Aid.

Many women in Chicago have volunteered the use of their automobiles, with themselves as drivers, to the government in any kind of war service, and when it was known that the indictments would be returned a score of those women were asked to have their cars at a certain point of rendezvous.

When word was flashed from the court room that the indictments had been presented the government agents in the volunteer automobiles descended quickly upon the I. W. W. headquarters. The arrest of Haywood and the others followed and the women drove them in the automobiles to the Federal Building, where representatives of the Department of Justice began to question them.

Orders were telegraphed to various cities, particularly in the West where there have been many serious I.W.W. disturbances, for the arrest of other indicted men, and it was announced that the 166 accused men should be in custody before midnight.

After he had been questioned by Hinton G. Clabaugh, of the Department of Justice, Haywood was held in default of $25,000 bail. Others apprehended in Chicago and held in default of $100,000 bail were:—

Richard Brazier, of Chicago, Spokane and elsewhere, member of the General Executive Board of the I. W. W.

George Andreychine, of Chicago, Duluth and elsewhere, manager of the I. W. W. Publicity Bureau, Chicago.

Sladmfr Lossieff, Chicago.

Bert Lorton, Chicago, manager recruiting union.

Charles Rothfischer, editor A. Bergumkas, Chicago and Cleveland.

Charles Phahm, Chicago and Detroit.

Herbert Mahler, Seattle and Chicago.

Based on Seized Papers.

After the first automobile loads had reached the Federal Building more persons were taken in custody, until approximately 150 had been taken in to be questioned.

The indictments followed an investigation into the records and papers seized on September 5 in a nation-wide federal raid upon I. W. W. headquarters and offices. Simultaneously on that day agents of the Department of Justice seized nearly every I. W. W. office and branch headquarters throughout the country and took possession of a vast amount of letters, telegrams, books and documents.

All the seized property was sent to Chicago, and William C. Fitts, Assistant United States Attorney General, began a thorough investigation of it. He was assisted by Frank K. Nebeker, of Salt Lake City, both assistants to the Attorney General, who have had long and wide experience with the Industrial Workers of the World. United States Attorney Clyne, of this district, worked in close co-operation with them and had charge of presenting the facts to the Grand Jury and the drawing of the indictments.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

Ormiston's face lit up with a new and more vital interest. A savage look crept over his face. His eyes narrowed, his hand instinctively sought the hilt of his rapier.

"More than gossip, sweet jewel," he cried. "But an hour ago, there came news of plate ships, sailing from Vera Cruz. Trust Captain Morgan to smell out a treasure fleet. My men are all grinding their swords like honest butchers."

She rose, her face very pale.

"Then you—you are going away?" she questioned, striving desperately to repress the note of eagerness in her voice.

He did not notice it. Thoughts of Spanish galleons, deep laden with silver and gold, excluded from his mind such lesser matters as the whims and vagaries of a woman.

"Yes, if the news be true."

"When?" The question fairly tumbled from her eager lips.

"To-night, if the news comes fair. I wait for word from the town. At dawn, if all goes well, we'll lay off Tiburon, and watch the Windward Passage. There'll be gold aplenty, I'm thinking, and a new crop of Spanish dogs in hell——"

The girl turned away shuddering. Her face was very white, very tragical in its suffering.

"Have you not had enough of gold, and—blood?"

"No, by Saint Bartholomew!" He slapped his knee with a broad and hairy palm. "My men say that I sit ashore overlong—that my sword rusts in its scabbard." He drove the long, shimmering blade part way from its sheath, then drove it back with an oath. "Three months since I have seen the face of one of the Popish devils! Shall I become an old woman, when there are treasure ships to be taken?"

The girl's agitation increased. Her somber eyes were wet with tears. So tightly were her hands clenched that the tender knuckles shone white against the brown of her skin. His words had struck deep, stirring bitter memories.

"What matters a dog of a Spaniard more or less to you?" he laughed.

"Do you think I can forget?" With one hand he swept the tears from her eyes.

"Why waste sighs on what is past?" he demanded roughly. "I sank your father's ship in a fair fight, and then brought you home a slave, as was my right. You might have had a worse master."

Again the girl turned from him, striving in vain to hide her sobs. He went up to her.

"Come—forget it all, and give me a kiss," he urged.

"Madre de Dios! Not now—not now!" She shrank away, her hands outstretched as though to ward off an unseen terror.

Ormiston seized her roughly by the wrist and drew her toward him. A fierce exultation, a joy of possession shone in his eyes.

"A plague on your humors," he grumbled. "Haven't I given you everything you could wish? Waste no tears on Spanish rogues. You belong to them no longer. Come, an end to your black looks, I say, and give me a kiss."

"Let me be!" Ramona cried, struggling from him.

The man's rough humor left him. A sudden anger flared in his face.

"Do as I bid you, wench!" he commanded. "Remember, that I am the master here. If I beg, 'tis but because it pleases me. Come!" He held out his arms, his eyes fixed on hers.

Very slowly the girl moved toward him, her eyes upon the ground. The glow of defiance in them had gone, and a cowed and beaten look had taken its place. She seemed very frail, very pitiful, very much of a child, as he swept her into his arms.

She permitted his embrace quite passively, as he pressed a succession of savage kisses upon her lips. Then with a sudden and harsh laugh he flung her aside.

"Enough of lying soft and warm ashore in the arms of a mistress," he cried. "I'm sick of it. Give me the good salt smell of the sea in my face, and my naked sword in my hand, and to the devil with women, one and all. To-night, by God, we'll ride for Tiburon, and drink like men." He turned once more to her, with a sharp command. "Hark, you, girl. Marster Tench and the others will be here within the hour, and their women with them. Make ready a flagon of wine. If they bring fair news we'll drink a parting cup to lights o' love, and then for the high seas." He strode towards the door of the house. On the steps he paused, regarding the sobbing girl narrowly. "Pull me no long faces!" he admonished her, as he threw open the door. "I'll let no man in Port Royal say he has a merrier wench than I." His laugh, as he disappeared within the house, echoed harshly through the moonlit peace of the garden.

For several seconds the girl stood motionless, staring toward the door. Then with a gasping cry she threw herself once more into the hammock, and lay there, shaking with sobs.

A slender figure crept along the side of the house. With quick and noiseless steps the young mulatto girl approached the hammock and fell on her knees beside her mistress.

"Mistress—Mistress Ramona," she whispered. "What is it?"

The woman in the hammock sat up and composed herself with an effort. With infinite pride she strove to conceal her wretchedness from the servant.

"Wine! Fetch wine!" she commanded, her voice suddenly grown hard. "The master awaits a company." The tears still trembling on her lashes gave the lie to her self-possession.

"But mistress," urged the maid. "What is wrong?"

"Nothing, girl." Ramona rose from the hammock and turned away, her hands clenched, her face white and drawn. "Let me forget—Santa Maria—let me forget," she muttered, then sweeping the tears from her eyes, spoke sharply to the mulatto. "A flagon of Canary sack! Do you not hear?"

"Yes, mistress—but why should you weep?"

"Madre de Dios! Have I not cause to weep? I, a de Lara of Sevilla, to be the plaything of this—beast!" Her eyes, dark with hatred, sought the door of the house. Within all was silent.

"Mistress—hush!" she exclaimed.

"Have I not cause to weep?" went on her companion, with a deepening note of defiance in her voice, a reckless indifference to the other's warning. "Is it then, nothing, that I should see my father killed before my eyes? Shall I not weep, for the innocence that has been taken from me? Have I not prayed for two years, for two whole years, that I might die, and so have peace, and yet I live and laugh, and play the fool, to serve this fellow's pleasure. Dios! See what he has made of me!" She flung her arms wide, and then burst into a tragical laugh. "Oh—if I but had the courage to kill myself—or him!" She drew herself up to her full height—splendid in her defiance and her grief. "Jesu! I can endure no more!"

Again the maid warned her.

"If he should hear you," she whispered, her voice trembling with fear.

"Then I should be well beaten, like any slave," Ramona exclaimed, the anger that had possessed her giving way to a listless resignation. "Come, girl. Enough of this chatter. Fetch the wine."

The mulatto went toward the door of the house. As she began to mount the steps leading to it, she turned in quick alarm. Far down the slope of the hill a shot echoed through the white silence of the night.

The two women stood facing the gateway, awaiting some further sound but the silence remained unbroken. Ramona turned away and picked up her guitar.

"It is nothing," she said. "Some drunken roysterers in the road, or mayhap Master Tench and his men. Make haste, Lucia. The wine!" She flung herself into the hammock with a sigh, and her fingers swept the strings. "Tienen las Sevillanas, en la mantilla," she sang, as though striving to drown the bitterness that filled her soul.

An then, without warning, there came the sound of halting footsteps in the road, and John Barton, his hand pressed tightly to his side, staggered into the garden.

ENGLAND TO PRODUCE OIL.

Parliament Provides a Law for Government to Bore Wells.

LONDON, Sept. 25. — For several months scientists in the employ of the British Government have been conducting a quiet survey of the possibility of uncovering important beds of petroleum somewhere in the British Isles. No official statement of the results of their scrutiny has been made, but an indication that they are more than hopeful is found in the intrduction by the Government in an unassuming little bill under the title "Petroleum Production Act," which gives the Cabinet sweeping powers to proceed with the boring of wells and turns over to the Government all rights in connection with oil production, subject merely to the payment of certain royalties to the owners of the land.

Oil is already obtained in considerable quantities in Scotland, but it is produced not from wells, as in America, but from the distillation of bituminous shale. In 1915 the total output of these Scottish shales was 60,000,000 gallons. There are similar deposits of oil-bearing shale in many parts of the British Isles, but little attempt has been made to develop them, owing to the expense of the distillation process.

The new Petroleum Production bill however, refers definitely to boring for oil, and not to the further development of the shale industry. The probability is that the borings will have to be of very great depth, and that this is one of the principal reasons why the enterprise cannot be successfully left in private hands. At Kelham, England, a test boring was made some years ago to a depth of 2,600 feet, when a bed of oil-bearing sand was reached which for some time yielded from five to eight gallons of high-grade petroleum daily. The new government borings will probably be pushed to far greater depths than this.

In introducing the Production bill, Walter Long, on behalf of the government, said:

"Since Lord Northcliffe went to America we have received from him some invaluable suggestions dealing with the oil question. Owing to the magnitude and importance of the work, the Government has sent Sir Frederick Black, former Director General of Munitions supply, to the United States to represent us in the matter. While our primary duty just now is to get various necessary oil products from other countries, there is also the question of possible supplies at home. We have been advised that it is quite probable that oil exist in various parts of the country.

"The Government, therefore, has determined to bring in a bill dealing with the question."

KINGSTON MEN SWINDLED.

KINGSTON, Oct. 2.—As the result of a visit to this city of a cheque artist a score or more of local merchants have been "stung" for amounts which will total $400. The bank cheque forms were evidently stolen from military offices, were filled out and presented at the stores by a man in khaki for some purchases made. The forgery was noticed when the cheques were presented to a local bank. The military authorities of M.D. 3 are making efforts to warn merchants that they should on no account cash cheques presented by soldiers. One merchant "hit" recently and cashed a cheque which had been raised somewhat crudely from four to forty dollars.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28—Colonel E. M. House, who has represented President Wilson unofficially on several missions, admits that he has been requested by the President to aid in collecting data to be presented at the peace conference at the close of the war.

FLEW FROM TURIN TO LONDON 656 MILES IN SEVEN HOURS

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Captain Laureati, of the Italian army, accompanied by an observer, yesterday made a non-stop aeroplane flight from Turin, Italy, to London. He covered the 656 miles in 7 hours and 12 minutes.

Captain Laureati, on last Aug. 29, established a new world's long-distance record when he flew from Turin to Naples and return. The distance was about 900 miles.

BIG SHOE STRIKE IS ENDED.

12,000 Lynn Workers will Return to Work on Monday.

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 2.. — Twenty shoe factories, employing 12,000 workers, closed since April 18, will reopen on Monday morning as the result of an agreement reached late today at a conference between representatives of the unions and the manufacturers.

Henry B. Endicott, Executive Manager of the Massachusetts Committee on Public Safety, arranged the conference, drew up the agreement, and urged both sides to accept it, in view of their civic responsibilities in times of war. Under the plan as arranged, Mr. Endicott will act as arbitrator of the controversy over wages that caused the shut down of the factories.

The agreement besides providing for a return to work next Monday, stipulates that the men shall receive the same wages as were paid on April 18th, and that labour unions and manufacturers shall agree that there shall be no strike or dock-out for the next three years.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

MASTER AND DOG RETURN FROM FRONT.

Airedale Accompanied Major Neil McDonald in Flanders.

MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—Major Neil Macdonald, Winnipeg, popularly known as "Foghorn," accompanied by his faithful friend, a splendid Airedale terrier, who has been right to Flanders with his master, has arrived in Montreal.

Major Macdonald went overseas with the first contingent in the 8th Infantry Battalion, formerly the 90th Winnipeg Rifles. "I could have got a commission," said the major, "but I preferred to go as a private. Now I'm a major, but I'm just plain Foghorn still."

Speaking of the French-Canadians, Major Macdonald said they were among the best soldiers at the front.

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 27.—Insulted by two foreigners who had persisted in following them, two girls appealed to John C. HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Czar's Letter

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

In 1862 Napoleon III., who had a scheme in his head for his Mexican empire, was anxious to make a catspaw of England by inducing her to join him in breaking up the American republic. The Emperor Alexander of Russia, jealous of England's growing commercial power, did not propose that she should profit by the troubles in the United States and, believing that she would not intervene without Napoleon's assistance, determined to prevent if possible the Anglo-French intervention.

"Tell your master," said Alexander to the French ambassador, "that if he interferes in America I will strike him."

Now, the emperor was not sure that Napoleon would inform the English government of this threat. He was committed in his Mexican scheme and would proceed despite the czar's protest. England once having entered the scheme could not well withdraw. Napoleon was at the time in conference with the British ambassador to France, and the alliance was about to be perfected.

One day the American minister at St. Petersburg was called to the imperial palace and when he returned to the embassy called the second secretary of legation into his private office and, handing him a paper, said to him:

"This document is a communication to me from the czar expressing his friendliness for the United States and declaring that if the Emperor Napoleon intervenes in the struggle going on there he will make war upon France. It is essential that this document be shown to the British premier with the least possible delay. St. Petersburg is full of the Emperor Napoleon's spies, and it is quite likely that these facts are known to them. There is little doubt that they will put every obstacle in your way to delay your arrival in England till after the Anglo-French alliance has been effected between the two countries. They may also try to obtain possession of the document you bear. Go to London as quickly as possible and do not sleep till you are on the channel."

George Carey, armed with a 42 caliber revolver, made his preparations to leave by the next train at 6 p. m. Expecting that he might be watched and delayed on his way to the station, he called a cab an hour before train time. He knew the shortest route and soon saw that he was being driven in another direction. Tapping on the glass window that separated him from the driver, he appeared to the latter pointing a cocked revolver at him.

"Drive straight to the station," he said.

This had the proper effect, and Carey reached the train half an hour before leaving time. This was unfortunate, for it gave those in the pay of the French emperor plenty of time to make their arrangements with regard to him.

The emissary was put by an official (bribed) into a compartment where there was no one but a girl. The train had no sooner started than she began to puff a cigarette. Carey knew by its odor that it was drugged and tried to open the window. It had been secured. He at once broke the glass with the butt of his revolver.

When Carey passed the border into Germany he was very sleepy and dropped into a slumber in spite of his efforts to keep awake. His suit case was in the rack, and when he awoke, after the train had stopped several times, he noticed that the case was not there. He was troubled only at the loss of toilet articles and a change of clothing, for the czar's letter was under a linen band around his body.

Carey believed that the chain of spies watching him would expect him to pass through Belgium. He therefore concluded to go through France. His bold stroke was successful, and he was not disturbed, passing even through Paris and reaching Calais without adventure. His traveling by an unexpected route threw the cordon of persons watching him completely off the track, and he was not located by them again till he reached Calais.

He was leaving his train at Calais to go aboard the boat for Dover when a man stepped up to him and asked if he were George Carey. Carey, who knew very well that he was spotted, admitted that he was, but in a tone to indicate that he would brook no interference. The man displayed a shield and, producing a paper, began to read a warrant for his arrest on a charge of sedition against the government.

Meanwhile the passengers were passing from the train to the boat. Carey stood listening to the warrant, one eye on the travelers and the boat, the other on the person whom he knew to be personating an officer of the law. When the last passenger had passed over the gangway the American knocked the Frenchman down and ran for the boat. It had left the dock, but Carey cleared the gap of ten feet without difficulty.

A couple of hours on the channel and a few more in a train and Carey reached London. He had no baggage to bother him and took a cab at once for Downing street. There he got into communication with the British premier and was rejoiced to hear that the Anglo-French alliance had not yet been perfected. Producing the czar's letter, Carey went to a hotel and slept for forty-eight hours without waking.

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, it is splendid.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

TELLS OF SUBMARINE BATTLE IN NORTH SEA

SAW ONE U-BOAT TORPEDOED

Squadron of Airplanes and Patrol Vessels Joined in Battle—Two Merchant Vessels Sunk.

ALBANY, Sept. —A vivid tale of an exciting battle between eleven British and four German submarines off the Irish Coast, during which the liner Devonian and another steamer of a fleet the British war ship was convoying was sunk, was told to-day at the State Employment Agency on Chapel street by Cecil Troutman, a survivor of the Devonian. Troutman was adrift for nearly four hours before he was picked up by a patrol boat.

"We left Liverpool," he said, "early in the morning, a group of fifteen vessels, to be convoyed through the danger zone by eleven British submarines going along the surface. About thirty-eight miles off the Irish coast four submarines of the U-boat type were seen in the distance.

"We immediately received orders to put on speed and make the greatest headway we could, sailing in pairs. Six of the English submarines submerged until they were half awash, while the remainder threw a cordon around the merchant ships.

"It took just ten shakes of a lamb's tail before the crews were at the guns on the underwater boats' decks, and then things began to happen. You could fairly hear the shells scream as they whizzed through the air and droped through the surafce of the sea in the direction in which the submarines were first seen.

"Suddenly two periscopes, well to our starboard and on a line almost with the ship, were seen following us. One was quite near, the other a little distance off. From one of the half submerged submarines a white streak shot out under the surface straight toward the U-boat. There was a dull explosion. The periscope disappeared. Oil floated on the sea. She had gone down.

"Almost simultaneously a streak of white shot out from a place near where the other U-boat had been seen. Then another. Both travelled in our direction. The ship right in back of us was hit. She got it right amidships and sank in a few minutes. A second after another torpedo struck our ship near the stern. Two men were immediately killed by the explosion, the ship carpenter and his assistant.

"I was on the promenade deck when the thing occurred. I was so fascinated by the spectacle that I hardly realized the danger. Far away I heard the hum as of a mighty bee. The volume increased. Others were heard. I looked about and up. Coming toward us at a mighty pace of speed were a number of airplanes. Over us they began to soar about like seagulls. Swooping up and down, circling, crisscrossing and swerving, they dropped bombs that sank silently into the sea.

"Suddenly, as if by signal, they all flew toward one spot. Slower was their speed. They were trailing a sub. From down on the horizon came a number of submarine chasers. They trailed after the planes, some caught up—shot ahead of them in sprays of sea, and kept their positions there. They were waiting for the time when the submarine they were chasing should come up for air.

"It all took less time than it takes to tell it. Our ship was rapidly sinking. Men were leaping overboard, others were frantically getting the lifeboats down. I decided that I would have a better chance if I got hold of a bit of some of the wreckage that littered the sea than in one of the crowded boats.

"I jumped overboard and got on a large floating box. I was on this nearly five hours. The other ships did not stop to pick us up, but, according to Admiralty orders, kept on going."

NEWFOUNDLAND'S SHARE.

London Telegraph Praises Work of Her Fighters.

LONDON, Sept. —The Daily Telegraph editorially takes occasion to applaud the feats of the Newfoundland regiment, and the value of Newfoundland to the Empire. It says:

"It is already certain that when the war is over no community of the British Empire will have better cause for pride at the patriotism and valor of its sons than the little colony of Newfoundland."

The paper dwells on the wonderful changes in the colony in recent years, since the interior was opened by the railways, and says: "Newfoundland has in a way been the Cinderella of the British colonies. When the war is over, we hope she will reap the just reward of her splendid devotion to the Empire's cause. At any rate we Britons know her as the home of a breed of more than fogs and codfish. We konw her as the home of a breed of men true as steel and brave as lions and we are glad that London this week will be able to see and applaud the band of her immortal regiment."

NEBRASKAN IN A RUSS JAIL.

Politics Blamed For Detention of William Duras, Formerly Vice-Consul at Liege.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 2.—Politics in the American diplomatic service has kept William Duras, a Nebraskan, formerly Vice-Consul at Liege, and recently an employee of the American Consulate in Petrograd and the American Legation at Bucharest, in a Russian jail for more than a year. Vigorous agitation for Duras' release was started here by influential Americans, who accuse the American Embassy in Petrograd of total lack of interest in the case because Duras is a Bryan appointee.

FOUR WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Brown Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"For years I suffered so sometimes it seemed as though I could not stand it any longer. It was all in my lower organs. At times I could hardly walk, for if I stepped on a little stone I would almost faint. One day I did faint and my husband was sent for and the doctor came. I was taken to the hospital and stayed four weeks but when I came home I would faint just the same and had the same pains.

A friend who is a nurse said for me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it that very day for I was suffering a great deal. It has already done me more good than the hospital. To anyone who is suffering as I was my advice is to stop in the first drug-store and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before you go home."—Mrs. W. C. THINK ENEMY AGENTS HAVE SPREAD ANTHRAX.

Epidemic Among Cattle in California Assumes Alarming Proportions.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. —Dr. Charles Keane, state veterinarian, declared that an epidemic of anthrax which is affecting cattle in Yolo County, has reached an alarming stage and he feels confident the germs are being spread by agents of enemies of the United States. The anthrax outbreak is characterized by Dr. Keane as the worst in the history of the country. Reports indicate the spread of the disease also in Colusa County, adjoining.

IMPORTANCE OF CANADA'S EFFORT

War Part Nation is Taking at Last is Being Realized by All.

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—Figures up to August 31, 1917, show that 431,455 Canadians had enlisted in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Canada is represented on many fields. From inland transports workers, of whom one thousand are Canadians, and who, amongst other things, help to take supply barges up the rivers of the Far East, to aviators flying over the battle fronts, the North Sea and the Mediterranean, of whom upwards of 1,550 are Canadians, this country has contributed an important part of the Allied war effort.

As to the work woman is doing, it is interesting to note that 1,801 Canadian nurses have gone overseas in the Canadian Army Medical Corps service and 314 in Queen Alexandra's Imperial Military Nursing Service. This, of course, is apart from the enormous accomplishments of women's patriotic and social service societies all over the country.

Canada's strength as a belligerent nation is shown rather strikingly in the realm of finance. Whereas Great Britain has loaned millions to a number of Allied nations, she has received from Canada $100,000,000 more than she has been asked to give.

Canadians returning from abroad report a widespread recognition in other countries of Canada's importance and value to the Allies as the final stages of the war seem to approch.

AUSTRLIAN WHEAT, $1.16.

Price to Miller Lower There Than Elsewhere in British Empire.

OTTAWA, Oct. 2. — Australia has put wheat and flour on the free list. In a report received here from R. D. Ross, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Melbourne dated Aug. 13, 150,000,000 bushels of wheat were said to be stacked in warehouses waiting transportation overseas. The domestic price to the miller is $1.16, probably lower than in any other part of the British Empire.

The placing of wheat and flour on the free list is to facilitate its transfer to the United States, either for shipment to Europe or to replace American flour shipped to the allies.

SWISS SET EXAMPLE IN ECONOMIZING FOOD

Public, With Confidence in Administration, Compiles with Regulations Readily.

LESSON IN SELF-RESTRAINT.

PARIS, Sept. —A reading of Mr. Hoover's clear and forcible appeal to the public, moves me to call the attention of America to the example of Switzerland. In that country, more even than in France or England, there exists a plan carefully worked out by the authorities and scrupulously put into effect by the people for the conservation of food. There are so many things in the world to shake democratic faith that it is comforting to see the possibilities of reverence, order, and obedience to authority under a republic so fully demonstrated as in the mother republic of Switzerland.

It is possible that what has been needed in America was an emergency under such leadership as Mr. Hoover's, and that our hitherto self-indulgent public will come out of this experience with disciplined hearts.

The regulations in Switzerland are not extreme, but they are thorough and are rigidly enforced—or, to put it more justly, lived up to. The people have confidence in the wisdom of the plan and the impartiality of its administration, and they, therefore, make enforcement necessary by universal compliance.

People in France will in many cases beat the law by laying in big stocks on the market day preceding the two meatless days. This in Paris is not considered reprehensible, but in Switzerland it would be most severely reprobated by the public sentiment, to say nothing of the legal consequences. For example, in Berne even the household of the American Minister is on rations. On the first of each month Mrs. Stovall receives a card, to be filled in, stating the probable needs for that month. She sets down the quantities of the meats and vegetables that count and sends the card back. The authorities then return the estimated allowances as approved by them.

No Hardship Felt.

This is not accounted a hardship by any one. On the contrary, there is general agreement that the method is necessary, orderly and fair, and in the general interest.

There are not only laws against profiteering, but public opinion is so alert on this subject that no market vendor would dare attempt extortion. In the few cases where it has been attempted, indignant women marketers have upset stalls and scattered their contents in the street.

The attitude of the people toward food and marketing interested me greatly. Marketing is a kind of sacred rite. Food is handled with a kind of caressing and cherishing care. In the morning hours the street cars are virtually given over to the marketers, who carry their prizes in neat, small baskets and receptacles of net.

It is astonishing how quickly a newcomer falls into the prevalent idea. I found myself soon taking the Swiss view of the preciousness of food. And what a wonderful flavour is imparted by a little stint! Like many other Americans, I like my breakfast best and make it the chief meal. A favourite breakfast consists of fruit, bacon, coffee, bread and plenty of butter and sugar. In Switzerland oranges are plentiful from Italy, so one is not limited there, though the price is high. But of bacon I could have only three very small bits; of butter three slivers, equal to about one ordinary piece, and of sugar one piece broken in the middle to look like two. The bread allowance was equal to about two rolls. This is enough breakfast for anybody, but it was all anybody could get. And it was simply delicious.

I hope there will be American readers who will test the savory effect of stint. There is more real pleasure to be had out of half than out of double quantity. The trouble with people is that they are slavish to any habit that has to do with palate and stomach. I have in mind an American friend who is blessed with a marvelous digestion and appetite, but who cheats himself of their full enjoyment by the lightning rapidity with which he bolts his food. The gist of pleasure in food is taste, and the organs of taste require to exercise their functions.

Moderation in Germany.

One thing on which reports received in Switzerland from Germany agree is as to the benefits that accompany, and in some measure offset, scarcity of food. The average prosperous German had reached a point where he lived to eat. A man who missed one of his five full meals a day counted it a hardship. I have even heard it said that the brutality of the German character as exhibited in this war was in no small degree owing to gluttony. I think it must be clear in any case that overeating doesn't make for spirituality. The Germans are getting a lesson in moderation that was much needed. The average healthy person is suffering no injury from temperateness; rather the reverse.

There is rumour of increased mortality among the aged and feeble and no attempt is here contemplated to argue in favour of under nutrition. A sufficiency of wholesome food is undoubtedly essential to health. The point is that in conditions of prosperity people are apt to eat to excess and thereby not only sacrifice the well-being of the body but spoil the pleasure of eating.

The Crown of Womanhood

"Uncared for hair cannot be beautiful. There is no part of the human makeup so revengeful as the hair. It cries out: Look at me, care for me, or I will disgrace you! Treat me with consideration and I will be a glory to you."

With the above words, Lillian Russell, an unquestioned authority on feminine attractiveness, places no uncertain value on nice hair as a beauty asset. Unkempt, uncared for hair not only cannot be attractive but is actually a disgrace.

But why have ill-kept, untidy hair? By devoting a few moments regularly to brushing and intelligent application of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE, the hair may be made to yield wonderful returns in increased personal charm.

Dandruff is the direct cause of more hair trouble than anything else. The hair becomes thin, harsh, uneven and falls out in quantities. It looks dead and lifeless; there is no luster. The scalp itches.

HERPICIDE will remove the dandruff which is causing all the trouble, clean the scalp, give the hair life, snap and luxuriance. The hair stops coming out, the itching ceases almost at once and withal there is a most gratifying sense of cleanliness.

To the woman who wishes to make the most of nature's gifts by having fluffy, beautiful hair, NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE is a toilet necessity. It is exquisitely perfumed and is a delightful hair dressing.

In 50c and $1.00 sizes. At drug stores and toilet goods counters everywhere. Guaranteed by The Herpicide Co.

Send 10 cents for sample bottle and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. S, Detroit, Mich.

Children's frocks generally follow straight lines.

Gaston Means Held Without Bail In Concord Jail For Action By The Grand Jury

Counsel Declared Prisoner Felt Safer in Care of Cabarrus County Sheriff Than in Hands of New York District Attorney, So No Defence Was Made.

ARMED CLASH BETWEEN DEPUTY SHERIFFS AND CITY DETECTIVES BARELY AVERTED

CONCORD, N.C., Sept. 28.—An encounter between two New York detectives and deputy sheriffs of Cabarrus County narrowly was avoided here when Mr. John T. Dooling, Assistant District Attorney of New York city, refused to deliver to Sheriff Howard Caldwell any of the papers recently seized in the New York apartment of Gaston Bullock Means.

Means now is a prisoner in the Concord jail, denied the privilege of bail and held to await the action of a Grand Jury in connection with the killing of Mrs. Maude A. Robinson King. His commitment followed a sensational termination of the hearing begun before a Magistrate yesterday to determine whether there was "probable crime" to believe that Means deliberately killed Mrs. King.

As a result of the latest developments it was learned that John T. Dooling, Assistant District Attorney, will return to New York at once and resume there the Grand Jury inquiry into the King case, which was terminated when he came here last Thursday. The resumed inquiry will be directed toward obtaining indictments against two persons, one of them a woman, whose name has figured prominently in the disclosures made in New York following the seizure there of Means' letters and other documents.

Other Prosecutions Likely.

At the same time, it is understood now, prosecutions will be launched against persons other than Means, on charges not directly bearing upon either the killing of Mrs. King or the alleged attempt that was to have been made to have probated a second will of James C. King, Mrs. King's husband. Among those prosecutions will be one against a person now here, who will be accused of having shipped whiskey and other alcoholic drinks into North Carolina, a "dry" State. The New York authorities now are in possession of a large amount of correspondence showing, it was learned that, not only that the prohibited traffic was carried on, but that a large amount of the whiskey was sold at a profit.

Concord is the centre of suppressed excitement which several times during the day came near resulting in a clash between te adherents of Means and those who have had a part in the prosecution of the King case investigation. So serious did the situation become this evening that Mr. Dooling, Dr. Otto H. Schultze, Captain Wm. Jones, revolver expert of the New York Police Department, and the two detectives who accompanied Mr. Dooling from New York, packed their grips and left Concord for Salisbury.

Confer with Attorney General.

There Mr. Dooling entered into a long conference with James S. Manning, Attorney General of North Carolina, who assumed command of the situation earlier in the day after Mr. Dooling had instructed his detectives to prevent Sheriff Caldwell and his deputies from seizing any of the papers which Mr. Dooling had refused to surrender voluntarily. At midnight the conference still was in progress.

Announcing that they had decided to interpose no defence against the testimony of State's witnesses who testified yesterday at the Magistrate's hearing, Means' attorneys spent nearly all of the morning arguing their motion that the murder charge against him be dismissed for lack of evidence. The arguments still were in progress, only two of Means' nine lawyers having spoken, when the noon recess was taken.

As Mr. Dooling and the men who accompanied him from New York started out of the court room Means, still chewing on the end of a cigar which he had held in his mouth during all of the court sessions, motioned to the Sheriff and, accompanied by that officer, moved toward the New York group. The Sheriff approached Mr. Dooling and informed him he desired to serve him, and every one who had accompanied him from New York with papers in a suit of replevin, intended to regain for Means possession of the alleged incriminating papers that were seized in the prisoner's Park Avenue apartment.

The names of Means and Mrs. Mary C. Melvin, Mrs. King's sister, appeared on the papers as plaintiffs. Before he would accept service of the papers Mr. Dooling insisted that the Sheriff put Means out of the group. "I refuse to talk to this man. Get him out of the way," said Mr. Dooling. Means withdrew and the papers were served, a copy of the complaint being handed to Mr. Dooling. Dr. Schultze, Captain Jones, Detectives William A. Jones and John Cuiff and P. C. McDuffie, attorney for Mrs. Annie L. Robinson, Mrs. King's mother.

Try to Obtain Papers.

Mr. Dooling and those with him went to the St. Cloud Hotel, where they have been staying, and found the lobby crowded. Most of those in the group were friends of Means, who obviously had been informed of what was going on long before any of the New York men learned of the contemplated action. In the crowd were deputy sheriffs, local policemen and more than one relative of Means.

As Mr. Dooling and his companions entered the hotel Afton Means, brother of Gaston B. Means, was asking the wife of the proprietor of the hotel to give him the keys to the rooms in which he supposed the papers named in the replevin action were being kept. She would not deliver the keys, and just as Mr. Dooling reached his room the sheriff arrived. By that time, however, Afton Means and a deputy sheriff had reached the room Mr. Dooling entered, which happened to be the one assigned to Captain Jones.

After Means explained that he had come to have the papers delivered to him, th demand was refused. Captain Jones stepped forward, apparently to inform him the papers would not be given up, when another deputy sheriff announced he desired to search the room because the Concord authorities had learned the New York policemen had revolvers in their possession. It is a crime in North Carolina to have firearms without a permit given by the local authorities. Captain Jones refused to permit the search.

Detectives Ready for Clash.

While this argument was in progress the Sheriff reached Captain Jones' room and made his demand for the return of the seized papers. Mr. Manning, Mr. Dooling, Hayden Clement, Prosecutor for the Concord district, and several others were in the room. Mr. Manning wrote a reply to the writ of replevin, verifying Mr. Dooling's explanation that his refusal to deliver the papers was based upon the fact that the part of the seized documens that had been carried into the North Carolina jurisdiction had been turned over to Mr. Clement and Mr. Manning and were in their custody in connetcion with the prosecution of Means.

This explanation did not satisfy, apparently, and one of the men crowding into the room behind the Sheriff demanded to know whether that official was going to "do his duty" and seize the papers by force.

As the Sheriff appeared about to undertake the task, Cuniff and Jones announced simultaneously that they were armed. Captain Jones moved forward, and declaring his room had been invaded, announced he was tired of what had been going on. He sent Cuniff and Jones to stand by the suitcases in the room and said: "I'm armed, if you try to take anything out of this room, remember, I tell you I am armed." Several times the deputy sheriffs demanded to know if he meant to threaten them. The only answer they received was that he was armed.

Attorney General Angered.

"I'm Attorney General of North Carolina," interposed Mr. Manning, "and I tell you again that those papers are in my custody. The deputies recognized Mr. Dooling's contention, that the court order demanded only that the papers be given into the care of the clerk of the Superior Court, and that the provision that they be delivered to the Sheriff had been written into the court order in leadpencil.

As the detectives emerged later from their rooms and went to the lobby of the hotel, they were stopped by the Chief of Police of Concord. He demanded permission to search the detectives for revolvers. Jones refused, and Cuniff, displaying his badge and New York permit to carry a revolver, did the same. The Police Chief agreed the detectives were on official duty and did not persist in his demand to search the detectives.

Means will accomplish ittle by his action. Mr. Dooling anticipated such action would be started against him, and brought none of the documents he considered important from New York. Instead he memorized the contents of most of them and left others in New York. The rest were given to either Mr. Clement or the Attorney-Gneral before Mr. Dooling reached Concord.

None of the bitterness engendered by the clash over the custody of the papers had receded when the afternoon session of the Magistrate's hearing began. As soon as Magistrate Ditts ascended the bench E. T. Cansler, of counsel for Means, announced he desired to waive examination for his client, and that Means consented to being committed to jail pending action by the Grand Jury.

Fight Over Commitment.

Mr. Cansler produced a prepared commitment, which Magistrate Pitts refused to sign on the objection of Mr. Clement, and which set forth that the prisoner believed he would be arrested and an attempt made to extradite him o New York if he were released on bail here. Mr. Cansler said he believed Means was being persecuted, and his commitment to jail on a murder charge was consented to because Means believed himself "safer in the hands of the Sheriff of Cabarrus County than in the hands of the New York District Attorney."

The wording of the commitment was vigorously opposed by Mr. Manning, who shouted that he would not North arlina to be "bulldozed" by permit the Attorney General of Means' counsel. Finally a compromise committing order was agreed upon and the statement prepared by Mr. Cansler was permitted to be attached to the order, signed by the Magistrate.

The fear that Means or anyone else would be arrested at the time on charges preferred by the New York authorities was the result of a joke perpetrated by Mr. Dooling, because he had been followed about ever since he arrived here, and evrything he said and did was listened to or watched.

When he received a large blue envelope by special delivery mail today about the time efforts were being made to search his detectives he remarked that all his trouble was over and everything then was all right. Then he informed the deputy sheriffs the detectives had right to carry revolvers, since they might be compelled to take at least one prisoner to New York with them. As the remark was made a relative of Means bolted out of the hotel and hurried to inform the Means attorneys.

The complaint in the replevin action stipulated that Means cannot properly conduct his defence without the seized papers. That Means and Mrs. Melvin, the latter of whom is made executrix and chief residuary legatee under her sister's will, intend to make an effort to have the so-called "last" will of Mr. King probated, is indicated by a paragraph in the complaint, which asserts Mrs. Melvin believed the original copy of that will to be in Mr. Dooling's possession. The will is among the documents Mr. Dooling failed to bring here.

As soon as Means was in jail, where he must stay until the Grand Jury begins its investigation, October 20, Mr. Dooling and those with him left for Salisbury. They were accompanied by Mr. Manning and the local prosecutor. It is understood Mr. Dooling will leave for New York, or as soon as he can complete giving Mr. Cleemnt and the Attorney General the information revealed by the New York investigation.

CANADIAN UNINJURED WHEN EXPLOSION RIPS SLEEVE FROM TUNIC

Private Had Miraculous Escape in London when Bomb Fell Ten Feet Away.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—A Canadian private had a miraculous escape while standing outside of a hotel during a recent air raid. He was standing ten feet from where a bomb was dropped. The force of the explosion hurled him against a lamp-post knocking all the breath from him. On recovering he found the left sleeve of his tunic ripped away as neatly as if cut with a scissors. The wearer was absolutely uninjured.

A Canadian officer describing the spectacle said: "Just before the bombs were dropped I saw an aeroplane begin climbing and falling alternately, apparently in order that the guns should not get its range. The gunfire was extremely good, as good as I have seen at the front, and it was through sheer bad luck the gunners failed to bring him down. I am sure the Hun took back home some marks."

RALPH CONNOR CLUB.

Movement on Foot for Interesting Organization.

There is a movement on foot among fiction readers to organize Ralph Connor Clubs in Canada with general headquarters in one city in each Province. When Major Gordon (Ralph Connor) was apprised of this some months ago, he looked jocularly at his informer and is quoted as saying with a smile, "Wilt thou draw out thine anger on all generations?" (Psalm 85, 5). The idea of the club, according to those interested is to have a club started in every Canadian city, the organization to be open to all readers of Ralph Connor books, both men and women. Officers of the organization, it is planned, will bear the names of characters described in the Connor books, the sky pilot to be the presiding officer. Organizers already are busily at work.

"I have actually gained seventeen pounds by taking Tanlac, and my recovery has been a surprise to myself as well as to all who knew of my dreadful condition," said Walter F. Brown, at his residence, 132 Yorkville St., Toronto, recently. Mr. Brown, who has been a resident of Toronto all his life, was for many years a travelling salesman, and is now employed by the Robert Simpson Co. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge, also of the Commercial Travellers' Association, and is highly respected by all who know him.

"If I could have had Tanlac five years ago," continued Mr. Brown, "I could have saved myself, not only a world of suffering, but more than a thousand dollars, which I paid out for other treatments and medicines which failed to do me any good. I don't reckon that anyone ever had a worse case of stomach trouble than I had. In fact I got so bad that I was given up to die by my family and friends, and had lost about all hope myself of ever getting well. Even the most delicate and dainty dishes failed to arouse my appetite and the least bit of food of any kind caused me intense suffering. I would bloat up terribly with gas; had a mean, agonizing pain in the pit of my stomach, and was never free from headache. No matter what I ate my suffering was awful and for over nine months at one time I was on a light diet. Half the time I couldn't put on my boots or dress myself, because I didn't have the strength and my desperate condition can be better understood when I say I had fallen off from one hundred and thirty-five pounds to only ninety-six. I was nothing but a frame of skin and bones, was so nervous I could hardly sleep and felt so irritable and bad I didn't want anybody around me at all. Everything was done for me it seems that could be. X-ray photographs of my stomach were made, stomach pumps used and every treatment known, but no one seemed to understand my case, and I kept getting worse. After spending eight months in the hospital here to no avail, I was advised to go to Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York, and I spent three months there but still didn't improve one bit. I felt that life was hardly worth living, and had lost all faith in medicines.

"One day while talking to my brother-in-law, he asked me why I did not take Tanlac, and I said, No. I have taken enough stuff, nothing will do me any good. But he insisted, until I bought a bottle, and Providence was surely guiding me that day for I firmly believe that was the move that saved my life. To say it is wonderful the way Tanlac has helped me doesn't half express it. I am already feeling a thousand times better and am on the road to health after five years of torture. I have already picked up from ninety-six to one hundred and thirteen pounds, and am looking and feeling better than I have in years. My appetite is fine; the gas and pain have all disappeared from my stomach, and I can eat anything I want without the slightest inconvenience. My friends are simply amazed at my wonderful improvement. I have also told the physicians who did all that they could for me, what I am taking, and they say they never saw such a change in a man. I believe Tanlac saved my life, and deserves more than I will ever be able to say for it. I will be glad to write to anyone who wishes to verify this statement and tell them what Tanlac has done for me."

FEWER HARVARD STUDENTS.

Only 100 Men of Senior Class Are Present when College Opens.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 25th.—The full effect of war upon educational work was demonstrated when Harvard University began its 282 year to-day, with a greatly diminished enrollment. Scarcely more than 100 of the senior class of about 600 were on hand. Enlistments also have cut heavily into the junior sophomore classes, but the normal number. It is estimated that the usual re[illegible]ration of about entering class was only slightly below 5,000 in all departments of the university will fall to less than 3,500.

All courses will be given as usual. Athletics will suffer through the elimination of 'Varsity football, but there will be a freshman eleven. The reserve officers' training corps will be continued.

ONE PRISON PHYSICIAN.

Lt.-Col. Connell Resigns as Consultant Dr. Hanley to Act Alone.

KINGSTON, Sept. 25.—On the 1st of October there will be but one penitentiary physician, Lieut.-Col. W. T. Connell having resigned as consulting physician, and Dr. Robert Hanley will assume all duties pertaining to the office, receiving $1,360 a year salary, and will continue his practice. The present system was considered unsatisfactory, and the old system will be followed. The prison physician will also attend to the guards, who, under the present system, were called upon to pay for medical attendance.

FRENCH CONTINUE THEIR AIR ATTACKS ON GERMAN CITIES

Bombs Dropped on Famous City of Baden as Reprisal For German Attacks Upon Unfortified French Town---Lord George Intimates That Great Britain is Preparing Similar Policy of Retaliation For Baby Killers' Raids Upon London ---Violent Artillery Fighting in the West.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 3.—Continuing their reprisals for the attacks of the Germans on French cities, French aviators last night dropped bombs on the German town of Baden, the War Office announces.

The statement follows: "In reprisal for the bombardment of Bar-Le-Duc, two of our aviators dropped several bombs on the town of Baden. On the night of October 1-2 and during the day of October 2, our aviators bombarded the railway station at Fribourg, factories at Volkelgen and Hoftenbach and railway stations at Brieulles, Longuyon, Metz-Woippy, Arnava, Mezieres Les Metz, Thionville and Sarrebourg. In the course of these various expeditions projectiles to the amount of 15,400 pounds were dropped."

The town of Baden in the Grand Duchy of the same name, is one of the most famous and beautiful watering places of Europe, best known for its medicinal baths. It is a town of some fifteen thousand, about fifty miles from the French border.

"We'll Bombard Germany With Compound Interest," Says Lloyd George

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 3.—A crowd of poor people in the southwest district of London yesterday appealed to Premier Lloyd George, says the Daily Mail, for reprisals against Germany for air raids on London. The Premier shouted to the crowd: "We will give it all back to them, and we will give it to them soon. We shall bomb Germany with compound interest."

The crowd cheered the promise of the Premier wildly. The Premier had just completed a tour of the area damaged in the raids with Viscount French, Commander of the Home Forces.

To Fight Huns With Their Own Weapons

England Ready With a Formidable Programme of Reprisals Against Boches for Their Recent Attacks on London.

(Special to The Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, October 3.—England had about decided to-day that once again it must fight the German with the Boches' own weapons of frightfulness. The public demand for reprisals over German cities for the work of German airmen over London and coast counties had approached the point of a nation-wide crisis. Authoritative reports to-day had it that the Government was practically ready, awaiting only the decision of the military authorities to put a formidable reprisal programme into force. In the meantime London awaits each night with the belief that raiders will again come on their baby-killing expeditions. The city confidently expected a raid last night. The streets were almost deserted, and cellars had been made ready for occupancy, but the Germans did not appear.

TAG DAY--SATURDAY, OCT. 6

The Tag Day That Must Not Be Confused With Other Tag Days—The ONE Day That Bespeaks Your Help and Assistance

When Saturday next comes do not let the reflection that there are too many of these tag days interfere with your doing what is a plain duty.

Standing before all other objects is the one call by means of a Tag Day, and that is to support the objects of the local Branch of the Children's Aid. No other organization that makes use of tag day as a means of raising money has the same claim on your consideration. For other objects have other sources and other means of working.

THIS TAG DAY is OUR Tag Day. By precedence, usage, association and gift from the people we have the first right and claim. Our work and effort was here before the war. And will be with us when the war has ceased, as it eventually must. So be so good as to be liberal, in small lots of liberality, by exchanging coin for tags.

Do we need to preach to you of the object. The care and comfort of defenceless children. The care of a forlorn child is anybody's business, and hence is the business of nobody. That is the way the thing has worked out until the Children's Aid came and took up the work and filled the field of effort, so far as it can be filled. What it accomplishes is only bounded by the need for funds. The children to be helped are galore, many, and more coming on..

As our population increases the percentage of cases develop. That is a rule of progress that must not be ignored. It is inexorable. So help us to skate around the want and privation for children by cordially and cheerfully buying the tags.

Outside of some aid from the provincial authorities the raising of the funds depends on you. Never mind if the price of coal is wobbling between ten dollars and the other extreme, let it wobble. The cost of a few tags will never be felt in the general plan of high cost of living. A tag will cost one admission to a picture show. Let the show go for one or more nights and help the fund for the Children's Aid.

Tag Day, Saturday, October 6th. The city can, and should, make the collection memorable by its size and value.

PREPARING FOR TAG DAY

Mrs. Knox has called a meeting for to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock in the Bank of Montreal Chambers to complete details for Tag Day on Saturday. As many ladies as possible are asked to attend to the tags, make rosettes and look after other arrangements in connection with Saturday's effort on behalf of the Children's Aid Society.

SIR WILFRID TO RESIGN?

Question Has Been Under Consideration for the Past Week and Prominent Liberal Leaders Have Been in Conference at Ottawa

FURTHER NEGOTIATIONS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 3.—A despatch to the Toronto Star from its resident correspondent at Ottawa says:

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.— Important and far-reaching developments in the political situation are anticipated at Ottawa within the next few days.

While Sir Robert Borden is endeavouring to bring about a reconstruction in his Cabinet and to enlist to its ranks certain prominent Liberals, momentous changes are pending in the ranks of the Opposition. These changes involve no less an event than a change in leadership. It may be stated this morning that his question has been under consideration for over a week and that the initiative has been taken by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the present leader, himself. The result of the conferences and negotiations in that connection will probably be made known at a very early date.

CONFERENCE HELD.

Last night there were in conference with Sir Wilfrid at his home F. B. Carvell, M.P. for Carlton, E. M. Macdonald, M.P. for Pictou, Hon. J. A. Calder, of the Saskatchewan government, and F. P. Pardee, the chief Liberal whip. The conference lasted after midnight, and those who attended were late in rising this morning.

It is stated that Sir Wilfrid has been ready to retire for some time past. The tremendous strain which the past session, with its varied and continually changing situations has imposed on him, the fact that he had not had a respite from his work since the war commenced, and the further fact that a winter campaign is in prospect, have all, it is stated, brought a realization that the work ahead is one for a younger and a stronger man to perform.

BROACHED BY HIMSELF.

It is stated that the question was broached by himself and no other. His visit to Montreal was followed by denials of the rumour that he contemplated retirement. It is understood that his French Canadian followers would not hear of his resigning. The negotiations, however, were continued in Ottawa, with what result remains to be seen.

Mr. Carveth leaves for New Brunswick to-night, though the other members will remain. It is probable that other prominent Liberals will be in Ottawa in a few days. Meanwhile Sir Wilfrid contemplates visiting Toronto netx week, where he will consult and confer with prominent Liberals there.

MR. CARVETH'S STATEMENT.

Questioned this morning as to the rumour that he would succeed Sir Wilfrid as leader of the party Mr. Carvell said: "I have never aspired to leadership at any time. The question of retirement has yet to be further considered. The question of leadership,

SHOW YOUR INTEREST IN THE WAR VETERANS

Is Peterborough cold and indifferent to her sons who have fought for the Empire overseas, and who have returned from the battle front?

The charge has been made and is borne out in various ways. The Examiner believes, however, that the attitude of the public is due largely to lack of thought and not to lack of sympathy, and that in their hearts the people of Peterborough have a warm affection and admiration for their fellow-citizens who have fought in the greatest of all wars.

the citizens are going to be put to the acid test in this matter. To-morrow night there will be a meeting in the City Council Chamber to discuss ways and means of providing a memorial for Peterborough soldiers who have made the supreme sacrifice overseas, in the form of a permanent headquarters for their comrades who have come safely through the suffering and perils of the firing line. All public bodies in the city have been asked to have representatives present, and it is hoped that the attendance will be large and the meeting enthusiastic.

The occasion offers a splendid opportunity to refute the accusation that Peterborough does not appreciate the bravery of her soldier sons.

Fit for the trenches	48
Fit for non-combatant service overseas	8
Fit for duty in Canada	14
Unfit for any duty	16

An analysis of the results of the work of the Medical Board at the armouries show that out of eighty-six men examined up to noon to-day forty-eight, or 56 per cent. are considered fit for the trenches, 9 per cent. fit for The number examined at each session per cent. capable of duty in Canada, and nineteen per cent. unfit for any service.

The number examined at ach session continues around the fourteen mark, although last evening the Board only held a short session and examined only seven men.

It will be noticed that the physique of the candidates examined yesterday was on the whole inferior to the first day's showing and the percentage of men placed in the A category was lower, only sixteen of the thirty-four men examined qualifying for the trenches, while nine were rejected altogether.

The majority of the men being examined are from the C.G.E.., with a few from other factories.

The first man to be placed in A1 category, which consists of trained men physically fit for overseas, was before the doctors this morning. All the other men who were found physically fit have been placed in AII category, which indicates that they need training before they can be sent overseas.

In connection with the eaxminations, the Examiner to-day received the following letter:

Mr. Editor:

Dear Sir,—It is required of those who appear to be examined for military service to parade perfectly nude before, not only three medical examiners, but also before all others gathered there In this instance twenty or more. Imagine how one's moral sense of decency is prostituted! How shockingly one feels the indignity! Is this right? Will public opinion stand for it? We were not even concealed from outside public view.

Yours,

A newsy letter came to hand today from Driver H. J. Devey, who has passed the last fifteen months "Somewhere in France," telling of a jolly meeting for the first time in France of Peterborough boys. Charlie Thorpe, Sam Whitehouse, Albert Dryland, Gunner Boyle and Frank Patterson are mentioned. Frank Dean and Ned Simmons, having recovered from their wounds and are on duty again, and Driver Devey also met Bill Simmons, Ernest Tucker and Frank Roberts. Private Dean sends along a dried spray of blue and white wild flowers, picked in a famous wood, he does not name, but says it will be famous in history. All the boys are well and getting lots of mail, the writer's share from the last mail being seven letters and a newspaper. Dated September 10th, the letter concludes "I guess the Exhibition will be the end of th's week. Oh, well, we'll be there yet."

ENGINEER KILLED.

Word was received here to-day by Mrs. M. A. Myke, General Delivery, Peterborough, that Saper Lawrence George Myke, Canadian Engineer, is officially reported died of wounds, on Sept. 23rd, as the result of a fractured skull.

The Kingston Whig says: According to the feeling in military circles the conscripts to be called under the Military Service Act will have absolutely no opportunity of promotions. The officers ranks of the Depot Battalion have already been filled to overflowing by taking officers from the various draft companies which were raised in the district up to a few months ago. The N. C. O's positions are being taken by a class of men who will be called out. In view vice some time ago and are now qualifying for their rank at the Infantry School. Everything is now ready to start the training of the men who will be called ou. In view of the fact that only 2,000 are being called it is likely that exemptions on the first draft wll be granted quite freely. As more men are called out later, however, the exemptions will have to be more strict. In any case there are perhaps 15,000 eligibles in the district, and 2,000 men can be secured without in the least disurbing the commercial life of the district, It is doubtful if conscripts under the Military Service Act will be in Canada very long after being called out. The "Kitchener Army" system of training now in use is of six to eight weeks duration. In that period the rawest civilian can be taught the elements of soldier life, and it is understood that the military authorities do not intend to keep them in Canada any longer than absolutely necessary.

INDIANS' GRAND COUNCIL IN SESSION AT CHEMONG

KERENSKY IS VICTORIOUS IN THE RUSSIAN CONGRESS

Vote Was 766 to 688 in Favour of a Coalition Government Which Eliminates For Time Being the Possibility of Civil War

LENINITES SILENCED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3. — Premier Kerensky was victorious in the all-Russian Democratic Congress yesterday when that body voted 766 to 688 in favour of a coalition government for Russia.

The decision in favour of a coalition government eliminates for the time being all danger of civil strife between the revolutionary factions, and will make possible the establishment of a new government in which Socialists and the Democratic bourgeoise parties will participate. The Bolsheviki, however, will not be given representation. There is no doubt that the Bolsheviki will continue to play upon the minds of anti-coalitionists. Although silenced for the time being the Leninites are expected to raise their heads again at the first opportunity. Some political leaders, Socialists included, believe the government will eventually be forced to take strong measures of repression against the extremists and break up their organization.

The Democratic Congress was called at the instance of Petrograd soldiers and Workmen's Council, in which the extremists had gained predominance and the expressed expectations of the Bolsheviki were that this body as the representative of proletariat of all Russia would set up a government from which representatives of propertied classes would be excluded. Premier Kerensky, while not recognizing the Congress as a rtuly representative body, appeared before it and made a declaration of the policy defending the provisional government's course and virtually throwing a challenge to the radicals. Reports of the recent proceedings of Congress have been rather meagre, but the vote to-day indicates that more conservative elements have been successful. It implies a triumph for the provisional government which desires formation of a coalition cabinet and a blow to the radicals, whose control of Congress was at one time thought to be almost a foregone conclusion.

The Hearts of the Chippewas Are Sad—Their Sons Have Freely Enlisted, and While the Franchise Is Denied Them They Are Likely To Be Conscripted.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

"Are the Indians of Canada to be included under the Conscription law or are they not? We are asking a plain question and we want a plain answer."

The preliminary session of a special assembly of the Grand Council of the Indians of Ontario was drawing to a close yesterday afternoon in the Village Hall, on the Chemong Reserve, known in the Postal Guide and in the Canadian Casualty lists, as Curve Lake. Through a window that opened to the setting sun a flood of amber light revealed the serious expression of the strong, kindly features of F. W. Jacobs of the Sarnia Reserve, as he voiced the thoughts of his race in a presidential address that unmistakably indicated the principal subject the Grand Council would discuss at these extraordinary sessions. The prospect of conscription has suddenly emerged from the chaos at Ottawa, and the Indians have not been definitely informed whether it will apply to them or not.

The replies to their enquiries have been vague and equivocal. They have been as obscure, the President said, as the misty promises of a modification of the Franchise Act. From his presentation of the purpose of the sessions, the Government's refusal to grant the Indians the privilege of voting is a long standing grievance that has been accentuated by an implication that their young men would be conscripted. There was no intimation in the President's address that Ontario Indians are opposed to conscription, but there is a profound regret and disappointment that the suggestion of the imposition of the Military Service Act was not coupled with the gift of complete citizenship.

One could read behind ex-Chief Jacob's reference to the withholding of the franchise a silent and a pitiful appeal to unrelenting officialdom that might be found in the question "Wherein have we proved unworthy?"

There was nothing unfriendly or inimical in the President's review of the unhappy situation. There were few significant inflections, no scorn at the unjust, if not illogical, possibility of his people being conscripted in a country that refuses to enfranchise them. The only inflections, and these were scarcely perceptible, in the President's recitative monotone, emphasized the contrast of the loyal, unseeking service of the Indians of Ontario in 1812, and of their descendants in 1914-17, and on the other hand the Government's ungrateful requittal, by rejecting or evading petitions for enfranchisement. Indians of the delegates' type fully appreciate their anomalous position as British subjects without the privilege of voting.

1,500 Indians on Service.

"To my certain knowledge 1,500 of our young men are fighting at the front. They were the flower of our Indian youth. Some of them have been killed, others wounded, maimed and disfigured for life.

"And what are they fighting for?" asked the President. "Not for liberty as it is fully understood. They haven't the manhood suffrage. They have nothing, yet they are fighting over there. When the Conscription Act comes into force, if the Indian is a British subject he is included under that law. I often wonder what we are, whether we are British subjects or simply Indians." "Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 3, 1917

THE ASSESSMENT'S STORY.

The story of Peterborough's assessment returns is one of progress and increase all round. The increase of population, though absolutely small, is relatively large. The increase in population over last year is 783, brings the total up to 20,599, a figure that would be increased by between 1500 and 2000 if we included the suburbs which, for commercial and other purposes, are essentially a part of the city. That the increase in population which has obtained since the war, in spite of the large withdrawals by enlistment, persists and reaches such important figures, is a sign of solid progress. One would have though that enlistments would have a reducing effect upon our population, but an increase of 783 in population in face of about two thousand enlistments, indicates that the net increase of population in the last three years has been nearly three thousand.

Will Peterborough let "Sleepy Hollow" beat her? Potatoes are selling for $1 per bushel in Port Hope.

SOLDIERS' PENSIONS.

The "United Farmers" of Alberta, the Grain Growers' Associations of the West, and the "United Farmers" of Ontario, are considered to be organizations of somewhat radical opinions. They have adopted the "Farmers' Platform" drafted by the "Canadian Council of Agriculture of Manitoba." It includes reciprocity, taxation of land values, graduated income tax, the nationalization of railways nd telegraphs and express companies, the initiative and referendum, abolition of patronage, franchise for women, etc. This is a programme so advanced that governments, and perhaps the people, are not ready for all of it.

The sting of the programme, the appendix, is sound, and in line with sane popular opinion and universal sentiment. It advocates increased pensions for wholly, or partially, disabled soldiers, in recognition of the duty of the nation to make adequate provision for all disabled soldiers and dependents." The "Farmers' platform" holds, with every right thinking Canadian, that the most liberal relief through a pension scheme can only "discharge a fraction of the debt which the nation owes to the men who have thus sacrificed in its behalf.

The "Farmers' platform" declares a pension of $40 per month for a totally disabled soldier, and an allowance of $6 per month for each of his children, $250 per year, for soldiers requiring attendance, inadequate "for the comfortable maintenance of disabled soldiers and dependents, and the education of their children." It demands that the pension for total disability be raised to $60 per month, in addition to the present provision for attendance; and that "the pension of disabled soldiers of class 2 (loss of one hand or one foot, or both feet, be 90 per cent. of total disability allowance." It also demands that the pension board be given discretionary powers to increase the allowance provided for children when considered necessary to insure proper care and education, and, finally, to emphasize the democratic character of the "Farmers' platform," it favours the principle of equality of pensions for officers and privates.

This latter condition is in accord with the principle of equality of reward or recognition for equality of service and sacrifice. An officer in giving a limb or a life, sacrifices no more than the private soldier similarly suffering. In the Canadian army the private, in many cases, has left a more lucrative home position than officers; is as well or better educated, of as good or better social and commercial standing. The officer has received four or five times larger pay, better food and housing, and has in all ways, in his service, like "Dives," "received his good things" while the private soldier, like Lazarus, received "evil things." It seems logical therefore that to play fair the officer disabled, when he returns to private life, should help balance the account by making acceptance of equality of pension with the private soldier, as compensation for the advantage of greater pay and better living while on service.

In deciding the question of pensions for soldiers we must have in mind the immense debt of gratitude we owe them; and make adequate the only possible way of paying the debt, by liberalty of pension and by other means to show that neither the people nor the nation undervalues the services and sacrifices of those who have died or or become disabled or incapacitated that we might enjoy the blessings of peace and the liberties of a free country.

The only way of securing equality of contribution to patriotic purposes is general taxation, and special taxation of the profiteers.

STAND BY THE VETERANS.

In his celebrated Elegy, Gray, the poet, suggested the inadequacy, if not inutility, of monuments to constitute a satisfactory and useful memorial of the departed, in these words—

Can storied urn or animated bust
Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath?
Can honour's voice provoke the silent dust,
Or flattery soothe the dull, cold ear of death?

Though monuments, epitaphs, flower-sweetened graves, are all types of beautiful sentiment, yet in this practical world, this world of action, this world of service, there are ways of conjoining loving remembrance of the dead and service for the living, especially for those who have done equal service to the country, but escaped the accident of death.

One of these consists in the proposal to provide permanent headquarters for the returned veterans as a memorial of the comrades they have left behind, who have made the great sacrifice. What better way to honour those who have laid down their lives than providing a rallying point, where the surviving veterans may meet and keep alive the spirit of cameraderie developed in the hard and strenuous life of the trench and battle field; where the veterans can, not only "shoulder their crutch, and show how fields were won," but speak to each other, reviving and keeping green the memory of their brave comrades who have passed through the gate of duty and the door of death to the great beyond?

Besides we owe more than we can ever pay to the soldiers that have returned after doing service for us. Many of them are more or less incapacitated, and the wounds and scars they bear, and the disablement they suffer, have come in serving us. Besides, again, our soldiers deserve well of Peterborough, because they have helped give Peterborough an enviable record in contributing soldiers. It cannot be too often repeated for our satisfaction and pride, that Peterborough, outside of Winnipeg, has the highest record of enlistments in proportion to population, of any city in Canada.

To live up to our reputation, we must show our appreciation of the veterans in a corresponding manner. We have bested other Ontario towns and cities in the matter of enlistments. We must not let them get ahead of us, as they may do, if we do not act promptly and practically. Other places have moved in the matter of of providing a permanent headquarters for veterans.

It is therefore to be hoped that there will be an overflowing attendance at the public meeting called by Mayor Duffus at the council chamber on Thursday night next.

Let us be grateful, let us be generous. Let us be as brave and prompt in meeting the duty of recognition and partial reward as our veterans have been in meeting the call to go into the fight and go over the top.

Canadian customs receipts for the first half of the fiscal year, are 24 millions in excess of last half year. What of it? It is a mere matter of customs.

Indians' Grand Council In Session At Chemong

The Government's Reply.

President Jacobs read a reply from the Government, dated June 30th, 1917, to his enquiry as to the operation of the Military Service Act, to the effect that the Bill had not then become law, and it could not be stated what exemptions would be made, but "presumably it would apply to all British subjects."

"I sometimes question whether we are British subjects or not," commented the President. "A British subject should enjoy certain liberties, certain privileges; he should have the franchise, and a voice in the election of the members of parliament. When an Indian has no vote he simply has nothing. Suppose you ask the Member for this constituency to do a favour for you, will he do it?"

Delegates---No.

"Because we have nothing to say in electing him. It is too bad the Government of this country treats the poor Indian in that manner."

Premier Borden's reply, on July 5th, regarding the Conscription law, said: "No suggestion has yet been made that Indians will be exempted, and I am confident they will not wish to be exempted."

"But we will have something more to fight for if we get the vote" added the President.

Council is Bilingual.

The President and his Councillors are bilingualists. At times he spoke in English, with grammatical preciseness and forceful, simple words. Apparently he repeated his words in Chippewa, for the benefit of some of the older members. A touching incident of his reference to the right the Indians have established to the franchise was a mention of a grandson to whom he was greatly attached. He had watched the boy grow up from babyhood, and was keenly interested in his future. Then the war came, the young descendant of former braves answered to the call. At that point the grandfather's tongue dropped into the picturesque Chippewa, spoken by the fireside as he continued his recital which was apparently hopeful still. Then he resumed in English, saying: "The Government must do something for the Indians."

In its opening session, the Council reflected none of the ancient ceremonial that is told in the history and tradition of the Indian age of this country. The modern Chippewas have absorbed the formal, colourless, business methods of the white men. Their peculiar customs have disappeared with their untrammeled freedom to roam over these territories their ancestors made historic. The tailor, the barber, bootmaker and haberdasher have long since reduced the Indians to the dead level of inconspicuousness. Blue serge suits, good footwear, and all the neutral habitments of the helpless whites, are just as becoming to the present day Indian. Predominant racial features have become less marked, although in many cases the crisp black hair, high cheek bones, thick lips and other peculiarities appear. And, of course, the language remains.

Why Not Conscription Of War Wealth As Well As Conscription Of Manhood?

The William Davies company last year made a gross profit of $1,827,000 on a capital stock of two millions. After making deductions for depreciation of factories, etc., a profit of $1,279,903 still remained. Looking at the matter in the most favourable light, this company cannot be said to be making any sacrifices at all. The war is to it not a burden but a source of gain.

The net earnings of the Laurentide Paper company this year were $2,220,600, as compared with $1,244,283 last year, an increase of nearly a million dollars. The sum of $268,181, was reserved for the business profit tax. After deducting profits tax, interest charges, repreciation, etc., the profits amounted to $1,720,000. This is at the rate of 17 per cent. on the common stock. No sacrifice.

The Nova Scotia Steel company earned $2,094,170 in 1915, and in 1916, after writing of all betterments to plants, depreciation, doubtful accounts and war taxes, its earnings were $2,104,478. During six months of this year its net income was $1,596,470, being about $40 per share of the common stock. On June 30 of this year the company's net surplus of cash and quick assets for working capital was $5,500,000.

Compare any of these cases with that of the soldiers. Many give their lives. Many come back crippled, gas-poisoned, or shell-shocked, and handicapped in the struggle for existence. Even those who escape death or serious wounds give up their regular occupations and their chances of promotion or of building up a business or profession. No matter how well-disposed the community may be when these men return the loss can never be repaired.

One of the points made at the Social Service meeting was that a capitalist who thinks he was doing his duty by not actually increasing his wealth during the war has a very poor and low conception of patriotic duty. That is surely true. What then is to be said of the capitalist who is actually turning into dollars the calamity which to other men brings death or less or limb, or an undermined constitution?"—Toronto Star.

Directory First!

WHEN you call a telephone number from memory or when you guess at it you are apt to be wrong.

¶ The mind has a trick of transposing figures—instead of "1263" you are quite likely to say "1623."

¶ Also, telephone numbers, firm names, etc., are frequently changed.

¶ And when you thus ask for the wrong number, you waste your own time, the operator's, and the time of the person called through your error.

¶ Directory first is a good principle. In the end it saves time and temper to first consult the latest issue of the telephone book.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS CONTINUED

(By Carl B. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, October 3.—Shipping experts here are more than ever convinced that America will face a dearth of tonnage the coming year, so serious as to prevent the movement of more than 800,000 to 1,000,000 men by the end of 1918. Joint warning of Sir Joseph MacLay, the British Shipping Controller, and Lord Northcliffe, publicist, that there must be six million tons new shipping annually, are not unheeded here. American Government heads say they realize that the submarine situation was and is serious, But, such men as Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Admiral Benson declare that there is no occasion for becoming hysterical, and that the submarine situation is more satisfactory. One-half of one per cent of convoyed ships are being lost. Practically all ships are under the new convoy system. However, as the United Press stated September 29, "American troop transportation to Europe the next six months may be greatly curtailed." The War Department has submitted to the shipping board an estimate that ten to fifteen tons of shipping space must be available at all times for every soldier sent to Europe. The Government's official estimate is that by the end of 1918 America will have 9,200,000 tons of shipping available.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 3.—(Official)—Violent artillery fighting continues on the Verdun front. No important infantry operations occurred in the night. The statement follows: East of Rheims our artillery effectively shelled German batteries and broke up preparations in enemy trenches for an attack. West of Navarine a French detachment penetrated the enemy lines and blew up several shelters, bringing back prisoners. On the Verdun front the night was marked by violent artillery fighting on both banks of the Meuse, particularly in the region north of Hill 344, where spirited patrol engagements also occurred. An incursion into the enemy lines in the region of Casque gave us good results. Everywhere else the night was quiet.

LONDON, October 3.—"Let us gnash our teeth and not say a word about peace until the bloody work is done and the victory is ours," is what Field Marshal Hindenburg replied to a telegram congratulation on his seventieth birthday, according to an Exchange Telegraph Amsterdam despatch to-day. "This must be the motto of the whole German people," the German commander asserted.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 3.—It was officially announced to-day by the Provisional Government that the revolt which broke out on Saturday at Tambov, three hundred miles southeast of Moscow, has been suppressed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 3.—Artillery activity continued on both sides during the night in the region east of Ypres, says to-day's War Office statement. Otherwise there is nothing to report.

Butcher Makes $1,600 By Releasing Cattle Contract

NAIRN, October 3.—A London butcher made $1,600 here very easily. Some time ago he contracted with a local cattle raiser for his stock at 9 cents a pound, to be delivered this fall. After the arrangements were made prices started to soar, and when time came for delivery the farmer found he could get a much higher price, and wanted to break the contract. The London buyer wanted $2,000 as a recompense, but the parties got together, and a settlement was reached by which the farmer pays $1,600, and keeps his cattle.

Cattle buyers have been very busy in this district, and it is stated that the contracts made by one big Chicago firm exceed a quarter of a million dollars.

1803 BOXES OF CHEESE BRING A HIGH PRICE

Mr. G. A. Gillespie swept the Cheese Board this morning taking 1,803 boxes at 21 5-16 cents. Mr. Cook, the only other buyer, opened at 21 1-4 cents, but Mr. Gillespie made the advance for the entire board as follows:

Keene, 75; Warminster 80; Shearer, 90; Villiers, 60; Warsaw, 115; Westwood, 40; Oakdale, 65; Lakefield, 60; Pine Grove, 40; Myrtle, 125; Northumberland, 40; East Emily, 80; Stoney Lake, 30; Mt. Pleasant, 40; Norwood, 141; Westwood, 85; Killarney, 75; Apsley, 40. Total 1,803.

It was made plain that no allowance of a half pound a box would be made. The Board adjourned for three weeks.

RALLY SERVICE IN MILLBROOK

Millbrook, Oct. 3.—The Methodist Sunday School held their annual Rally Day services last Sunday afternoon. There was a large attendnce. Splendid addresses were delivered by Mr. Meserve nd son, Mr. Ralph Meserve, and Rev. Mr. Pogue of Peterborough, and Rev. W. H. Higgs. The Primary Class gave a motion song in a pleasing manner; the Orchestra rendered several beautiful selections. Reports were read showing the chool to be in a most flourishing condition. Mr. W. Fred Fallis, the efficient superintendent, is to be congratulated upon the continued success of the School.

TAFT TO TALK OF DANGER OF PREMATURE PEACE

Former President to Tour Through Several States "Bursting German Peace Balloons"

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Former President William H. Taft will make a tour through several States during October "bursting German peace balloons."

"The menace of a premature peace" will be the subject of his addresses. The announcement of Taft's speaking tour was made to-day by the League to Enforce Peace, of which he is president. "Exposing and opposing German lures to a false peace is an appropriate mission for the League to Enforce Peace," Taft declared in a bulletin issued from league headquarters.

Tribute To The Late R. D. Booth

His Honour Judge Huycke Refers to the Death of Peterborough County Resident

His Honour Judge Huycke immediately after the opening of the County Court sittings this morning made the following reference to the death of the late Mr. R. D. Booth.

Before taking up this case gentlemen there is a matter that I desire to speak of and I think I should speak of. I have reference to the death of a very prominent and well known gentleman in the County of Peterborough. Had it not been for this sittings of the Court I think I would have tried to go to the funeral. I refer to the late Mr. Charles R. D. Booth, a Police Magistrate for the northern part of this County, the Clerk of the Division Court of that district at Apsley and the Municipal Clerk of the Townships of Burleigh and Anstruther. His death follows very closely upon the death of another old gentleman out there, Mr. William Gallon, and these two gentlemen ever since I came to the County of Peterborough have stood out very prominently in their devotion to their duty, their country and their locality. Mr. Booth's death will create a vacancy that I anticipate will be very hard to fill. He always stood for law and order and loyalty, civilization and Christianity. He was the English gentleman in the best sense of the word. I mourn his death very much. I mourn his loss as a friend because to me he has been a friend ever since I came to this country. I found him always ready to do his duty in every way in connection with his public office. He has, too, been an outstanding member of the County Council in past years. Their deaths, particularly this one, reminds us not only are the youngest and best laying down their lives for their country, but the older ones are departing as well. Mr. Booth must have been very near the Scriptural limit of four score years. Not only will he be missed throughout his locality, but throughout the County generally. I mourn his loss as a friend and desire to pay my sincere tribute of respect to his splendid character, his ever constant devotion to duty and his loyalty to friends.

Oh, Mr. Smith, did you go away in the big steamer? No, Tommy. What makes you ask that? I heard pa tell Mr. Jones you were half-seas over."—Baltimore American.

ARGENTINA'S PRESIDENT STANDS PAT

(By Charles P. Stewart.)

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 3. — President Irigoyen stood pat to-day on neutrality in the war, his denial of the sentiments attributed to him by the National Juvenile committee and the postponement of martial law decrees in the general strike. The Argentine rural society, a combination of commercial, industrial and financial interests met to-day to adopt resolutions urging that the government forcibly end the strike. It was reported that President Irigoyen would again make a formal demand on the railways to-morrow that they restore transportation, whether by submission to all strikers demands or not, was not specified.

Boy Was Run Over By An Automobile

Elmer Pearson, a boy living at 658 Bethune street was run over by Mr. A. V. Shadgett's car last night on Charlotte street, but escaped with a few bruises and a severe shaking up. Mr. Shadgett was turning in front of Webber's Drug Store to go east, when the boy approached from that direction and in endeavoring to pass in front of the car misjudged the distance and ran full tilt into the side of the car. Mr. Shadgett stopped and backed his car and in so doing ran over the boy, according to P. C. Lawrence's report of the accident.

Case Was Settled Out Of Court

Township of Smith Will Pay Defendant $200 Without Costs

At a session of the County Court held this morning before His Honour Judge Huycke it was announced that the case of Ayotte versus the Township of Smith had been settled out of court. The plaintiff in the action is a Mrs. Bridget Ayotte of this city, formerly of Douro. The plaintiff sued the township for damages to the amount of $1,232 arising out of a fall on an alleged defective sidewalk at Young's Point. The settlement in favour of the plaintiff amounted to two hundred dollars without costs.

Mr. F. D. Kerr announced that the case was settled without the aid of counsel at a late hour last evening, and that the highest traditions of the bar were upheld by the contesting parties.

"The case came to an untimely end," observed His Honour Judge Huycke to Mr. J. Wearing, who made a belated appearance in court.

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—One man in five only, coming within the first class of recruits, will be called to the colours under the Military Service Act. Estimates show that, at the present time, there are 483,187 bachelors in Canada between the ages of 20 and 34. Consequently, out of every five men in the class one will be called and four will be left at home.

It is pointed out here that any man bonafide engaged in the production of food or of any article necessary in connection with the war will probably be found entitled to exemption, as will also any man having financial, business or domestic obligations of an exceptional character or who suffers fro mill health. The man who deliberately neglects to comply with the act will forfeit any right to exemption. He will also lose the chance that he has, even if not exempt, of being one of those whose services may not be required because the whole of 100,000 men authorized by law have been provided without his being called upon.

Therefore, it is urged, it is strongly in the direct personal interest of every man to comply with the Military Service Act, making claim for exemption if the man believes he has grounds for so doing. Any man who resorts to what is sometimes called "passive resistance," will be acting contrary to his own interests. By so doing, he will render his selection for military service inevitable, and that under considerations of ignominy. He will also throw away the opportunity of being one of the four bachelors out of every five who, in complying with the act, are relieved from the necessity of serving the country under arms.

Certain persons are reported to be violating the law by advising young men to neglect the Military Service Act altogether, and to abstain either from reporting or from claiming exemption. It is not thought here that the mischief makers will meet with success. Young men who allow themselves to be led astray by such advice will put themselves in the position of law breakers.

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—The Militia Department has received a coupl, of interesting reports covering comparatively recent operations in France of the Canadian Railway and Forestry Corps. In regard to the latter it is stated that twelve new companies of the Canadian Forestry Corps have arrived in France, making a total of forty-two now in the country, with a total strength of 270 officers and 7,233 other ranks. These figures do not include the 2nd Canadian Construction Company (colored), 11 officers and 42 other ranks. A very large quantity of mill machinery and logging equipment has been received.

The report states that the 6th Company, situated in the English army area, continues to increase its output. The production of the companies in this area proved of great value during the Vimy and Mesines attacks. Large quantities of timber of all description have been supplied for roads, dugouts, gun emplacements and mining operations.

Two newly-arrived Canadian forestry companies have been despatched to the French army area, where operations have commenced in held by the enemy.

a forest which was a short time ago

The report on the Canadian Railway troops states that during the month of July alone these forces located 82 miles of narrow guage railway and 21 miles of wide gauge. In addition, they ballasted more than 100 miles of railway and kept other lines in repair. During the month nearly 300 miles of railway line was being maintained by this force, which number approximately 8,000 men.

KINGSTON, Oct. 2.—Orders have been issued to decrease the rations issued to all soldiers, in Canada so that more fodo can be conserved for the soldiers fighting in France. In future the ration of bread per day for a man will be only fourteen, instead of sixteen, ounces, and the ration of meat will be the same. Soldiers state that any healthy soldier can easily consume his full pound of meat and pound of bread a day and then be hungry, but the food controller's order must be obeyed.

MANY DEAD AND 40,000 HOMELESS AS RESULT OF TYPHOON

Tidal Wave Accompanied Wind and Rain and Tokio Especially Suffered, the Property Damage in That City Alone Being $3,000,000

THE RIVER IN FLOOD

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ralph C. Turner.)

TOKIO, Oct. 3.—The most destructive typhoon and flood in twenty years to-day had destroyed thousands of buildings, rendered 40,000 homeless, paralyzed railroad and shipping, and did $31,000,000 damage in the city of Tokio alone.

The storm broke Monday.

It struck first in the vicinity of Tokio bay and over the eastern Pacific. The whole shore line was inundated. A small tidal wave accompanied the wind and rain.

At Yokohama harbour four cargo boats were swept under by this wave of water.

A complete estimate of the damage or loss of life will be impossible for several days. The official estimate is at least eighty dead in Tokio alone. Newspapers predict this figure will be doubled.

The telegraph system is utterly demoralized and reports of loss of life or damage in other parts of the empire are lacking.

The Sumida river is still rising and it was predicted to-day that twenty thousand additional homes will be flooded in the Tokio district.

The hurricane stripped roofs off buildings, whipped ships from their moorings and beat the downpour of rain into a veritable flood of water in the street.

The Imperial palace buildings suffered considerable damage, as did many other beautiful structures in the city. Train service is practically at a standstill. The stock exchange was closed all day.

SIR WILFRID TO RESIGN?

should retirement be decided upon, is something for the members and candidates of the Liberal party as a whole to decide upon. Should Sir Wilfrid finally decide to retire, a meeting of these men will be called at some central point and the whole matter will be threshed out there." It is generally conceded that the choice will lie between Mr. Carvell and Hon. Geo. P. Graham. The latter attended the conference at Montreal, but is not here to-day.

The rumour that Mr. Carvell is being again approached by Sir Robert Borden with a view to coming into a Union Cabinet is not generally credited here. Mr. Carvell did not see any members of the government this morning and leaves this afternoon for home. He professed no knowledge of the re-opening of union negotiations. Whether a change in leadership in the Liberal party would tend to further the cause of coalition is a matter for surmise. Since yesterday Sir Wilfrid gave no intimation of his intention to retire. In fact he discussed plans for the coming contest. His retirement from the leadership, however, would not involve his retirement from the political arena. Should he relinquish the leadership he would in any event run again as a member in Quebec.

A final decision on the question will depend entirely on the result of the negotiations during the coming week or so. Sir Wilfrid has led the Liberal party through good fortune and ill ever since 1878.

SEVERAL CONFERENCES.

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 3.— Although Sir Wilfrid Laurier's secretary, as well as leading Liberals to-day deny rumours of the retirement of the venerable Liberal leader at an early date, the impression is growing here that he must shortly step out owing to ill health. Leading members of the Opposition from nearly all the provinces of the Dominion are here to-day, and there were several conferences regarding which nothing was given out for publication. This afternoon Sir Wilfrid, with some of his close political friends, leaves for Montreal, where more conferences will take place.

Hon. George Graham, F. D. Carvell and Hon. Arthur Sifton are names prominently numbered as successors to Sir Wilfrid.

The Cabinet Council meets this afternoon and it is expected a normal notice of dissolution will be given to-night or to-morrow.

TWO LITTLE POEMS BY A LOCAL SOLDIER

France, Sept. 1, 1917

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Enclose are original and the work of a Peterborough soldier on active service. Perhaps you can use them.

Yours truly,

J. R.H.

The verses are as follows:

TO ALL WOMEN—AND ONE WOMAN IN PARTICULAR.

Thou fairest of the fair that ever dwelt
Beneath the Heavens high;
More beautiful and chaste thou art than all
The stars that deck the sky.
For they, though shining bright, art cold and far,
Promise of life to be;
Thou, loving, last and best creation dost
Breathe of that life to me.

CANONNIER

A TOAST.

From nothing having made the Heaven and earth
God saw they lacked heart;
And then to woman he gave his breath divine—

Mr. B. F. Ackerman Named To Succeed Late Dr. Burnham

Board of Education Adopt Resolution Appointing Former Member of Board to Fill Position Until the End of the Year

AN APPRECIATION

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education, held last evening, Mr. B. F. Ackerman was named to fill the vacancy on the Board, caused by the death of Dr. George Burnham. The following resolution was moved by Mr. John Crane, and seconded by Mr. W. H. Hill:

Whereas, owing to the death of Dr. George Burnham, it is necessary that some other duly qualified person should be elected by this Board in his place.

Therefore, be it resolved that Mr. B. F. Ackerman be hereby elected a member of this Board in place of the late Dr. George Burnham, and to hold office for the remainder of the term for which the said, the late Dr. George Burnham was elected.

An Appreciation.

The following resolution, moved by Mr. John Crane, and seconded by Mr. W. H. Hill:

Since the last meeting of this Board Peterborough has lost a valued citizen and this Board its oldest member in the person of Dr. George Burnham.

For over thirty-seven years Dr. Burnham sat continuously on our School Board. He was constant in attendance at its meetings, occupying for many years the chairmanship and always he rendered his best and most faithful service. Unassuming, and modest, pleasant in intercourse, and faithful in discharge of duty, he secured the respect of all, and continued to work with his colleagues for the maintenance of the high standing that our Collegiate Institute and the six splendid public schools of the city have attained.

We thoroughly appreciate the long and valued service Dr. Burnham rendered to our city, and in testimony thereof, direct that this resolution be inscribed in the minutes of the Board of Education to be forever a lasting memorial of our appreciation and expression of our sorrow at losing so good a man, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to his relatives.

The Coal Situation

OTTAWA RECOGNIZES THAT DESIRE IS TO SUPPLY NORTH-WEST STATES—IS TEMPORARY

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—The effect of the diversion of American coal shipments from Canadian ports to meet fuel shortage in the North West States is being canvassed by the Ottawa authorities. It is stated here that the supply of coal generally in Canada is greater than it was this time last year. The large centres are exceptionally well supplied, but there is a shortage in smaller towns and cities, which may have to be made up by diversion of certain supply from the larger centres. The coal season has about another month to run.

From information gathered there was much more coal in household bins at the end of September this year than on the same date last year.

The prohibition of export by water to Canada is believed to be a temporary measure. It is pointed out that if the Northwestern States do not secure a supply of coal before the close of navigation on the Great Lakes they will be compelled to pay all-rail rates throughout the winter months and that this would materially increase the price. It is recognized that there is a serious shortage of coal in the Northwestern States.

TWO DISTRICTS AFFECTTD

The preventing of coal shipments to Canada from American lake ports, and the diverting of the traffic to the North Western States as ordered from Washington, will not materially affect the coal situation in Ontario, is the statement of those in touch with the business in Toronto. There are Canadian lake ports in Ontario such as Cobourg on Lake Erie, which will be affected by the order, but at the Bessemer and Lake Erie Railway office in the Royal Bank building the agent in charge was not inclined to comment on the order in the absence of communication from the head office. This company supplies large quantities of coal to Western Ontario towns and villages bringing it over in cars on car ferries to Port Stanley, and the Midland district is catered to in a similar way by a ferry line to Cobourg.

It is likely that this trade will have to be supplied by railway transportation. A prominent railway and coal man states that he thinks the order is partly designed purely to get the ships engaged on the lakes in this business, to transfer their activities to the carrying of coal to the North West. "Purely a question of lake-ship tonnage," he said.

THE WASHINGTON ORDER

Washington, Oct. 3.—All shipments of coal into Canada from American lake ports were ordered stopped by Fuel Administrator Garfield, to divert coal from these ports to meet fuel shortage in the North West.

The order also directs that producers shall fulfil contracts for delivery of coal to Lake Erie ports for transhipment, directs all handling agencies to expedite shipments and forbids the reconsignment of such coal to any point either in the United States or Canada other than the North West.

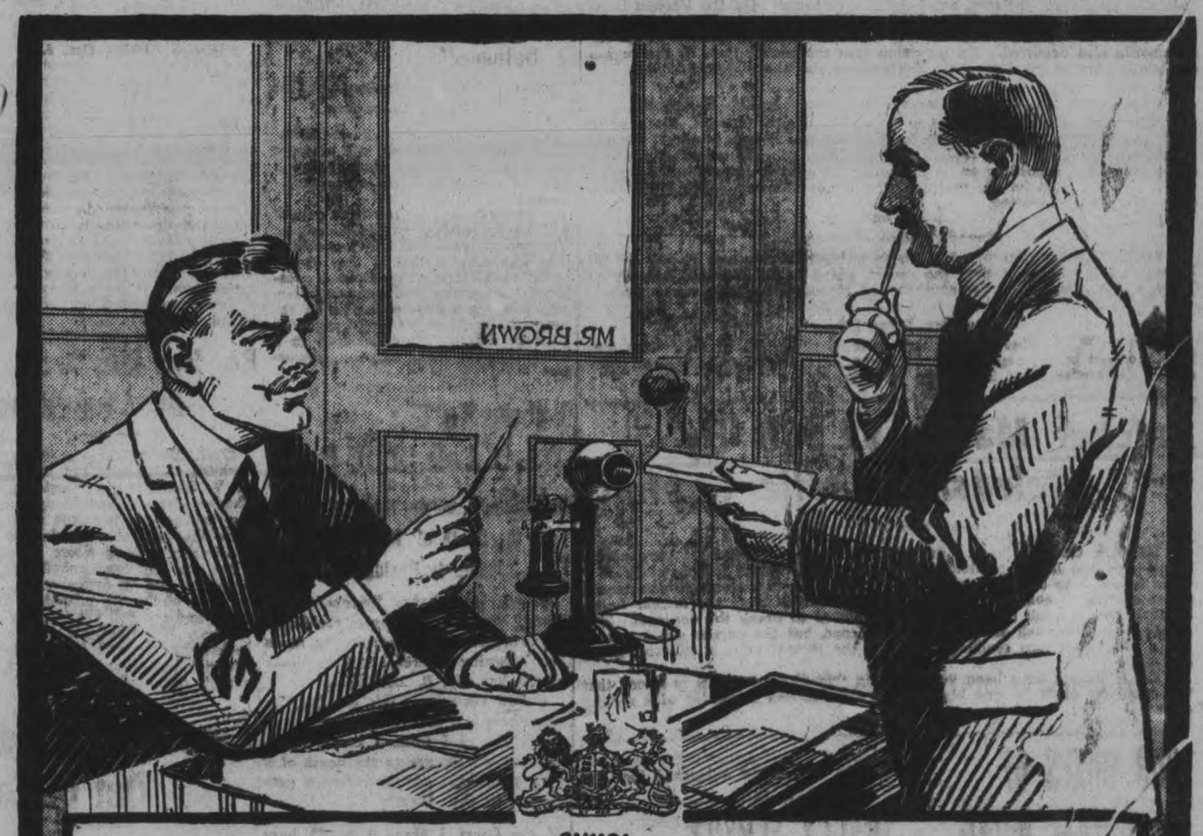
GEORGE STREET, NEXT HOOPER'S

A NOVEL BED FOR SAVING FLOOR SPACE

In the new Goodwill Apartment house on Water street, there is being installed in some of the living rooms a movable folding bed of a very ingenious construction. It is called the Murphy Bed, and is a wonderfully convenient piece of bedroom furniture for saving floor space. The most important features are the facility with which it can be folded and moved out of the way during the day, when not in use, and the simplicity with which it can be replaced when used at night. Where it is intended to be used in a living room at night the head of the bed is attached to one side of the opening into a clothes closet by a swinging device. The bed posts are jointed and fold over on the bedclothing so as to keep it firmly in its place and as the foot of the bed is raised up to fold back into the closet, it swings around until the whole bed is snugly stowed away in the closet, when the door is shut and no bed is to be seen. The bed closes with all the clothing in perfect order, and is ready for the occupant at any time.

The Murphy Bed is made in several sizes, single and double, with solid comfort springs of a new combination. It has a most attractive appearance—is finished in brass, absolutely sanitary.

Messrs. Ephgrave and Barrett, the local contractors for the Goodwill Apartment House, have secured the agency for this district, and will be pleased to show any enquirers its modus operandi.



"How Many of our Men are Liable to be Drafted ?"

The Canadian business man is asking this question often, now that the Military Service Act is the law of Canada. A simple means of answering it at once is being provided.

Medical Boards are in process of formation throughout the country for the free physical examination of all men who apply. The first class liable to call includes all single men and widowers without children between the ages of 20 and 34 inclusive, all men married after July 6, 1917, being classed as single for the purposes of the Act. In a very short time, the average employer may learn how many of his staff are liable for selection. Those adjudged physically unfit will be given a certificate which will secure them exemption from any Exemption Tribunal. Those found physically fit may still apply for exemption on any ground. The employer will be given a chance to decide if he should seek exemption for any employee whose physical condition renders him liable for selection.

This early medical examination, which quickly decides if a man is liable for selection or not, is a feature of the operation of the Military Service Act calculated to appeal strongly to the business community. It assists in definite planning for the future, enabling an employer of labor to learn at once what men will be left at their work and those who may be removed for military service. Haphazard withdrawals, the nightmare of business men of method and precision, are insured against by this timely arrangement.

Every employer of labor will find it to his advantage to note carefully the formation of Medical Boards in his locality and to be sure that his employees secure as early as possible this very important information as to their status under the Military Service Act.

Issued by The Military Service Council.

MORE SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION WANTED IN THE SOUTH END

South Central School is Overcrowded and the King Edward School is Filled to Capacity--School Board Will Hold Special Meeting to Deal With the Difficulty.

The crowded condition of the public schools in the south ward of the city was referred to last evening by School Inspector Mowat at a meeting of the Board of Education. This year nearly two hundred pupils have been added to the public schools and to accommodate this extra number only two rooms have been opened whereas at least four extra rooms are required for that number of pupils. The chief difficulty centres around the South Central school. This particular school has long outgrown the capacity of the building. Pupils residing within three hundred feet of the South Central school are being sent to the Queen Mary school in order to relieve the congestion. A special meeting of the Board will be called at an early date to consider the question of providing more school accommodation in the south end.

Dr. F. C. Neal announced that on the thirteenth of this month a demonstration will be held in the Public Library under the auspices of the medical Association in which members of the school board and others will be shown methods of teaching deaf and dumb children.

NATURE STUDY.

The Board authorized the purchase of seven illustrated charts dealing with nature study work.

Inspector Mowat commended the efficient and painstaking work of Miss Jory, school nurse. Miss Jory is compiling a physical record of every child in the schools of the city. It was also reported that there are three cases of scarlet fever in the city but no serious results are anticipated.

The Boys' Athletic Association of the Collegiate Institute will receive the usual grant of thirty dollars with which to help defray expenses for a field day.

The receipts of an enlarged photograph of the late Captain Harold Hill to be hung in the Collegiate Institute will be suitably acknowledged. The matter of establishing a skating rink on the grounds of the King Edward School was referred to the Property Committee.

COMMITTTE REPORT.

The Committee on Appointments reported as follows:

1. That the resignation of Miss Edna M. Ferguson, household instructor be accepted, to take effect September 30th.

2. That Miss Elizabeth MacVannel, of Guelph, be appointed to succeed Miss Ferguson, salary to be according to schedule and duties to commence October 1st. The appointment of Miss MacVannel has already been approved by the Department of Education, Toronto.

3. That in view of the twenty-four years of faithful service of Miss Minnie R. Warner, as Kindergarten directoress, who resigned sometime ago, on account of ill health, she be granted an honorarium of $400.00 payable in monthly instalments, commencing 1st of October, 1917.

4. Regarding the request from the Peterborough Playgrounds Association which was referred to this Committee for consideration, we recommend that they be granted the sum of $119.36, which represents the amount of their outstanding accounts. This recommendation is made on the understanding that all of the equipment becomes the property of the Board.

5. That in future the four special teachers of Manual Training, Household Science, Art and Music, employed jointly by this Board and the Department of Education, report for duty at the beginning of each term on the date set for the opening of the Public Schools and Collegiate Institute.

6. That Mr. A. D. Hone, Science Master of the Collegiate Institute, who was granted leave of absence in order that he might enlist for active service, and who has since been released, so that he might engage in research work with the Government in a semi-military capacity, be allowed to continue in such work until the end of December on his undertaking to report for duty at that time, that he be paid the difference between the salary paid by the Government and the salary he would be entitled to under the present schedule and that his substitute be notified that his services will not be required after the end of the present year, Dec. 31st.

The "Sky Pilot" Pony

Not the least interesting feature of the play, "The Sky Pilot," which will be seen here at the Grand Opera House, on Monday night, October 8, is the pony ridden by the heroine, Gwen.

He has had quite a stage career, and has appeared in a number of feature pictures. According to his trainer, Dr. Potter, who for several years provided trained animals for the New York Hippodrome, he is almost human, and can do everything but talk.

This pony travels about as an honored member of the "Sky Pilot" Company. He has his own groom, and a special bill of fare all his own. His harness and blankets were made for his own particular use and benefit. On the train he rides in royal state, having a stall especially built for him, with a soft little bed of the finest straw on which to lay his knowing head.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It is refreshing to see, by reading the Toronto papers, that some of our Canadian women are brave enough, even at the risk of being called pro-German and unpatriotic, to refuse to sign the cards issued by the Food Controller.

The Examiner rightly upholds the ladies who are distributing these cards, as we have no doubt they are all women of high principle who believe they are doing what is right for the country. But are they? I believe not. So long as the Food Controller asks us to pledge ourselves to economize, should he not urge economy along all other lines as well? So long as the government asks us to send men, money and food, should it not do its part and see that the British governmetn is doing its part for our boys? We are asked to help to release foodstuffs for the British forces and people, and some of us know that, at the time we are doing this, immense quantities of food are used for beer and spirits, and all grain is lost for food purposes. We hear that our soldiers in England can often not get suagr in their tea, and some of us know that, during the first three years of war, in Britain alone, the grain for bread that was destroyed for drink was 4,400,000 tons, and the sugar 340,000 tons. One of the ladies who distributed cards in Peterborough was asked if the card could be signed conditionally, (conditionally being that those in power do their part in the "economy campaign.) Her reply was, that, they said they were doing their best and we just had to do our duty and take their word for it. I ask any woman of brains is she willing to take this attitude? No, the trouble is that the awful wastage of the government is hidden by the censor, and the maojrity of people are almost in as complete ignorance of the state of affairs as if we were in Prussia.

Why has the Canadian censor banned "The Fiddlers," a book by Arthur Mee? Simply because it shows the horrible and appalling wastage of food and man power in Great Britain; and if Canadian mothers read it they would strain every nerve to see that such a condition of things came to an end.

After the war we will hear a deal about "the menace of cenorship," but now is the time that the menace is upon us. Let no mother sign the Food Controller's cards till the Canadian and British governments have done all in their power, not only to economiez but to make life in Britain easier for our boys to remain pure and good as many of them were when they left us.

I have met many women who have signed the cards but say, "Of course I signed the card, but it won't make any difference to me as I always economize as much as possible." Certainly every woman worthy of the name is saving in every possible way, but what colossal impudence of a government to demand of its women that they economize when it is doing virtually nothing itself.

I should not say it is doing nothing, however. It has quite lately disfranchised or proposed to disfranchise a large number of the women who are filled with "patriotism" (much abused word!) of the real kind, for this kind act some of the Peterborouhg papers, as well as others, tell us our hearts should be full of gratitude. I am proud to be the secretary of an association that has done war work second to no organization of its size in Canada, every member of whose executive has refused to sign the Food Controller's cards.

LIVELY ROW OVER INCINERATOR SITE IN SARNIA COUNCIL

Alderman Suggested That Entire Garbage Committee Resign

SARNIA, Oct. 3.—A lively row occurred at a meeting of the council over the site for the new incinerator. Statements were made that it was rumoured efforts were being made to prevent the garbage committee obtaining a clear title to the Cobden street site. Ald. Farquharson of that committee at once suggested that the garbage committee resign and leave the whole matter to be looked after by the provincial board of health. No action was taken, however, on the matter. The garbage committee was instructed to have plans prepared for an incinerator, having a capacity of 25 tons per day, and to call for tenders for same.

'Ald. McAdams asked what had been done about securing a site and was informed by Ald. Crawford that the committee was endeavouring to obtain a clear title for the Cobden street site. He stated that the provincial board of health has not as yet given its approval.

Canners Object.

A communication was read from the Ontario canners raising an objection to the proposed site on Confederation street, declaring it was adjacent to their property and that they intended some day to rebuild the plant destroyed by fire some time ago. If the incinerator is built there, they declared, they would not rebuild. This letter was sent to the garbage committee.

BAR USED TO SLAY RUTH CRUGER FOUND

New York, Oct. 2. — That the weapon with which it is believed Ruth Cruger was slain on February 13th last, had been found, was announced yesterday. The weapon is a short iron bar covered with stains, which Alfred J. Talley, the Assistant District Attorney, is having analyzed. It was found by Detective Lindsey, of District Attorney Swann's staff, when the extraordinary Grand Jury which is investigating police negligence was inspecting the motorcycle repair shop of Alfredo Cocchi, No. 542 West 542 West 127th Street.

The bar was disclosed under a pile of old rubbish and newspapers on a shelf in the shop. If the stains on the weapon prove to be blood, it will confirm the theory of District Attorney Swann that Cocchi killed the girl in the rear of the shop, near a washroom, and then lowered her body through a hole in the floor to the cellar. Similar stains were found on tin which lined the hole.

The police theory has been that Cocchi killed the girl by inflicting blows on her head with her own skates. When her body was unearthed on June 17th, the skates were found buried near by, and on them seemed to be strands of hair.

In his confession Cocchi said he seized the first thing at hand to kill the girl, and that he could not recall what the weapon was.

REV. ARTHUR CARLISLE THREATENS TO RESIGN IF PEWS STAY EMPTY

Former Londoner Talks Very Plainly to Flock at Windsor.

WINDSOR, Oct 3.—A falling off in attendance at church services at All Saints' Episcopal church has so discouraged the rector, Rev. Arthur Carlisle, that he declares he will resign his church unless there is an improvement.

The rector took occasion at Sunday morning's service to speak very plainly to his flock. "I don't care a snap of my finger whether you come to hear me preach or not," he said. "But I do want you to come and worship. You may all leave before the sermon, if you so desire."

Rev. Mr. Carlisle expressed the opinion 'that there was something seriously wrong when so few are attending church," and if there was not some improvement he would take it as an evidence, he said, that he had been in the parish long enough.

Mine Sweeper A Delicate Job

One of Most Exciting and Dangerous of War

WORKER TELLS OF SYSTEM FOLLOWED TO FIND AND DESTROY MENACES TO WARSHIPS.

Sweeping the English channel for mines laid by German submarines is one of the most exciting and dangerous occupations of the war, according to the stories told by men participating in that work.

"Mine sweepers doubtless are the only vessels of the navy on which life belts are worn from the time of leaving port until the return," writes Jacques Marsillac, from aboard a mine sweeper on service in the channel.

"The task of a group of mine sweepers, composed of seven sloops formed in echelons, two by two, connected by steel cables, with the flab boat leading, is to clear a channel about half a mile wide and fifty miles long of the mines laid there by German submarines," he adds. "These under water mine layers carry from fifteen to twenty-four mines, according to the type, and they frequently lay them quite close together, so close, in fact, that it has become an axiom in the mine-hunting craft that where one is found another is sure to turn up.

TENSE MINUTES ON BOAT.

"The wireless operator on the flag boat of the group, who has served on four mine sweepers that have been blown up in the service, had scarcely flashed to the boats of the group that a mine had been signalled when a black mass adrift appeared on the crest of the waves ahead of our boat. A second later it disappeared. We steered in its direction, every man on deck searching intently for its reappearance. The few minutes in which a sighted mine disappears are full of infinitely disagreeable tension on board a mine sweeper.

"And if we touch it?" Marsillac asked of the wireless operator.

"Then it is joss," he replied, meaning that it would be fatal.

"On this occasion the fates were friendly to us," wrote Marsillac, "for the mine reappeared fifty yards away and for some reasons that no one could explain, remained in sight until the gunners could get action upon it. Round, black, it shone like a seal's back, showing from time to time its four mortal needles, contact with which means destruction.

MINE EXPLODES BETWEEN SWEEPERS.

"The boat sheered off and the gunners, using a special rifle ball at about 200 yards under immense difficulties resulting from the rolling of the boat, fired fifty shots without touching one of the fatal needles. They succeeded, however, in piercing the mine which filled with water and sank to the bottom of the sea.

"The two leading sloops raised a half red flag, which means that they have found a mine. At once began a manoeuvre intended to cut the cable holding it, suddenly a steel cable that connects each couple of sloops and which is called the 'sweep' stuck the mine.

"It must have come in contact with one of the deadly needles, and broke the vial of acid inside which sets off the discharge, for an immence column of water shot straight into the air to a height of 100 yards, completely masking for each other the two sloops between which the explosion occurred. Then the sloops went on in search of other mines, and thus continues every day this dangerous and heroic work of clearing the path for merchant ships through the high seas."

800 DEER SKINS SEIZED.

Provincial Game Warden Enjoys Fine Day's Sport in City of Toronto.

TORONTO, Oct. 3.—The red deer season has not opened yet, but a Provincial game warden had one of the record hunts of his career in one of Toronto's industrial paddocks. When this deer hunter counted his pelts at the close of day, he had 800.

Deer forests in Toronto? Nonsense. But this was an official seizure, and the manufacturer must explain why he had deer skins in the close season. Also, he will be asked to produce his lense to buy and his permit to hold the hides during the protected period.

RETAIL PRICE OF POTATOES

Mr. Hanna's Figure of $1.25 Will Be the Cost to the Consumer.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—That the price of $1.25 per bag for potatoes, when fixed by the food controller, means the retail figure, was the information secured from the Food Controller's Department yesterday. This clears up the doubt that existed as to whether the price was to mean the farmers' or wholesalers' selling price.

NEW FLOUR PRICE FRIDAY.

Food Controller Says Arrangements Have Been Made For Controlling Price.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, will determine the basis for controlling the prices of flour and the offal (bran and middlings) for Canada on Friday. The question has been under consideration for some weeks by a committee appointed by the milling interests to co-operate with the Food Controller. This committee will make its final report at a meeting with Mr. Hanna on Friday, and prices will be adjusted for the entire Dominion.

"Reports that flour prices already have been determined are not authentic," said the Food Controller. "The arrangement which will be made on Friday will enable me to control flour prices, for I shall have complete knowledge of the basis on which these prices will be worked out."

Kinmount Correspondence

KINMOUNT, Oct. 3.—Sunday, Sept. 30 was rally day in the Presbyterian church. Rev. Mr. Williams gave a very interesting talk to the little ones of our Sunday school. He took "Habits" as his topic and with simple experiments with chemicals he showed how bad habits may darken and soil our lives, but that the blood of Jesus Christ can make us clean again.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams left here on Monday for Toronto, where Mr. Williams will attend college.

The Dominion Temperance Alliance held the last of a series of meetings in the Presbyterian church on Wednesday last. A goodly number were present and enjoyed the lecture and moving pictures as given by Mr. Hallyard.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the manse on Thursday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Williams entertained the choir and men's Bible class with progressive games.

Mrs. H. Coben and little Miss Violet Brooks spent part of last week visiting with Mrs. Chas. Coben.

Mrs. (Dr.) White has been confined to her room.

Among the most delightful French blouses that have come over this season are those of dark blue voile, hand hemstitched and hand drawn.

Attendance Was Good in View of the Rain and the Exhibits Large in Number and Fine in Quality—A List of the Prize Winners

Success, which has been the keynote of the fall fairs in this district, made no exception in the Keene fair which was held yesterday. (Educational Department Food Controller's Office).

MONCTON, N.B., Oct. 3.—As a result of regulations providing for "beafless and baconless days" and other restrictions imposed on public eating places at the instance of the Food Controller, a very great saving has been effected in supplies needed for export to the Allied armies and nations. The first announcement of the reductions in the consumption of beef, bacon and wheat flour brought about by the Order-in-Council, effective August 17, regulating the serving of these commodities in hotels and restaurants, was made here to-night by Mrs. Jean Muldrew, Director of Domestic Economy in the Office of the Food Controller. Mrs. Muldrew addressed the convention of Women's Institutes for the Province of New Brunswick on the subject of Food Conservation.

The following are the percentage reductions in the consumption of beef and bacon reported for the month of August 17 to September 17, as compared with the consumption in the same eating places during the preceding month:

City:	Percentage Saving Of beef.	Of bacon.
Quebec	29.82	29.61
Montreal	25.30	26.12
Montreal	49.48	79.84
Toronto	47.03	30.87
Toronto	63.04	75.62
Toronto	28.35	65.00
Toronto	28.47	84.86
Winnipeg	44.81	34.10
Calgary	52.67	40.93

Reports are not complete for the entire Dominion but those already received indicate that the saving in all parts of the country has been large, as measured in percentages, and enormous when considered in the aggregate of pounds. Four establishments in one city reported that the consumption of the previous month has been reduced by the following amounts:

	Beef.	Bacon.
(1)	1.5 tons	1 ton
(2)	0.68 tons	0.93 ton
(3)	1.64 tons	0.12 ton
(4)	5.66 tons	1.58 ton

The combined saving for the month in these four establishments alone amounted to 9 1-2 tons of beef and 3 and 3-5 tons of bacon. "These amounts," said Mrs. Muldrew, "represent but a fraction of the saving of one city, only a fraction indeed of the saving in the public eating places in that city alone. Yet these totals are sufficient to ration a whole division with beef for one day, and a division and a half with bacon, using in both cases the liberal Canadian allowance. What Canada's united effort will amount to is but dimly forshadowed by the performance of these four establishments. Add these to the number of other places in the same city and then add all from other Canadian cities, and you can easily see how great has been the saving in consumption of these two commodities."

The lecturer stated that reports already received by the Food Controller's Office showed a reduction of 20 per cent. in the consumption of white bread as a result of the provision of substitutes.

Mrs. Muldrew explained that in the present critical situation as regards the food supplies of the world, those who were responsible for the feeding of the family had an especial opportunity for effective patriotic service. In order that Canada might send to the Allied countries its share of the enormous amount of wheat required, the normal consumption here would have to be reduced from 6 to 4 1-2 bushels per capita. This meant that where we were accustomed to eat four slices of white bread we must now at only three, and for that other slice eat a bread made from some other cereal, such as rye, barley, corn, or eat its equivalent of barley, rice, oatmeal or other cereal food.

Moreover, the present consumption of beef and bacon in Canada must be reduced by one-third.

Mrs. Muldrew explained the purpose of the Household Food Pledge: "In order," she said, "to carry out to the full the requests of the Controller no privation is exacted of anyone; here is nothing that anyone with an intelligent understanding of food values and of simple methods of cooking cannot carry out and do much more and still have her family well nourished." She estimated that $50,000,000 worth of food which is now wasted could be saved annually. This situation could be remedied by the housekeeper if she would study the scientific food requirements of the different members of the household. The speaker also declared that much food was still being wasted in hotels and restaurants because too large portions were served.

"The services rendered by the housekeeper though very real, is not dramatic as is the work of the nurse with her attractive uniform," said Mrs. Muldrew, "but the kitchen soldier in her uniform is necessary to win the war. Will you teach others the value of small things? One slice of bread wasted weekly by every Canadian family means 71,280 one-pound loaves lost, enough to feed three and a half divisions (21,500 men) for ten meals. By guarding against small losses the habit will grow and it may be we shall be fortunate enough to lose our reputation for wastefulness and extravagance."

Ammunition Boxes As Communion Table

Canadians Partook of Sacrament While Shells Screeched Overhead—The Pathos of War

In front of Thiepval just a year ago last week a little knot of Canadian soldiers stood singularly grave around an improvised communion table of two ammunition boxes draped with the Union Jack and covered with a white cloth. They were partaking of the holy sacrament, some of them for the last time, during the Somme offensive. The chaplain stood by ministering to his men with a pocket-sized field communion set.

The sky was aflame with fire as death dealing shells screeched and roared through the air, the tat-tat-tat of the machine guns or the pingping of shrapnel varying the deafening thunder of artillery, as the men carried out the solemn rites of their church. Next they are over the parapet—one western battalion 750 strong and only 200 came back unscathed. The rest are dead or wounded. Then from across a shell hole a wounded hero leaning on a comrade for support spies his chaplain and shouts, cheerfully: "Never mind writing home, captain. I have still got my right hand and I'm off to good old blighty." He had asked his chaplain to write to his mother if he had fallen in action.

The foregoing is one side of the confusing panorama of war which Major (Rev.) Thurlow Fraser, of Owen Sound, related to a well attended meeting in Bloor Street Prsbyterian Church, last night.

Psychology of War.

Then one has to delve deep into the psychology of war to explain the conduct or to analyse the feelings of the men of the Northumberlands, of whom Rev. Dr. Bruce Taylor, of Montreal, related the story how they went over the parapet with a fooball, kicking it through No Man's Land, past German wire entanglements, and into the trenches of the enemy which, incidentally, it would appear, they captured!

Here is another sample of the soldier-theology which Dr. Taylor quoted:

"The bells of hell go ting-a-ling-a-ling.
For you, and not for me;
For me the angels sing-a-ling-a-ling.
They wait in heaven for me.
O death where is thy sting-a-ling-a-ling.
O grave thy victory.
The bells of hell go ting-a-ling-a-ling
For you and not for me."

Both Dr. Bruce Taylor and Rev. Thurlow Fraser have been at the front, the latter having returned only recently. They had some striking first-hand stories, scraps from the firing line that tell more of the spirit of the men at the front than a volume of "official statements."

"The war is full of unique happenings," Major Fraser declared. "When we arrived on the Somme front after leaving the Ypres salient about this time last year, we were struck by the sight of the church, partly ruined, high above a village not far from Thiepval. There, hanging at an angle of forty-five degrees, was the image of the Virgin clasping the babe in her arms overlooking the ruined town. The church had been struck by a German shell fourteen months previously. The Germans are now pushed too far back for their shells to reach it and God grant that they may never reach it again."

Chaplains Run Cinemas.

'You don't know what may happen to your chaplains when they come back,' said the speaker in a lighter vein. "Over there we have large marquees near the firing line. We run a 'Cinema' or a 'movie' show for the men, directed by the chaplains, and we have canteens where we serve the boys with hot tea and coffee when they come out of the trenches.

"In open fields, in barns, tents, movable huts, in the muddy parade ground, in rain and mist we worshipped, and you who sit by here comfortable in your homes give a thought sometimes and a prayer oft for those lads whose chorus, as they sing the fine old favorite psalms and hymns, goes up to the skies in far-off France and Flanders."

In paying a tribute to many game officers, the speaker particularly mentioned Lieut. Pringle, son of Rev. John Pringle, the pioneer missionary of Yukon, who enlisted as a private after walking 600 miles to the nearest recruiting station and ultimately obtained a commission just a month before he was killed. He led the attack on a German machine gun emplacement which had been giving trouble to his men and carried the position, but was dead when his men came up.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

CHAPTER IV.

Ramona De Lara, although at this time but little more than a child, had lived and suffered, and through suffering had grown old. The breath of happiness, the magic touch of love, these alone could make her young again.

Life had shown her, like the God Janus, two strangely different faces. The one had smiled, through sunny and peaceful years at her home in Seville, at the sleepy old convent, where after the death of her mother, her father had sent her to be educated. The outside world remained a sealed book, in which she hoped some day to read. Her dreams were the dreams of youth, through which flitted the imagined figure of a man who would whisper into her ears the words of love which would prove the open sesame to her heart. In the peaceful sunshine of the convent garden she had pictured him, a brave figure of youth, a cavalier, wooing her with madrigal and serenade, as was the custom in her native country. From time to time her father came, a grave gray man, grown old in the service of his king. He told her many strange tales of his adventures in foreign climes, of the golden islands beyond the sea. And then came the great day, when her father was made Governor of Puerto Bello, in the far-off Indies, and promised her that when he sailed, she should go with him, to rule as mistress over their new home.

After that, you may be sure, there was a great overhauling of wardrobes, a joyous making of costumes, befitting the daughter of a grandee of Spain. The great cedar chest, brass-bound and covered with crimson velvet, was filled to overflowing with fineries dear to the heart of youth, wherewith the before mentioned prince of its owner's dreams might be made to succumb to her charms. Had not her father told her that in his train were many brilliant young officers, each and every one ready to devote his hand and heart to the service of the governor's daughter? The prospect filled her with a delicious sense of importance. The world was indeed a marvellous place; it was good to be alive.

The journey down from Seville, in the coach and four, was a series of gasping delights to the girl for up to now she had not been beyond the walls of her native town, but it was her first sight of the great harbour of Cadiz that caused her to realize, more than anything else, the splendor of the adventure upon which she was now embarked.

The beauty of the scene thrilled her. From the surging blue of the sea a myriad darts of sunlight were reflected, as it tossed in the strong northeast breeze. The Rio del Oro, the great galleon that was to bear their little company westward strained at her moorings like a fettered giant impatient to be on her way. About her towering stern, bright with the emblazoned arms of Spain, clustered a swarm of small boats, offering their wares before the signal gun should set the vessel free. Ramona, in what seemed like a delicious dream, had been deposited, along with her crimson trunk, in one of the boats, and, with her father's hand in hers, had made her way to the high poop deck, where were gathered those about to seek their fortunes in the golden west.

The vigor of the wind gave a brilliant dash of color to her cheeks, pale from so many years behind convent walls; her eyes flashed with the joy of new experiences; the young officers grouped about the deck, decided one and all that the governor's daughter was a girl of rare beauty, and of exceptional charm.

The eager wind, how it whipped the blood into her face, as they swept at last toward the open sea. The white puff of smoke from the signal gun at the castle of the port, marked the end of that period in Ramona's life when existence had smiled upon her. She was bound for uncharted seas. The future like the great continent on the other side of the world, was shrouded in mystery.

For six weeks the girl lived, keenly, joyously, alert, to every new sensation. All things interested her, from the half naked sun-browned sailors, straining at the halliards of the great snapping sails, to the sea birds, the flying fish, the whales, pointed out to her by the solicitous young officers, who vied with each other in their efforts to create a favorable impression. Life no longer smiled in peaceful somnolence. Its visage held the sterner note of reality, but Ramona did not observe it. She was far too busy with her childish conquests, too did not observe it. She was far too tired, when night came, to do aught but sleep the dreamless sleep of innocence and youth.

Once or twice as she watched the sun setting in the shadowy mists of the west, and realized how relentlessly the vessel was plowing its way across the never ending sweep of blue, a feeling of loneliness, almost of dread, came over her. She wondered what manner of future lay over the distant rim of the horizon. Perhaps some shadow of coming events fell dimly across her path. With the high courage of youth, however, she dismissed such introspective moments as unworthy the daughter of Don Francisco de Lara, soldier of the King. It was after all far more agreeable to listen to the sweet nothings that the gay young cavaliers on board were ever ready to pour into her ears, beneath the yellow radiance of the tropic moon. And yet, her premonitions had not been without reason. Life, that had so long smiled, was now about to turn to her a grim and tragical visage.

The voyage of the Rio del Oro was an unusually swift one. Favored by fresh winds from the north and east, the great ship drove steadily into the sunsets, until at last on the forty-third day her mast head man made out a faint purple blur upon the horizon that young Don Ramon de Guzman, third in command of the ship, informed her was the island of Hispaniola.

They planned no stop here, however, but skirting the island's northern shore, made for the Windward passage, between it and the southernmost point of Cuba. Here they would enter the Caribbean Sea; a few days more would serve to bring them to the Spanish Main, where lay the city of Puerto Bello.

It was late in the afternoon when the Rio del Oro entered the dangerous passage, dangerous, indeed, not because of any adversity of wind or tide, but because of its proximity to Tortuga, and the Island of Jamaica, headquarters of the dreaded buccaneers.

Toward night, the breeze from the north and east, that had held so true throughout the major part of their long voyage, slackened, with every evidence of the approach of a dead calm. A low-lying mist gathered along the surface of the water, the man aloft could with difficulty see twenty fathoms ahead.

Toward midnight, the fog became thicker, yet still lay close upon the surface. A brilliant moon rode clear in the sky above. The vessel picked her way cautiously through the silence, her towering masts and widespreading yards rising ghost-like above the gray shadows that surrounded her hull. The ship's company was for the most part asleep. Don Francisco de Lara tossed restlessly in his berth, his mind troubled with thoughts of the task he was soon to undertake. Ramona slept the peaceful sleep of youth; the smile about her lips spoke of tender dreams, unclouded by any knowledge of the fact that for her, as for all on board, the hour of fate had struck.

Some two days before this, just as the mounting sun drew clear of the mists along the horizon, there crept out of the harbour of Port Royal four heavily built fishing boats, their decks crowded with many savage-looking figures in all stages of picturesque undress. They rounded the point of the Palisadoes, as the long sandspit upon which stood the greater part of the city was then called, and with a slatting of sails and a clatter of noisy oaths, swung close hauled into the north-east breeze.

The foremost of the boats was a shallop of some ten tons burden, carrying along its sides a number of small brass culverins. Two heavy lug sails hung from its short pole masts. At its tiller stood Bull Ormiston, his skin so bronzed by the wind and sun that it resembled old Spanish leather. He wore no hat, his long dark hair flowed loose beneath a kerchief of scarlet silk. His evilly handsome face showed lines of dissipation, of cruelty, that even the ruddy tan of his skin could not conceal. A certain forward thrust of his powerful shoulders, a heavy squareness of chin, bespoke the bulldog spirit that had earned him his sobriquet, "Bull."

There were three men grouped about him, whose manner and bearing indicated that they were his partners in the expedition now under way. The eldest of these was a little gray man, long past fifty, whose gnarled and knotted frame concealed a surprising strength and agility. One of his eyes was covered with a black patch. It had been gouged out in a tavern fight years before; its absence had earned for him the nickname of "One Eye," although in his native Devonshire he had been christened Martin Tench. Cold-blooded, crafty, old in crime, he had served as Ormiston's counsellor and chief lieutenant in many a stirring adventure.

The second of the three was a tall, swarthy man, clearly of Latin blood. His companions had dubbed him "Portugee," from the fact that he hailed originally from the city of Lisbon. His curly black hair, heavy mustache, and monstrous eyebrows gave to his face an expression of malignant ferocity, a trifle relieved, however, by the gleaming whiteness of his teeth, and the gold earrings in his ears. Tench, with no thought to his appearance, wore a grimy brown linen shirt and a pair of old and much stained leather breeches, his sole attempt at personal adornment being a flaming red cotton sash, but Portuguese Joe had the same love of finery that Ormiston had inherited from his French mother; like his companion, his ruffled shirt was of snowy whiteness, his breeches of dark green satin, his belt and boots of the most costly Cordova leather. The whole outfit, in fact, had but a short time before been the property of a junior officer on the Madre de Dios, which ill-fated vessel he had assisted in sending to the bottom some two months before.

The fourth man of the group was like Tench, an Englishman. He stood over six feet three in his bare feet, and possessed the frame and muscles of a giant. His sole garment was a pair of rough linen breeches. Across his hairy chest the long red welt of a newly healed wound showed dully against the mahogany brown of his skin. His face was fairly smothered in a long bristly beard, his bullet head tied about with a kerchief. Unlike his companions, who sported pistols, swords and knives at every available point, his sole weapon was a huge cutlass, or saber, of unknown origin, with which, and his enormous strength, he had been known to sweep, in a Bersark rage, half a score of men before him along the deck, and despite their fiercest struggles, drive them over the rail and into the sea. Dull and heavy of brain, he was devoted to Ormiston because the latter had beaten him in a bout with swords on the occasion of their first meeting. Since then he had followed his master like a dog, hating him perhaps, in a curious way, and yet devoted to him.

HUN AGENTS BETRAY SHIPS

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Newspapers here have published the following despatch from Washington:

Agents of the German Government posing as neutrals have been placed on board American merchant vessels for the purpose of betraying them in the submarine zone, according to unofficial reports here. These agents are said to use small wireless telegraph sets which flash signals from portholes to warn submarines of the approach of vessels. Those who are employed as stokers stoke the fires in such a manner that a long trail of heavy smoke hangs behind the ship for some distance and makes it easily seen by the crew of the undersea boats.

AN AUSTRALIAN BRINGS ON RAIN

Government Has Tested Device and Will Build Stations

MELBOURNE, Vic., Oct. 2.—Melbourne has decided to install two Balsillie plants for the stimulation of rain in Victoria and in New South Wales, in the Mallee and Riverina districts.

Mr. J. G. Balsillie, an Australian, has become famous for his inventions in wireless telegraphy. He has now carried his inventive genius into the domain of rain-making or rain-stimulating. As a result of official trials made with his device at Bookaloo, 50 miles west of Port Augusta, an increased rainfall of between 50 and 70 per cent. has been noted there, and the Government is much impressed with what has been done.

BERMUDA CAN FEED ALLIES.

Wants Ships to Move Her Big Vegetable Crop.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Bermuda's mission to the United States conferred with Government officials here to-day in an effort to have this country furnish sufficient ocean tonnage to move the island's vegetable crop which has been found incapable of export because of the shipping shortage. The mission declared that 300,000 crates of vegetables, 80,000 barrels of potatoes and 130,000 crates of onions can be procured for the allied governments' food supply if this country will temporarily divert sufficient tonnage into the island trade. Personnel of the mission includes S. S. Sturling, a leader of the House of the Assembly; F. G. Gosling and John P. Hand, members of the Assembly, and C. J. Wortley, Director of Agriculture.

AMERICAN SOLDIER AWARDED THE WAR CROSS WITH PALM

Seized Bomb Dropped Near French Villagers by German Aviator and Hurled It Into the River.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The first American soldier to win the war cross with the palm is John McClain, of Dayton, Ohio, says the Paris 'Herald." On the night of September 18th, a German airplane flew over the village in which he was, and dropped several bombs. One fell within fifteen feet of a building around which some fifty villagers had gathered.

Notwithstanding the warning expostulations of those nearby, the newspaper continues, Private McClain dashed out into the road and, discovering the bomb with the aid of a pocket lamp, picked it up and hurled it into the river. The projectile exploded as it struck the water. It sent up a column of water and no one was hurt.

Private McClain, who is 24 years old, has been in the army for four years. He saw service in Mexico. The French authorities have notified his wife, Mrs. Elsie McClain, of 823 Constay avenue, Peeksville, N. Y., of the honour conferred upon him.

HE PEPPERED BACK OF THEIR TOURING CAR

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—In the small hours of Sunday morning the general store man down at West Hill, Ont., armed with a huge shotgun, battled two motorists, who, he declares, broke into his store and tried to steal gasoline.

Although scantily clad, he started his own car, threw the shotgun in and set sail after the shop-breakers. They were in a huge Hudson super-six, so the store man did not overtake them. He did, however, send two charges of buckshot after them.

Sunday morning the police in Toronto found the Hudson car abandoned at the Dufferin race track and the rear of the machine was riddled with shot.

RAPID RIFLE PRODUCTION FOR THE AMERICAN ARMY.

WASHINGTON.— American plants making rifles for the army have exceeded the best expectations of the Government in speed of delivery. Private plants, with the Government arsenals, are supplying more than 1,200 new rifles a day. This number will increase appreciably throughout the weeks to come.

WHY RUSSIA WILL ABOLISH ALL "SHOCK BATTALIONS"

PETROGRAD, Sept. 27.—The military section of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates has voted in favour of a motion demanding the dissolution of "shock" battalions. The reasons given for this action are: First, from the viewpoint of principle it is inadmissible that there should be in the army groups of privileged soldiers who arrogate to themselves the right to die for the liberty of the country when this right belongs to all soldiers; second, that "shock" battalions place the Russian army in the position of an army which refuses to defend liberty, and, third, that "shock" battalions diminish the capacity of the army by creating on one side a category of heroes and on the other a mass of conscienceless soldiers.

NEWSBOY WORTH $100,000.

Asked Exemption in Chicago, But Board Refused It.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—William Murphy, who conducts a news stand on a down town corner, and who asked to be excused from war service because of dependent parents, was refused exemption when investigators for the Government reported to appeal board No. 1 that the newsboy was worth more than $100,000.

REGULAR SOLDIERS OF HUN ORIGIN DROPPED

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—About twenty-five soldiers of the regular army, who at the beginning of the war with Germany were on duty at posts in and near New York City, have been quietly dropped as a result of investigations as to their loyalty. This became known to-day.

They were not dropped as "spies," but simply because they were of German origin, and of known German sympathies in the present war.

The above information comes from a source of unquestioned authority, and the number of German soldiers refers only to this particular section of the country. Many other soldiers, it is understood, have been quietly discharged from the army in other parts of the country.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Daring Deed

A Story of the Sea.

By WARREN MILLER

The steamer Tecumseh was moving along at a ten knot gait off Norfolk, Va., when the lookout called:

"Boat ahead on the port bow!"

With his glass the captain swept the quarter of the ocean indicated and saw a cockleshell skiff pulled by a single man. He was alone in the boat and beyond sight of land.

"Put her off three points to westward," said the captain to the helmsman.

The ship was steered in the direction of the man in the boat, and as it drew near him broad stripes revealed themselves on the garments he wore.

"Escaped jailbird!" exclaimed the captain in disgust.

A rope was lowered, and the convict was pulled aboard. He walked aft to where the captain stood waiting for him and said:

"You see by my garb, captain, that I am an escaped prisoner. I broke away last night, made my way to the coast before morning, seized a boat and pulled out, where I hoped to be picked up by a passing ship. I must throw myself on your mercy not to put me back where I came from. If you intend doing so I beg you rather to toss me overboard, for I prefer to die rather than return to that horrible life."

"It wouldn't do for me," replied the captain, "to assist a prisoner regularly convicted under the law to obtain his freedom. You may work with the crew while you are on board my ship, but when we reach port I'll have to turn you over to the authorities."

There was a look of agony in the man's eyes as he turned away in company with the mate to take his place among the crew. He was young—not more than twenty-seven—vigorous and refined looking. He had eaten nothing since the day before. Food was given him; but, though he needed it, he had not the heart to eat more than he absolutely required.

Bad weather set in that night from the northeast, blowing a cold blast. The ship was riding obliquely across the waves which dashed up against her bows, now raising skyward and now pointing toward the bottom.

It was about midnight that, while the stern was raised high in the air, an enormous wave struck it with terrific force. There was a sharp report, and the helmsman found that the wheel turned without assistance. Something had happened to free the rudder and render it useless. The ship was at the mercy of the waves.

When the captain, who was on deck, learned of the trouble he blanched. He was not more than thirty miles from the Virginia coast, and with a northeast wind blowing his ship southwestward it would go ashore by daylight.

While this flashed into his mind the vessel was turning and in a few moments was rolling in the trough of the sea. Orders were issued to get up such sails as would be of service in steering. With the help of these, though the ship steadily lost ground, those aboard of her gained time. Morning came, and there was the shore like a faint cloud resting on the horizon, and with a powerful glass a white line could be seen breaking against it. Some steering gear must be rigged or within a few hours the ship would be breaking up under the waves rolling on that coast.

An investigation was made, and the rudder itself was found to be sound, though the stock was shattered, leaving the huge steel mass, weighing three tons, swinging from side to side with every wave and threatening to stave a hole in the vessel's stern. To save the ship and the lives of those aboard of her it was necessary that the rudder should not only be secured, but that it be again converted into a means of steering the ship.

The captain conceived a plan, but owing to the rolling of the ship did not consider its execution feasible. It was to make fast two chains, one on each side of the stern, to a ring on the outer edge of the rudder. Had the vessel remained on an even keel this ring would have been about four feet under water. As she pitched sometimes it was high in the air, sometimes far down below the surface. At the rudder's rise a man could be lowered on to it in the hope that he might put the chains through the ring, but before he could do so he would be buried many feet in the brine.

The captain lined the crew up on deck, told them of his plan, admitting that several men might be lost in the attempt, and called for volunteers. Half a minute passed before a man moved; then the convict stepped forward and said:

"I'd rather be drowned down there than go back to prison. I'll make an attempt."

"If you succeed," said the captain, "you'll never return to your stripes if I can help you."

One end of a rope was attached to the end of the mizzen boom, the other end being looped under the convict's shoulders. Just before he was lowered he said:

"Tell the world that I, Arnold Turner, convicted of a bank defalcation, about to die, declare my innocence. I know the guilty person, but decline, as I have always declined, to tell."

Turner stood on the gunwale and as the stern rose was quickly lowered with a wire rope and, perching himself on the rudder, endeavored to pass it through the ring. Before he could do so the stern descended, bearing him with it. Necks were craned over the rail to see, when the rudder rose again, if he would still be there. Few believed that he would. But as the stern came up there he was, his knees pressing the vessel's sides, his hands clutching the ring.

A wave swung the rudder to starboard, and the man on it would have been dashed against the side of the ship had he not saved himself by throwing himself on the other side. Before it was swung in the reverse direction down he went again toward the bottom of the ocean. When he came up, holding the ring by one hand, he tried to pass the rope through it, but the rudder was not still long enough for him to do so. He was not only becoming benumbed with the cold bath, but must be ever watchful to avoid being banged against the side of the vessel, which would, to say the least, have dislodged him.

And so he continued to fight for the lives of the fifty or more people slowly drifting toward the breakers, whose distant roar could now be faintly heard above that of the wind. Every time he was carried down he came up with shorter breath and more exhausted. But every time he renewed his attempt to put the rope through the ring of the swaying rudder. Then, when he had failed and gone down again, on rising he let go the ring to rest, swinging, soaked with ice water and pierced by the cold wind.

At last, watching his opportunity when the ship plunged and the stern rose, swinging with the ring, he grasped at it, caught it and the time passed the rope through it.

Half his work had been done.

Another wire rope was given him, but how could he hope, having lost so much of his strength and benumbed by the cold, to succeed when it had taken so long to attach the first rope? It was a period of terrible suspense for those drawing near those dreadful breakers, whose roar was now every moment growing louder. Again he made his dives; again he clung to the rudder, watching to avoid being dashed against the ship, trying to put the second rope in place.

And so, sometimes swinging at the end of his rope and sometimes taking his cold baths, he kept on trying. The knowledge that lives depended upon his success gave him strength, but whenever he felt that he could not endure another swing in the blast or another dive in the ocean he would think of that life behind bars which was dethroning his reason and he would persevere.

At last a feeble call from below announced to those above that the second wire rope had been passed through the ring. To the ends of these ropes those on deck passed heavy chains, which the convict shackled in place, and when this was done he was drawn up.

As he appeared above the taffrail a shout was raised. But he did not hear it. The moment his work was done he fainted. Liquor was poured down his throat, and he was hurried below. There he was stripped of his soaked clothing and put into hot blankets.

While he had been at his work men on deck had lashed a boom across the poop, projecting on each side. The rudder chains were passed through pulley blocks at each end of the beam and around a drum made by boarding over the steering gear. The moment the ends of the chains were attached to the ring the rudder was made serviceable, and the ship was turned from the white line where now, but a mile away, the mad waves were tossing their heads as if disappointed at losing their prey.

When Turner came on deck again he was dressed in a suit of the first mate's clothes, and every one pushed forward to grasp his hand and shower blessings upon him. Each and every person vowed not to betray him, and some suggested means of obtaining a pardon. But Turner told them that he preferred to remain aboard the ship, which, after touching at New York, was to sail for a foreign land. So great was his dread of a return to prison that he determined to lose himself in a country where he would not be known.

Under the improvised steering gear the ship weathered the gale and made her way to Philadelphia, where she put in for repairs, and her passengers, going ashore, took a land route to their different destinations. Before leaving the ship they held a meeting and collected a considerable sum to be paid the man who had saved their lives. But when they came to turn the gift over to him he declined it, saying that he did not need money beyond what he might be supplied with from friends who knew him to be innocent of any crime and who would gladly furnish him with all his necessities.

Turner remained aboard the vessel during her stay at Philadelphia and while she touched at New York. He occupied a cabin of one of the mates, where he kept himself hidden while the ship was in port. Then when her prow was turned eastward he came out and rejoiced in being once more a free man.

Years after the convict's escape the person who had perpetrated the crime for which Turner had been imprisoned, on promise of indemnity, owned himself to be the guilty party. Then Turner accepted a pardon.

TEN MILLION MARKS FOR FRENCH PRESS TO HELP GERMANS IN WAR

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Bolo Pasha, charged with having relations with the enemy, according to a story of his career appearing in the Matin, was born in Marseilles. At first he was a clerk to a notary. He is a brother of Monsignor Bolo, one of the most eloquent preachers of the Catholic Church in France, and had an easy access to an honourable career, but chose occupations that were varied and hazardous.

His business ventures began with a scheme for the wholesale catching and shipment of lobster. This cost his partner a considerable sum. After failing in several other enterprises, Bolo Pasha came to Paris and started a sort of information bureau. It became the target for numerous complaints, culminating in the condemnation of Bolo by default for abuse of confidence and swindling in 1894. Bolo then went to Valencia, Spain, where, under the name of Berner, he opened a cafe that was much ferquented by the French colony.

Married a Wealthy Widow.

In 1903 the Matin says, he turned up at Bordeaux, where he married a widow who had an annual income of 70,000 francs. He then enlarged his field of operations, appearing at Lyons as an agent for champagne and other wines. Afterward he again transferred his headquarters to Paris. Bolo, the newspaper adds, was conspicuous in the riots in Champagne when the wine growers there in a protest against the use of wine from outside Champagne for making sparkling wines under the name of Champagne, devastated the vineyards of big French companies, while those owned by Germans were left unharmed.

It was in June, 1914, that Bolo met Abbas Hilmi, then Khedive of Egypt. He was introduced by Yosoff Sadik Pasha, one of the Khedive's ministers. He at once became a trusted agent in the enterprise for the exploitation of real estate owned by the Khedive and for the protection of the Khedive's interest in the Suez Canal and in Egypt in the event that circumstances might compel Great Britain to repudiate the Khedive.

Khedive Gets From Under.

The Matin concludes from these negotiations that Abbas Hilmi, two months before the actual outbreak of hostilities, anticipated a war in which Turkey would be involved and sought to provide against sequestration of his interests in case he cast his lot with the Sultan of Turkey.

Requiring a "straw man" to take his interests under cover, says the Matin, a contract was drawn up by which Bolo was to be recognized by the Khedive in writing as his creditor to the amount of 50,000,000 francs In exchange Bolo was to make an agreement to repay that sum to its legitimate owner. Yusoff Sadik, the newspaper added, found Bolo's part of the agreement insufficiently clear and the project was not carried to completion.

Bolo Pasha, the Matin declares, communicated again with Abbas Hilmi in Switzerland shortly after Great Britain had deposed Abbas as Khedive, and through the ex-Khedive entered into relations with German agents.

To Influence French Press.

The Matin says Bolo Pasha met Abbas Hilmi, former Khedive, of Egypt, in Zurich, in March, 1915, and concluded an arrangement which was approved by Gottlieb von Jagow, then German Foreign Minister, under which 10,000,000 marks would be paid in instalments to Bolo through the former Khedive for the purpose of influencing the French press. In accordance with this arrangement, 4,00,000 marks was paid by roundabout methods through Swiss banks, to avert suspicion. Abbas Hilmi and an associate are said to have collected 200,000 francs as a commission. After that time Bolo Pasha and Abbas Hilmi seem to have fallen out, for their relations ceased.

Cancels a Contract.

Senator Charles Humbert, owner of the Journal, announces he has cancelled his contract with Bolo Pasha and refunded the 5,000,000 francs paid by Bolo for an interest in his newspaper.

The Senator, writing of his association with Bolo, says he signed at his request, a promise that Fernand Monier should be appointed a director of the Journal on his retirement as president of the Paris Court of Appeals. He felt at the time that the presence of such a man as Judge Monier on the Journal board, as the representative of Bolo, reassured him as to the wisdom of accepting Bolo's money.

(The French Ministry of Justice last week decided to send Judge Monier before the Court of Cessation on account of his association with Bolo).

Couldn't Return it for While.

After he signed the contract, Senator Humbert says, he saw Bolo only at wide intervals and noticed nothing suspicious. It was a year after the contract was signed that the Senator learned a judicial inquiry had been opened in regard to Bolo. He immediately offered to return the money, but Bolo declined to accept it and there was no way in which he could be forced to receive it. Furthermore, he had not been arrested and protested his innocence, and the Premier, who Senator Humbert consulted, told him even as late as three weeks ago that nothing definite had been found against Bolo. The Senator accordingly could only await further developments, and today concluded he had the right to break the contract and refund the money.

Look for This Agent.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Gaston Routier, a French subject, who founded the pacifist newspaper, La Paix, at Madrid, with funds supposed to have been furnished by Bolo Pasha. The publication aroused the indignation of the French colony in the Spanish Capital on account of its Germanophile tendency. As a result Routier declared he would cease publication and return to France and enlist in the army.

Detectives were sent to the frontier in anticipation of his coming, but nothing has yet been heard from him.

According to other information, money was furnished Routier by von Krohn, the German naval attache at Madrid.

A Deputy Mixed in it.

Legal sparring continues in the case of Deputy Louis Turmel, whose affairs are being investigated to determine the source of large sums of money in his possession. Jacques Bonzon, his attorney, insists that his case be joined with that of an usher in the Chamber of Deputies, charged by Turmel with extracting 2,000 franc bills from an envelope found in his locker. Examining Magistrate Gilbert has steadfastly declined to join the two cases. Turmel and Bonzon have been unable to find a bailiff to serve notice on Magistrate Gilbert in a proceeding for the denial of justice. They have threatened therefore, to take the case before the Parliamentary Commission which decided upon the demand for permission to prosecute the Deputy.

Bonzon is quoted in an interview as declaring that although he is attorney to both Turmel and Bolo Pasha there is no connection between the two.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Put a little vinegar in the water in which you boil fish and it will hold together better.

GRAIN DEALERS' QUOTATIONS

The demand for cash oats continues quite active, and prices again showed the strength of the market, advancing slightly over yesterday's substantial gain. The elevator strikes at Fort William is in part responsible for the advance in oats. The corn market acted irregular to-day; opening weak, the bears having the upper hand in the belief that the crop is now well assured and safe from all danger. Later figures came out showing a big decrease in the general yield. This encouraged the bulls, and the market closed well over yesterday's close. There is a big demand for the lower grades of Manitoba wheat. No. 4 northern was not quoted to-day.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.23; No. 2 northern, $2.20, store; No. 3, $2.17, including 2-cent tax, in store, Fort William.

STRIKE DRIVES FIRM AWAY

Labor Conditions Cause Peter Henderson & Company to Leave Jersey City.

New York, October 2. — Unable to meet the demands of union labor, and also "influenced by the withdrawal of so many men who have enlisted or have been drafted into the National Army," Peter Henderson & Co., the seedsmen, announced that they would transfer their greenhouses and gardens from Jersey City.

Just how such a move will remedy the scarcity of men because of the selective draft, was not stated by Peter O'Mara, the general manager, but he said that the strike of seventy-three men two weeks ago had convinced the firm that it could not get sufficient men there to take the strikers' place. He said the firm could not meet the union demands for a thirty per cent. increase in wages and a fifty hour week instead of sixty hours.

FIGHTS FELLOW CONVICTS.

Green, Notorious Prisoner, Transferred from Sing Sing to Dannemora.

New York, October 3. — William Green, 37 years of age, who with four other convicts escaped from Sing Sing prison in 1914, and who was later recaptured and brought back, has been transferred to Dannemora prison for assaulting two fellow convicts in the kitchen.

When Green stepped out of the Black Maria at the Harmon station, a mile and a half from Ossining, preparatory to be "shipped" by the Empire train express to his new home, a native of that town who knew him stepped up to him and asked:

"Well, Billy, when do you expect to break out again?"

Green smiled and grunted:

"In 1920."

COULD NOT PAY FINES.

Washington, Oct. 3. — Four suffragettes who were arrested for picketing the White House, were tried before Judge Mullowney in the police court to-day, found guilty of "obstructing traffic," and fined $25 each. Refusing to pay their fines, they were given the alternative of serving thirty days in the Occoquaan Workhouse, where they will to-morrow join the band of other militants who are serving time for picketing the White House.

Very Effective Method For Banishing Hairs

(Modes of To-day)

At very little cost any woman can rid her face of hairy growths if she will use the delatone treatment. This is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm results from this treatment, but care should be used to buy real delatone.

Millbrook Soldier Reported Wounded

Mrs. Percy Stinson of Millbrook, has received the following letter from her brother, Pte. J. Hawman:

Dear Sister, Percy, and Family:—Received your loving letter and the snaps before I left the front, and was surely glad to get them. You know I gave that favorite picture of yours to Ed. the first time that I met him in France. He wanted it so that I just smiled and let him have it. I did not say how badly I would have liked to keep it myself. I think those snaps are just grand and where Jack looks so good too. Everyone of the boys tell me he is just like me. You and Percy look grand. You know that is the best snap that I have of you. Well, I can't write a very long letter now as I am rather weak yet. I expect to be able to get out of bed tomorrow. I got a gas shell wound but it is slight. I got some of the new gas that the Hun is using. It burns through our clothes and blisters our skin, and each of those blisters is green and poisonous, but I have only two left on now—the rest are all healed. Worse luck, a piece of shrapnel hit my gas mask and I was breathing in pure gas for a few moments. However a few cunning movements on my part and some quick thinking, saved my life. I used a Fritz's helmet and it saved my life. The Hun was lying dead in the trench so he did not need his helmet, and I did. But too late, of course, I was gassed and soon after became unconscious for a short time. I am lucky though. I caught a German the day before and got a lot of souvenirs from him including his watch. Then the next day some one got them off me. I lost everything excepting the most important things—my snaps and myself. We had a very exciting week of it before I got gassed. I lost my fountain pen so I have to write with my pencil, so please excuse that, and the scrawl. Now, sister, there is nothing that I want whatever. I wrote to mother for some money as I have not had any to amount to much since I left Canada as I overdrew when I was home and have had a hard time to keep myself in stamps and smokes. Ed. was quite well when I last heard from him. If he should get wounded or anything cable me and I will get him to England. From your loving brother,

JERRY.

SATURDAY IS THE ANNUAL TAG DAY

Germany's Submarine Bases At Stake In The New British Drive

Offensive Which Opened This Morning Will Have Far-Sweeping Results if Carried Through Successfully---British Tactics Similar to Those Used in the Battle of the Somme May Compel Another "Strategie" Retreat --- French Airmen Bomb Frankfort Again.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 4.—The renewal of the Flanders drive comes after an eight-day interval. On Wednesday of last week the British swept forward over the ground on both sides of the Ypres-Menin Road, advancing from half a mile to a mile at various points along the line. Some of the heaviest fighting in the war on the western front followed, the Germans making assault after assault in desperate attempts to regain the valuable high ground they had lost. With to-day's renewal of the drive the battle of Flanders is growing more and more to resemble last year's battle of the Somme, which was followed by the memorable Hindenburg "strategic retreat." The same general tactics now being pursued of persistent driving at the same point in the line are evidently expected by the British to achieve similar result. This time, however, the ground which would have to be abandoned would be far more valuable to the Entente, and its loss a correspondingly heavy blow to the Germans, for the German-held Belgian coast line with its submarine and aerial bases is at stake, together with the great French manufacturing city of Lille and wide stretches of territory in Northern France and Flanders. To-day's attack followed sharply the last despairing effort of the Germans to stave it off. Crown Prince Rupprecht struck at the British line yesterday at its most vital points, but made no impression.

THE GREATEST BATTLE OF THE WHOLE WAR

British Have Advanced More Than a Mile Deep Into Foe's Lines--Prisoners Taken Reach Into Four Figures and Several Villages Captured--Drive Is Still On This Afternoon.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, October 4.—The British forces have advanced more than a mile deep into the German lines into what looked to-day to be one of the war's greatest battles.

Prisoners already taken reach into four figures.

Several villages have already been taken.

The drive was still on this afternoon.

Haig struck his blow early this morning, the climax to a whirl wind of artillery that for days has beat relentlessly, unceasingly on the German positions.

In all respects the blow impresses one as among the biggest, if not the biggest of all battles of the greatest of all wars.

The fighting is on an unprecedented scale of magnitude in men, munitions, guns and territory. At Zonnebeke alone three enemy divisions, a German division ordinarily contains 15,000 men—were ordered to attack and retake the ground they lost in the first staggering impact of the British blow.

The Germans—whole three divisions were caught in the British barrage. The terrific fire literally churned the poor devils into a bloody loblolly.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 4.—The Daily Express correspondent at Amsterdam writes that there is an increase of signs indicating that if Germany continues her present attitude on the question of peace popular feeling in Austria will force Vienna and Budapest cabinets to denounce an alliance with Germany and to try to secure as good peace for Austria alone as may be possible.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By John Grandens.)

BERLIN, via London, October 4.—Germany's old guard of Conservatives were apparently surprised to-day over the endorsement of Liberal sentiments contained in the speech of the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, Count Czernin, reiterating Austria's peace aims as contained in the reply to Pope Benedict. They apparently took comfort, however, in the assurance he voiced that Austria will not make a separate peace.

Berlin newspapers printed Czernin's speech without comment, although lack of editorials may have been due to the lack of time.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 4.—On the northern end of the Russian front in the region of Jacobstadt, an artillery duel of great severity is in progress.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

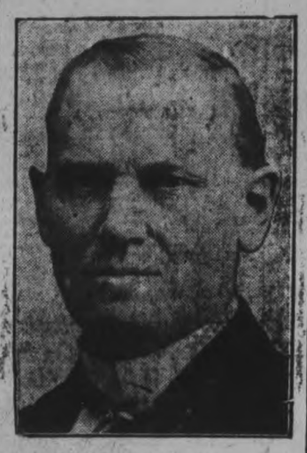
LONDON, October 4.—A successful raid by British airplanes on hostile positions on the Macedonian front is reported in an official statement from the War Office to-day. The statement says: "Our airplanes made a most successful raid on an extensive scale bombing the enemy's camps and dumps on the Belaschitza-Planina. Hostile troops were scattered by machine gun fire, and one of several enemy airplanes which attacked our formation was brought down. All our machines returned safely.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 4.—Another aerial raid over Germany was made last night by French aviators. The cities of Frankfort and Rastatt were bombed. Rastatt as a town of fourteen thousand in Baden. This is the second attack on Frankfort in the last week.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 4.—According to the Standard a policy of British reprisals for German air raids has been decided upon as intimated by Lloyd George yesterday.



FRANK B. CARVELL, M.P.,
Who is mentioned as the probable new leader of the Liberal party should Sir Wilfrid Laurier retire from the leadership.

TO-NIGHT'S MEETING

Dominion Secretary of the Great War Veteran's Association will be held—A Memorial for Peterboro's War Heroes

THE MAYOR TO PRESIDE

Once again the public is reminded of to-night's meeting in the Council Chamber to consider the question of providing a memorial for Peterborough's heroic dead in the form of a home for the Great War Veterans.

It is expected that the attendance will be both large and enthusiastic and it is hoped that all the women's patriotic organizations will be well represented. Mayor Duffus will be in the chair and Comrade Knight, of Ottawa, the Dominion Secretary of the Great War Veterans' Association, will be here to address the meeting.

The manner in which other cities are assisting the War Veterans is shown by the paragraph published in to-day's military news referring to the gift of an automobile from a number of little Brantford girls to the Brantford Veterans. There should be some of that spirit shown in Peterborough.

Make to-night's meeting the start of better days for Peterborough's War Veterans.

Big Gains Are Made

British Have Captured Broodseinde and Are Holding Position

Canadian Press Despatch,

British Headquarters in France and Belgium, Oct. 4.— (Bulletin.)— The British already have penetrated well beyond the hamlet of Broodseind, in which lie the cross roads formed by the highways between Zonnbecke and Moorsled, and Passchendaele and Beclare. Further to the south, Cameron Covert, where there had been much hard fighting was left in the rear to-day. The battle was along the strongholds which comprised the crucially important system of German defences along the Passchendaele-Cheluvelt ridge.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(Bulletin.)—General Maurice, chief director of the military operations, announced this afternoon that the British forces in their offensive this morning to the east of Ypres had captured the village of Broodseinde, and are holding it in the face of heavy counter attacks.

Both the first and second objectives on the ridges have been captured by the British, General Maurice said. The British gained all their objectives on a front of 160,000 yards, and to a depth of 2,500 yards. Prisoners are coming in much more rapidly and in greater numbers than in the last push.

GUTHRIE SWORN IN

Liberal Member for South Wellington Becomes Solicitor General in the Borden Government, Taking up His Duties At Once

TO-DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—Hugh Guthrie, M.P. for South Wellington, was sworn in at noon to-day as Solicitor-General in the Borden government in succession to Hon. Arthur Meighen, who is now Secretary of State. Mr. Guthrie will take up the duties of the office at once.

Strangely enough the new Solicitor-General was a candidate for the same position during the regime of the Laurier Government.

This is the first Liberal in active politics to secure a position in the Borden administration. Mr. Guthrie, however, is not a member of the Cabinet, as he was not sworn in as a Privy Councillor as his predecessor, Mr. Meighen, was, before him. The position carries with it an annual salary of $5,000.

A NEW ORIENTATION.

There is a new orientation at Ottawa. The unexpected developments regarding the Opposition leadership have compelled a temporary readjustment of political ideas and if carried further may involve new political strategy.

Pending a final decision on the part of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, which is not expected until some time next week, there will be considerable marking time. Meanwhile the announcement that the question of his retirement has actually been, and is still being considered, has given a pause to workers on both sides.

Hugh Guthrie of South Wellington, arrived in Ottawa this morning, looking fresh and debonair, and was of once called to Sir Robert Borden's office.

WESTERN VISITORS.

Hon. A. L. Sifton is here again today and it is expected that certain other western men will arrive later To-morrow there will eb a conference with intent upon further union. Immediate results are not expected. In this connection it cannot be denied that the new developments in the Liberal ranks may delay further arrangements. Eastern men may take the attitude that it will be better to await the results of the conference in which Sir Wilfrid is at present engaged.

A NEW ASPECT.

It is pointed out for instance that if Sir Wilfrid should decide to retire from the leadership an entirely new aspect would be put on affairs. Union might become easier or harder, according to the individual point of view. Western Liberals, for example, might take the attitude that if there is to be a new leader, Sir Robert had better wait and re-open negotiation with him. Sir Wilfrid is still leader of the Liberal party, however, and his retirement is still, to say the least, prospective. It is not in the least certain that the Liberal chief will retire from the leadership. His action will depend entirely upon the result of the next week's conferences in Montreal and Toronto, and upon the nature of the communication which he receives as a result of the announcement yesterday.

There is a very marked feeling of dissatisfaction in the Liberal circles at Ottawa at the very thought of Sir Wilfrid going out. The same feeling is reflected from his own province of Quebec. Sir Wilfrid will be guided by what he considers best for the party and the country at large.

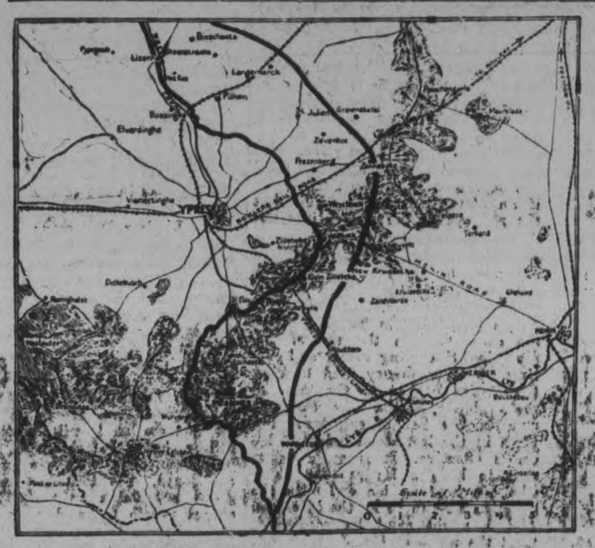
A RUSH FOR TICKETS FOR BIG SERIES

Canadian Press Despatch.

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.— Hundreds of fans who were among the fortunate ones to obtain reserve seats, gathered at the White Sox park early this morning for their tickets for the world's series. By noon four lines several hundred deep were before the windows. There was no evidence of the presence of scalpers.

Yet the fruit tree agent doesn't care to be known as a professional grafter.

INDIANS SCORN TO SEEK EXEMPTION FROM DRAFT



THE YPRES BATTLEFIELD.
The left hand black line shows the British front before the first offensive on June, 1917. The righ hand black line shows the Anglo-French front at the end of the fourth offensive th is week. Shaded portion shows the ridge which, from Messines to Pass chendaele, is the immediate British object. Another British offensive is under way to-day.

Grand Council at Yesterday's Session Defeated Resolution Suggesting That the Government Exclude Eligible Indians from the Operation of the Military Service Bill.

AGAIN ASK FOR FRANCHISE

WHAT THE INDIAN GRAND COUNCIL DID.

Defeated a resolution suggesting that the Indians be exempted from the military draft.

Decided to reappeal to Parliament for the extension of the franchise to the Indians of Ontario.

Appointed the Grand Council as a publicity committee, each member of which assumes the responsibility of conducting among the white people of his district a campaign to inform them of the needs of the Indians for their development.

Passed a resolution requesting Parliament to withdraw the three years' probation which an Indian must serve before obtaining the partial enfranchisement that is now open to him.

By rejecting the suggestion to seek exemption from the operation of the the Military Service Bill, the Grand Council of the Indians of Ontario gave new proof of their unfailing loyalty to the British Crown. They disdained to evade the sacrifice, their allegiance demands, and if their young men, of whom the war has already taken a disproportionate toll, are to be included in the approaching drafts they will be found ready and willing to serve. This is the voice of the Chippewas, speaking through their Chiefs. For the Indians assembled in the Grand Council at the Chemong reserve during the past three days were practically all of the Chippewa tribe, whose fidelity to Britain is a traditional pride, a trust to be preserved inviolate and a duty to be performed unquestioningly.

The Chippewa Chiefs and their assistant Councillors have no fear of the military draft. Their special session of the Grand Council was called to discuss its probable application to the Indian youth of Ontario, and if there were any doubts of the Indians' attitude toward the Military Service Bill, in the enactment of which they had no voice, yesterday's resolution effectively dispelled them. The Council refused to authorize its President to nominate a committee for the purpose of preparing a petition to Parliament requesting the exemption of Indians from the military draft. This action was unconditional, and if the white people (shog-nosh) could realize the yearning of the Indians (nish-shenaw-bah) for the privilege of voting they might appreciate the resignation of the Council in refraining from making their resolution contingent upon their enfranchisement. The Chippewas have assimilated many of the ideas of the white people, but apparently they scorn expedients. Perhaps they have so high a regard for the franchise that they prefer to wait in patience until it comes to them without coercion. For generations they have claimed the franchise as a right that has been withheld from them and to which they were entitled by the service they had rendered the country. And apart from their natural right they urge that their sacrifices in this war establish their claim beyond dispute.

A LINK WITH THE PAST

It was difficult to dissociate this Grand Council from the historic past

The local Medical Board established a new high record yesterday when at the three sessions they looked over no fewer than forty-nine men. One of these who failed in the eyesight test, was sent to an oculist for further examination. Of the others twenty-two or 55 per cent. were pronounced physically fit for the trenches, while twelve or 30 per cent. of those who presented themselves were rejected outright. Altogether, for the first three days of the examination, the rejected men totalled 26, or 23 per cent. of the total number examined.

There are two points in connection with the work of the Board which Major Cameron, the president, wishes the public to note. One of these is that the Board have orders to examine every man coming under Class I regardless of his physical condition, and regardless of whether or not he has been discharged from the army. The fact that a man is an invalid or a cripple does not exempt him from examination. He must present himself even if he has to come on crutches and the examination must be carried out in the usual way. It is well that the public should understand this, as some men obviously unfit for service, have thought that it was unnecessary for them to be examined. It is apparently the intention of the authorities to compile a complete medical census of all the men affected by Class I of the Military Service Act.

The second point is that men who have been in the army and have been discharged, must bring their discharge papers with them and present them to the Medical Board. This is important and must not be neglected.

Yesterday afternoon's session was the busiest yet, as seventeen candidates were examined.

At this morning's session there were seventeen candidates examined of which one was held over for a further test. Of the others eleven were found fit for the trenches and five were exempt altogether, their being no men placed in B or C categories.

MAY ATTEST AT ONCE.

Capt. G. H. Potts, of the Forestry and Railway Construction Regiment at Ottawa has arrived in the city and will open a recruiting office at the Armouries at once. This will give the young men who are placed in the A category a chance to enlist as volunteers and to pick the branch of the service they wish to join, and Captain Potts is authorized to take on recruits for any branch of the service, except for the artillery and engineers. Men in Class A who want to join the Forestry or Railway Construction units, Infantry, Army Service Corps, etc., have their choice until after the proclamation is issued. After that they undoubtedly will be put into the infantry when called to the colours. Captain Potts will be at the Armouries from now on and will be able to give all the necessary information.

Mr. W. H. Meharry, 42 Victoria avenue, has received the following particulars concerning the death of Pte. V. Meharry, familiary known as "Jun," late of the 93rd Battalion:

September 3, 1917.

Dear Mr. Meharry: You will no doubt have heard officially the terrible news of the death of your son, No. 196939, Pte. V. Meharry, on August 20th.

Words at such a time seem hopelessly inadequate either to express one's feelings or to convey sympathy. But you will at least be thankful to know that as his death was caused by the explosion of a big calibre enemy shell right by him, the concussion must have killed him absolutely painlessly and instantly. His body was quite unmangled, and his face unmarred. You will also be proud to know that he died a young hero in the performance of his duty. The O. C. of his company and all the officers spoke of him in the very highest and warmest of terms. They say he was the best and most fearlessly reliable

REPARATION.

Hon. E. P. Blondin, Postmaster-General, representing the disloyal Nationalist interests in the Borden Cabinet, has partially redeemed himself and purged his treason. A despatch states that a French-Canadian battalion, the 258th, raised and commanded by Lieut.-Colonel Blondin, marched through Montreal on Tuesday to the music of hearty popular cheers, to go into training quarters.

Postmaster-General Blondin, Nationalist, will complete his rehabilitation if he issues an order to give the protesting Peterborough "posties" the square deal in the matter of pay, on the principle of fair play and equal rights, for which his soldiers, Canadian soldiers, and those of the allies, are fighting. A good deal of allowance is to be made, however, if in the arduous pursuit of his activities in recruiting he has been compelled to neglect his official duties in the post office department. If he has found it hard work to raise a force of soldiers, and has overcome the difficulties, he has in part fulfilled the penalty of his Nationalist affinities and activities. The Nationalist doctrine, preached by himself, Bourassa and others, and officially encouraged and rewarded by the Borden Government, if it has not killed recruiting in Quebec, made it very steep, up-hill work, and Hon. Mr. Blondin in raising a battalion, by hard work, has at once achieved the penalty for his past, and credit for his present work.

The Brockville Ministerial Association has persuaded the Mayor and Aldermen of that town to go to prayer meeting once a month. The day of miracles is not past.

THE HYDRO AND ITS ENEMIES.

The vital principle of the Hydro-Electric System of Ontario is its completely municipal character and its fredom, in its essential workings, from political or even government control. But a situation has developed that threatens to destroy the usefulness of the Hydro Electric, and permit private corporations to become rivals of the Hydro Electric, and give them control of the streets of municipalities without their consent.

Parliament at its last session passed the bill to Amend and Consolidate the Railway Act. The bill contained a clause that protected municipalities in the control of their streets, and assured the full enjoyment of the Hydro Electric principle. This clause 374, sec. 3, reads—

"Notwithstanding anything contained in any special or other act or authority of the parliament of Canada or of the legislature of any province, the company shall not, except in this section provided, acquire, construct, maintain, or operate any works, machinery, plant, line, poles, tunnel, conduit or other device upon, along, across, or under any highway, square or other public place, within the limits of any city, town, village or township, without the consent of the municipality."

This clause passed the Commons, and hit certain big interests, as it prevented big corporations entering and taking possession of the streets of municipalities; as it meant that it would be necessary for the people to give their consent to any company coming into a municipality to carry on a power or electric railway business. With municipal Hydro Electric principle adopted in Ontario, no corporation, however, great, would stand much chance of breaking into a municipality and exploiting for dividends what the people wanted to enjoy without reference to the element of profits. This is the way the Guelph Mercury puts the matter:

"This clause hit the Toronto and Niagara Power Company, and that would not do. Many years ago, Parliament had unwittingly given this company very wide powers. * * * The Canadian courts held that these powers did not exist, but the English privy council, to which vested rights is a thing most sacred, overruled the finding of the highest Canadian power, and decided that the private concerns were within their rights in going in and exploiting for dividends what the people wanted for use without profit."

The clause of the amended railway Act, preventing corporations seizing upon the streets of a municipality, in the municipality itself, after bitter opposition, passed the House of Commons, to be slaughtered in the Senate, with a party majority, in the "interests of the big interests." Sir Robert Borden, though his government had only a borrowed life, by virtue of an outlawed parliament, filled the Senate with his own followers to the point of securing party control of it, and of course the "big interests" triumphed. The body that could endorse the Canadian Northern "deal," in the interests of the "big interests," ran true to form and it turned down the revised railway act that protected the humble municipality against the inroads of the "big interests."

This action of the Senate, as things now stand, gives the Hydro Electric a body blow. Public spirited men in Ontario, without regard to party — Conservatives and Liberals — fought shoulder to shoulder to establish the Hydro Electric system in the peoples' interests—under municipal control, free from party influence. Now party influence, in the shape of the Senate, has destroyed the essential character of the Hydro Electric—supremacy of municipal control — the right of the people to do as they like with their own. The Mercury puts the situation in these words—

"The Hydro interests now realize that it is up to them to fight—fight as they have never done before. Unless they do so their whole work is going to fall in a heap, or else be made useless and ineffective. And they want to put a strong and fearless Hydro man in the Senate, for if an attempt is to be made that the projects of the Hydro interests are to be assassinated there, it is necessary that an out and out Hydro champion be there to present the case and see it through to prevent these assassinations. As the Mercury's informant in Toronto stated the case, 'What's the use of the municipalities going ahead and putting up their money, and backing the Hydro project to the limit of their ability, if the Big Interests men in the Senate can knife the work in the last stage before it becomes effective. It is quite necessary to have a Hydro man there who can hold up his end with the lobbyists sent there by the interests. And I might say,' he concluded, 'that the name of Mr. J. W. Lyon, of your city, is mentioned as being the most capable man for that position.'"

Appointing Mr. Lyon of Guelph, to the Senate might help. He is a Conservative, it is understood, but he is a staunch friend of the Hydro Electric, and would not be influenced to play the party hack, and join with the Government majority in the Senate to destroy it or maim it fatally. But he would be only one out of 81—he would be as a "voice crying in the wilderness." He could only give his moral support; and moral strength in face of the immoral influence of the "big interests," and the power of the "big interests," is practical weakness.

The better way would be to substitute another government for the Borden government, which bows down and worships the "big interests"—is so under their influence and control that the Senate becomes their creature when their interests are concerned.

There should be no room in any community for any child of any race to grow up neglected in body or mind or morals.

"runner" they had, and most deeply regret his loss. No boy could have earned the real affection of both officers and men as he had—as well as their trust—except by real, sterling depth of character.

Surely such a sacrifice as his cannot have been in vain, but has been accepted and united with that of our Saviour Jesus Christ, in whom and with whom he is now living, growing and developing that splendid young personality and character from more to more "unto the perfect man."

I buried him in a little cemetery near Loos (Harts Crater) and though still in the line his comrades contrived to cut a beautiful little memorial stone out of white chalk stone, with a cross, R.I.P., his name, etc., cut out in it. This they reverently placed on his grave as they passed out to the rear.

My prayer for you and Mrs. Meharry is that the beautiful words of Newman's hymn may be the most vital truth to you as the result of living experience:

"So long Thy power has blessed me, sure it still,
Will lead me on,
O'er moss and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone;
And with the morn, those angel graces smile
Which I have loved long since, and lost a while."

In deepest, prayerful sympathy,
Yours faithfully,

British Battle Losses Show She Bears Her Share Of Fighting

Britain's battle losses show—Ep 2 col

British losses for September, according to official figures, totalled 104,598. Germans have inspired, and some in Canada and the United States have heeded, the malevolent lie that Britain shirked the battle-front, that Englishmen were willing to fight to the last Frenchman, that Britain rushed war bonds while her Allies rushed men to the front. Let September's list of casualties make answer. In that month alone Britain has sacrificed more men than Canada has had on the firing line at any single time since the beginning of the war, as many men as Canada has lost from the day that Canadians first faced German fire until the present.

We have heard a great deal on this continent about the achievements of Australian and Canadians. We have not heard so much about the achievements of Englishmen and Irishmen and Scotchmen and Welshmen. We have had drummed into our ears the Canadians did at Ypres and Vimy. We have heard much less of what the British did at Mons, at the first battle of Ypres, on Gallipoli, on the Somme, and in other mighty battles in France and Flanders. There were no Canadians in that terrible retirement from Mons where the Gordons and the Munsters and the other "Glorious Contemptibles" first taught the Prussians that Britons would rather be acquainted with death than fear. There were no Canadians present in that first struggle at Ypres, where the thin, decimated line of the immortal Guards held back overwhelming numbers of Germany's best and blocked the road to Calais. It was a British division—the heroic 29th—that walked into the teeth of death in the first landing at Seddel Bahr. British battalions bore the brunt of the battle and sustained the heaviest losses in the bloody conflict at Suvla. And it was a British division—the 30th from Ulster—that led the van of the attack on that July morning when the Empire struck out on the Somme. And so from the beginning to the end of the chapter.

The truth is that Britain, who entered this war for no selfish reason, but to maintain ordered liberty in the world, has borne her share of the burden and will bear an increasingly heavy share until Germany is crushed. To-day her sons are falling at the staggering rate of one million a year.

And the question for Canadians to-day is not whether we are doing more than our proportion of the fighting, but as to how long the battle flag of the Empire can retain its place under such terrible wastage without adequate reinforcements being assured. Our kith and kin beyond the seas are pouring out their blood as water. Shall we here in Canada be guilty of base and cowardly desertion by slinking from the field?—Ottawa Journal.

In to-day's official casualty list appears the name of Pte. C. E. Hume, of Acton, Ont., reported killed in action. His number 195342 would indicate that he was a member of the 93rd Battalion, but the nominal role of the Peterborough County Battalion does not contain the name of Hume, while 195342 is the regimental number of a soldier with quite a different name, so that it is evident that there is a mistake in the official list.

The Lindsay Post says:

In connection with the Medical Board which has been appointed in Lindsay in connection with the enforcement of the Military Service Act there is a report in circulation that Lindsay may also be made a mobolization centre.

This is hardly possible. Only two thousand men are required from Military District No. 3 and if a mobolization centre is to be selected for this section it will, military men believe, be at Peterborough.

In connection with the local Medical Board, the Post has not been given permission to make its personnel public for a day or two. It might be mentioned, however, that it will be made of two local physicians and a member from Kingston who will explain all the details in connection with the work, which the Board is expected to perform.

The Board will be ready to commence work in a few days.

The Kingston Standard says:

The local medical board has been examining men called under the Military Service Act for over a week now and 160 men have been examined. Of these 65 per cent. or about 90 have been found fit and are in class A. The percentage of some of the large cities is as follows: Montreal, 70 per cent.; Toronto, 70 per cent.; Winnipeg, 80 per cent.; Calgary, 65 per cent.; Kingston, 65 per cent. While the Government is anxious to issue the initial call as early as possible, it is unlikely that it will be October 10th, and has been reported. The appointment of the various exemption tribunals is an essential precedent to the calling of the first class which is to be selected from men who have not secured from such tribunals certificates of exemption. The best opinion in Ottawa is that the first call will come on October 15th. Working at high pressure it can scarcely be possible that even the first thirty thousand men from the whole Dominion can be all in khaki before the end of December. No announcement has yet been made by the Government as to its intentions, but present indications are that the draftees will not be drilling much before January 1st, 1918.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 3.—One of the most acceptable gifts yet made to the local branch of the Great War Veteran's Association was received to-day in the form of an automobile, the donation of the Kitchener Club, a group of some twelve small girls, who through entertainments of various natures have from time to time contributed generously to patriotic causes here.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Davidson, 169 Charlotte street, have received word that their son, Driver Adam Davidson, of the Ammunition Column, 2nd Division will arrive home this evening.

ACTION AGAINST KAISER BY PRUSSIAN PRINCE.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The action brought by Prince Friedrich Leopold of Prussia against Emperor William and Count von Eulenburg, Prussian Minister of the Household, as a protest against the restraint placed upon the prince, came before a secret court at Potsdam on Tuesday, according to an Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. All efforts made to force the prince to renounce the action proved abortive. The decision of the court will not be published.

According to an announcement made in the Official Gazette at Berlin, on August 10, Prince Friedrich Leopold of Prussia, who is twenty-two years old, was charged by Count von Eulenburg with extravagance and was placed under the guardianship of Captain von Heyden, the prince's military escort.

"FRIENDS OF PEACE" FINANCED BY ENEMY, COMES REVELATION

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.— J. J. Tobias, chancellor of the Chicago Law School, once leader of the League of Peace, an organization at one time actively furthering peace talk, told of having received an offer of $30,000 to work for an embargo, on munitions, and to influence sentiment in this country for peace with Germany. The offer, he said, came from a man calling himself E. J. Thyme, a banker of Stockholm, Sweden.

The $2,400 with which the convention of the Friends of Peace, September 6, 1917, was financed, also was raised by 25 local Germans and German-Americans, according to Dr. Tobias, and the money which supplied funds for the organization's mail propaganda came from the German committee in New York, he said.

Dr. Tobias said he became suspicious, and withdrew from activity in the organization when he was convinced it was becoming pro-German.

STOP HUNGER STRIKE

PARIS, Oct. 4.—The authorities have apparently carried out their decision to feed forcibly Bolo Pasha, who since he was taken to prison recently on the charge of having relations with the enemy, had refused all nourishment. It was believed he was undertaking a hunger strike, but a bulletin issued this morning respecting his condition says he has improved, that his general condition is good and also that he has taken sufficient milk and vichy to allow the prosecuting judge to interrogate him.

It wouldn't be so bad if your sins would not tell on you after finding you out.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

ITALIANS WON THEIR VICTORY TO MUSIC.

Advances Made While Toscanini, Famous Conductor, Leads Band Under Fire.

Arthur Toscanini, the noted Italian conductor, for several years up to 1915 musical director of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, has been decorated by the Italian Government for great bravery under fire. Signor Toscanini, the accounts from the front disclose, kept his military band playing during the battle of Monte Santo in the present offensive on the Italian front, the soldiers storming the positions of the enemy to the strains of this martial music.

Toscanini Leads Band While Battle Rages.

In the midst of the fighting and at a time when the Austrian barrage fire was at its height, Signor Toscanini led his band to one of the advanced positions where, sheltered only by a huge rock, he conducted a concert which did not stop until word had been brought to him that the Italian soldiers had stormed and taken the trenches of the Austrians to the music of his band. For his gallantry under fire he was presented with a silver medal, which is inscribed with a suitable engraving.

The Italian soldiery stormed the enemy positions, a thunder of guns filling the air. Gray green uniforms, blending with the landscape, advanced steadily and by rushes upon the Austrian trenches,—and the band played on. Far forward, sheltered from the barrage fire only by a great rock, musicians blared forth military music, while the shoulders of Signor Toscanini moved expressively up and down and the baton in his fingers described isosceles triangles melting into squares, trapezoids, rhomboids and pentagons.

The band played on. No burst of shrapnel deafened the leader. Above the din of battle taking place a quarter of a mile away, he gallantly led the band.

Music's Contribution to Successful Warfare.

What Signor Toscanini did in pulling together and sustaining the morale of the Italian army was as important a factor to the victory in the advances as were the carefully calculated military tactics of the commanding general. Music, — the stimulating, encouraging, enervating strains of melody,—came to the fore and performed its herculean task under fire.

The contribution of music, led by Toscanini's baton, to this particular military victory cannot be overcalculated. Perhaps if the soldiers had not been heartened by martial strains, they would have lost their mental grip, and the moral fibre would perhaps have snapped at the very moment when cool deliberation, splendid "esprit de corps," and an indomitable will to conquer were vital to success. The task of having been the cause of these stirring accomplishments we must then attribute to music, and pay our homage appreciatively to this powerful yet unobtrusive force of the world.

Thus every day brings additional evidence of the important part music is taking in the war. It has been shown to be indispensable in relieving the tension of the soldiers in the trenches, and a source of inspiration at the training camps. Now the latest military despatches disclose that it has been used to great advantage in the actual leading and sustaining of a charge.

BEETHOVEN A REPUBLICAN.

Musically and Politically Opposed to Military Madness.

Beethoven was a long way from the acceptance of the divine right of kings, or any other part of the Junker creed of modern Germany. He was above everything else a republican, not alone as a musician, but also in his political views. He had a high admiration for Napoleon Bonaparte because by his genius he had been able to enforce respect for the new French Republic amongst the surrounding nations. Therefore he dedicated his Eroica Symphony to Napoleon, who undoubtedly was the inspiration for that majestic and radiant composition. But the time came when Napoleon assumed the purple, when the Directory blossomed into an Empire with Bonaparte as "Emperor of the French." Beethoven tore the dedication from his manuscript and wrote at the head of the slow movement of that Symphony "To the memory of a great man." The biographers of the great symphonist record a rebuke which Beethoven once gave his brother. The brother, calling upon him, left a card reading 'Johann Beethoven, Man of Property." Ludwig sent his own card back with this inscription, "Ludwig von Beethoven, Man of Brains."

Any partisan of the Allies can play Beethoven's music to-day with a clear conscience, knowing that the Master of Bonn and Vienna had a taste for freedom, an appreciation of personal worth, and a pronounced distaste for the militarist madness which has plunged the world into a shamble.

MAKING TALKING MACHINE RECORDS.

A Nerve Racking Ordeal.

All the great artists who have sung for the reproduction of their voices have been impressed by the exacting nature of the task. Concert singing may get to be a habit to such an extent that it may make no savage demand upon the nervous system. But before the recording horn the singer becomes self-conscious. He misses the support of an audience interested and attentive and he is so keen to make every tone correct that he may "fall down." Mr. George Hamlin, the eminent Chicago tenor, has been telling the Musical Leader of his experiences. He says: The records are made in a large room with little furnishing save seats or benches, some high, some low, on which the members of the orchestra sit. The instrumentalists are arranged in such a way that those in the rear are raised considerably above the others, so that all instruments may be practically equi-distant from the recording horns. These horns connect with an instrument in an adjoining but separate room. No one is admitted into the receiving room, not even the artist. The singer stands about a foot from the recording horn and sings in his customary manner—if he can! It is not easy. He must always bear in mind that when singing a very high or loud tone he must draw back slightly from the horn or the result will be poor. First, the song is tried over with the orchestra to settle the question of proper tempo, phrasing, etc. Then a test record is made which is at once played back from the recording machine to the singer. When all seems satisfactory several records are made of each selection so that a choice can be made and the best record retained. After the singer has recorded three or four songs he feels that he has done a good day's work.

Mr. Hamlin, continuing, explains the great responsibility resting upon everyone concerned, on each member of the orchestra as well as upon the singer. The slightest error which in a concert might never be noticed is indelibly set down and becomes more offensive with each repetition. Thus the record would be rendered worthless. After the records are made they are given a thorough mechanical test before they finally reach the market. There the talking machine owner can rest assured that when some great artist sings for him he is probably getting a better performance of the work in question than he would hear from the concert platform.

Sydney, 10,120 miles from London as the crow flies, is the most distant large town from England.

It has been noticed that hailstorms rarely do damage in thickly wooded parts of the country.

LETTER FROM LIEUT J. A. NEW

A letter has been received from Lieut. J. A. New which in part reads as follows:—

"After divers further adventures I am pleased to be able to say I am whole and well so far. I have just been made town major of a certain military area and am glad of the respite from the line. Things are hot nowadays and the physical and mental fatigue test human endurance to the limit. I am messing with a unit to which Birnie of Peterborough is attached. Birnie was with R. R. Celebrated Wedding Anniversary

To celebrate the occasion of the anniversary of their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sands invited a large number of their friends to participate in the festivity of a social evening whereby they received many congratulations and little remembrances of the event in gifts of various articles too numerous to mention. During the evening the company was entertained by a party of musical friends who during the proceedings, gave selections on various instruments to the dancing, songs and games throughout. After all having spent a very pleasant evening they ended up in the usual fashion by giving thanks to the happy couple.

HOW TO BUY

Go to the store yourself.

Select for yourself the article you desire to purchase. Inquire its price.

If quality and price please you, be sure that you get in weight or measure the amount you buy. Watch the scale. Watch the measure.

You are entitled to all the bone and the trimmings of the piece of meat that you buy. You should take home and make use of such bone and trimmings. The fat can be rendered and used for cooking purposes; the bone and trimmings used for soup or stew. When the trimmings are not taken home, the butcher throws them into a box under the counter and sells them to someone else. They belong to you and you should have them.

In buying meat, don't go in and ask for 25c. worth of meat, and leave the butcher to decide how much meat you should have for a quarter. Select your piece of meat, ask the price per pound; say how many pounds you want; have it weighed; see that you get your weight and that the butcher's calculation as to how much meat you have, at a certain price per pound, is correct. Many a penny is lost to the customer by neglecting the above simple precautions.

Don't buy in small quantities if you can possibly avoid it. Buy for cash and buy in large quantities foods that are not perishable. Buy where you can do the best.

Wherever possible buy in bulk and not in package.

You will find it cheaper to buy your vinegar by the gallon than by the bottle.

Have you ever stopped to figure out how much more you would get for your money if you bought certain articles of food by the pound instead of by the package?

Food that is wrapped and sold in attractive-looking packages must of necessity cost more than the same food sold in bulk, which means sold by the pound. There are several reasons why so many foods are put up in packages.

First. The package looks pretty, appeals to the eye, and makes the food seem more appetizing.

Second. Most of the packages are air-tight and dustproof, and for sanitary reasons a great many people prefer food that is done up in packages.

As a matter of fact, it is possible for your grocer to keep on hand, in bulk, exactly the same foods as the packages contain, and it is also possible for him to keep them in bulk in sanitary, dustproof containers, so that the foods should be clean when they get to you.

FROM the thousands of slight women we have corseted we know that the tall, slender woman has a distinct corset problem. Until SPECIAL GOSSARD CORSETS were designed for slender figures, these women had no choice. They were fitted to heavily boned corsets. The only redeeming feature of these corsets was that they came in 18, 19 and 20 sizes—small enough but that was all.

Now, there are many Gossard corsets especially designed for this type, light in weight, skillfully fashioned to round the figure, conceal the hip bones and accent the long, graceful body lines.

Among Corsets the "Gossard" Is Renowned for Its Good Style

The selection of a Corset is just as important as the choosing of a gown, and the attainment of a superb and perfect fit is an easy matter in these days of scientific corseting. The "Gossard" is shown in various designs and is modelled with a view to retaining the natural lines of the figure, yet giving the fashionable contour.

A FEW OF THE MODELS ARE DESCRIBED BELOW.

Some of the garments are boned to give additional support to the bust or back. Every Gossard will smooth out the line at the top of the corset, contain the bust in well rounded lines and support the back.

There is a Gossard Brassiere for every occasion and for every taste.

THE SHORT SLIGHT WOMAN will find in many GOSSARDS designed for her figure a priceless comfort in the free modelling of the hips and the light pliable materials with only enough boning to gently round the figure to that graceful side silhouette so difficult for the slight woman to attain. The waistline is perfected and the bust line given the appearance of more fullness.

In a Gossard you are never conscious of your corset; it supports without restriction and gives you the delight of unrestrained movement.

OUR EXPERIENCED CORSETIERE, who is well-known to the patrons of our corset department, will be pleased to furnish you with all the detailed information of the different models. If you are purchasing a NEW CORSET our corsetiere will fit you to the model that was made for your particular figure. She will also give you valuable advice in the matter of adjusting and lacing the model you select. Appointments for fitting may be made by telephoning No. 1780 Corsetiere.

CURVED back figures should use the utmost care in their corseting, for improper corseting is generally the cause of this type.

The corset must be corrective, reducing the lower back perceptibly, yet must accomplish this without any undue pressure and restraint.

GOSSARD CORSETS have always been famed for the beautiful back line they give the wearer.

Models to enrich the arched back have been designed, and these will achieve that flat, distinctive back that has beeen the delight of the leading corsetieres of both Continents.

NOWHERE in the famous Gossard line does the unequalled skill and experience of the designers show to better advantage than in the remarkable CORSETS DESIGNED for the TALL, HEAVY WOMAN.

The weight of this type of figure is seldom equally distributed, much of it being at the shoulders, lower back, thighs, diaphragm, and abdomen.

Skillfully the special Gossards distribute this flesh, supporting the bust and full abdomen, reducing the hip line, and gently molding the entire figure to slighter lines, giving the appearance of greatly reduced weight. And all this is scientifically done without the slightest sacrifice of comfort.

POLICE FOUND $75 DIAMOND RING ON PRISONER'S LITTLE TOE

J. D. Carrold Sentenced to One Year at Guelph Farm By Police Magistrate Dumble This Morning For Theft From E. V. Warne and A. W. Cressman & Son, Ltd.

On each of two charges of theft T. D. Carrold was sentenced by Police Magistrate Dumble, this morning, to one year at the Guelph prison farm, the terms to run concurrently. He pleaded guilty to breaking into the A. W. Cressman store, and stealing from the Men's Department a suit and overcoat worth $25, and on September 15th obtained a diamond ring worth $75 from Mr. E. V. Warne by passing a worthless cheque.

Mr. E. V. McElderry appeared for Carrold, who, he said, deserved consideration. He had served twenty-two months overseas, where he had been shellshocked and discharged. He re-enlisted at Barriefield, but was released because of defective eyesight. He then came to Peterborough where he tried to get work, but was refused everywhere.

When Carrold was examined by the police after being brought back from Belleville the diamond ring was found on his toe.

What Causes Wrinkles? What's The Remedy?

Stop to consider what produces wrinkles and sagginess of skin. Premature aging, mal-nutrition, etc., cause the flesh to shrink, lose its youthful plumpness and firmness. The skin then is too large for the flesh underneath; doesn't fit tightly and snugly as it used to—it wrinkles or sags.

It must be plain that to tighten the skin, make it fit the face perfectly in every place, will effectually remove the hateful wrinkles and bagginess. This is easily, and harmlessly accompanied by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel and using the solution as a face wash. The ingredients you can get at any drug store. The results are surprising. The skin immediately tightens up, becoming firm and fresh as in youth. Every wrinkle and sag is affected at once.

Shell Inspector Had Narrow Escape From Death at the Henry Hope Plant

James Anglesey, a shell inspector at the Henry Hope Munition Works, had a narrow escape from death by electrocution at 12.45 last night. In the process of inspection, Mr. Anglesey placed an electeric light inside each shell, and in doing so a short circuit was made by a defective wire, giving Mr. Anglesey an almost fatal shock.

Chief Grange was telephoned for at 12.45, and within a very few minutes had the pulmotor at work on the man, who was practically dead. He was speedily revived, and Dr. Harvey, who was called, took him home, both legs still paralyzed from the shock. AN APPEAL FOR THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

Mr. Joseph Wearing Asks For a Generous Contribution For This Most Worthy Object on Saturday

WORK IN GOOD SHAPE

Peterborough, Oct 3rd, 1917.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I wish to commend to the general public the work of the Children's Aid Society and also to make a personal appeal for a generous contribution on Tag Day this coming Saturday.

Those who have been connected with the Society for many years state that the work was never in better shape than it is right now. The Shelter is in charge of a most efficient and satisfactory Superintendent and a visit on the part of those interested in children would be well worth while. The agent of the Society is also a most capable and conscientious man, and he is making it his daily business to improve the conditions of homes in the city and county where little children are being raised under unfavourable conditions.

Altogether there is no object more worthy of support than of caring for little children who are unable to do anything for themselves. A number of men and women of the city and county devote a great deal of time each month free of charge to this work. The Agent and the Superintendent of the Shelter are the only ones who receive any remuneration. Those of us who are closely in touch with the work look with confidence to the public generally to be generous when the opportunity comes next Saturday to help improve the condition and environment of neglected children in our vicinity.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WEARING.

WHY ARMY IS LIKE A CIRCUS

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—An army in the field has been compared with a circus travelling about the country. The comparison is a rough and ready one but, according to military officers back from the front, it suffices to show certain essential features of the fighting force.

One is that a large number of men are needed to look after the transportation and care of equipment, to cook the meals and put up the tents, etc., while the number of actual performers is comparatively few. Many more work outside the ring than in it.

The army has many disadvantages, however, from which the circus does not suffer. It has to build its own railroads, as a rule, run them and keep them in repair, while it must also bring in with it nearly all the food and other supplies it needs. It must be braced also for a constantly increasing burden of casualties, requiring special care and comfort, and in modern war the big guns consume vast quantities of shells daily which must be replaced immediately.

Ever noticed the number of men who are engaged to keep the circus in running order? If you have, you may be able better to understand why an army needs thousands of men behind the lines. A-7.

Tomato Crop At Blenheim Will Be Complete Failure

BLENHEIM, Oct. 4.—Prospects for canning tomatoes here this year are very poor. The plants set out late and so far the yield of ripe tomatoes has been very small; in fact, the year's yield is considered almost a complete failure. There are quite a few bushels of green fruit still on the vines, but the ripening process is very slow and the season so late that little is expected. So far very few cases have been put up.

A large quantity of pears is being canned. Over a hundred tons are being imported from New York State and from Delaware, and the factory is working with a large force in putting them up.

Indications are that canned tomatoes will be very high this winter, as reports come in that very few are being canned in Ontario.

Many farmers in this section are anxious regarding the outcome of their bean crop. Some have good showing if the frost stays away for a few weeks and good weather prevails. This is a very extensive bean-growing district, and this year had they been able to harvest their crop, a good yield would be like a gold mine at the prevailing prices. On some of the mucky lands beans have already been frosted and some fields injured considerably, but there are quite a number which have not suffered. Harvesting of the early sowing has begun, and the yield from these is not considered very good.

Our idea of a nuisance is a man who butts in when we are talking about ourselves.

Our idea of a hypocrite is a man who really admires his mother-in-law but is too contrary to admit the fact.

of which it seemed but an episode under the spell of the ancestral language of the Chiefs. Some of them with deep guttural voices rumbled their speech, but the shadow of other days and other ways vanished with the familiar English that was sometimes employed. And if the misty records of long forgotten Councils could be explored or the traditions of even earlier times recalled, they could produce few incidents worthier of a proud, old race than yesterday's resolution, discussed and passed independent of the subsequent appeal for a voice in the government of the country they loyally serve, which was once theirs by the natural right of possession and in which they receive but scant consideration to-day.

A CREDIT TO OUR PEOPLE

Commenting in English upon the Council's rejection of the first and principal resolution, President Jacobs said: "You have very nobly defeated the resolution to exempt Indians from the Military Service Bill. That will always be a credit to our people."

Practically every delegate discussed the question of the military draft law during the debate which continued throughout Wednesday morning. Almost every address was in Chippewa and was followed closely by the audience which packed the rather large assembly hall. A few women were present and a number of visitors from other reserves, but only the qualified delegates participated in the deliberations of the Council.

Elijah Manass, Chief of Sarnia reserve opened the discussion by pointing out that the military bill included all British subjects and apparently applied to Indians. Peter Crow of Alderville, Chief Megis, of Parry Sound and Chief Jones of Cape Croken followed.

Chief Whetung of Chemong, pointed out that the Indians had no voice in the country's affairs. In any case there should be no exemption claims at least until the Indians learned definitely that they were included.

Rev. Simpson Brigham, of Walpole Island stated that 70 per cent. of the best manhood of his community had voluntarily enlisted. How can we be exempted unless we can find treaties showing that the Indians would never be asked to fight for Britain?

We can't break the law, said Dave Simcoe, of Rama. When the South African war broke out the Six Nations offered to send volunteers, but were refused. Again in 1914 they made their offer and this time it was accepted. It is law now, he stated, referring to the participation of Indians in the Empire's war.

And thus the morning rolled on until lunch following which President Jacobs closed the discussion and called for the vote of the Council The proposal, simply to name a committee to draft a petition for the exemption of Indians, was defeated by a large majority.

THE PETITION FOR THT FRANCHISE.

"Many of the white people are unaware of the fact that the Indians haven't the vote," said the President. "We should inform them of this, and show them why we are entitled to it. We pay for the upkeep of our roads and bridges and pay various taxes to the Government."

Scobie Logen, of Lower Muncie, pointed out that Indians paid the tobacco and other taxes. He recalled the time when Sir John A. McDonald gave the Indians the franchise which they enjoyed for twelve years. "It uplifted the Indians," he asserted. "Our young men to-day would take a deeper interest in public matters and would mix more with the white people."

"The President told you that 1,500 of our choicest young men had gone to the front. My boy was the first Indian to enlist in the Dominion of Canada. Many parents know what it is to lose a son. My boy was killed in the second battle of Ypres. I offered to go myself, but was turned down. If I could get the range on a few Fritzs they could get ready for the happy hunting ground. We parents have made some sacrifice in the loss of our boys. The British Empire and the Allies are trying to put down autocracy. We want our democracy to be the fairest in the world, and if we assist the government by sending our young men to take part in this war we should fully share in that democracy."

Conscription was not passed for the Indians. I believe that six or seven thousand of our men are in the Canadian armies. We have done more than our share. A Province that has two and a half million people failed to send its proportion. That's why Conscription was necessary.

A "GRIT" INDIAN.

George Goose of Scugog stated that he was refused work on a government wharf last summer simply because he was an Indian and had no vote. His opinion of the Conservative Government had been soured by the experience which has given George a "Grit" slant if he could only apply it.

Soured at Department.

"The Indian Department has us under their feet," said young Chief Whetung, "and they have pretty big feet. Our Council have asked favours for 46 years, and the only answers they get were 'This question will receive careful consideration.' We don't seem to be able to accomplish anything, and simply because we have no vote. If we tendered for a mail delivery contract we couldn't get it because we have no vote, and so can't do any harm to the members. We know we are capable of the duties of the franchise, and we must keep on telling the Government."

Chief Whetung touched a sore spot when he mentioned the Indian Department of the Gttawa Government. The Chiefs related their ineffectual attempts to secure redress of grievances that have been embodied in resolutions at practically every Grand Council for forty-six years. Their repeated failures have broken their patience, and they have come to regard the Indian Department as unsympathetic, if not unfriendly, to their desires and their ambitions, a sort of blind alley in which they grope in vain for a way out to equality with the white men.

No Sign of Action.

Henry Jackson, the assistant secretary of the Council, who a few years ago was a prominent long distance runner at Sunderville, stated that Parliament had closed the longest session in the history of Canada, but there had not been a single word of enfranchising the Indians. He added that the Council had a letter from the Department to the effect that it did not contemplate any amendment to the Indian laws. Our methods are not strong enough, said Jackson, who said he was discouraged.

"A young man shouldn't get discouraged," counselled the President. "I've been at it for 42 years, and if I live that long I'll keep at it for the next 40 years."

David Minominie, of Pary Island, said he appreciated the privileges the Indians enjoyed, but he wanted a voice in the Government.

A Splendid Address.

An eloquent address by the Rev. Simpson Brigham, of St. John's Rectory, Walpole Island, indicated the new methods the Indians propose to pursue in their efforts to obtain the franchise. A stalwart Indian with a rich musical voice and commanding presence, he dominated the Wednesday sessions. He spoke first in excellent English, repeated his speech in his native Chippewa, and received an ovation at his conclusion.

"There are sufficient people in Ontario," he said, "who believe in the equity of our plea and who, I am convinced, desire that we receive fair play. I believe that in the soul of the Ontario electors there is a broad spirit of justice that will give us what we demand. There are many Christian people in this province who will be moved by a campaign of education if we undertake it. The poor white people should be helped to understand the true status of the Indian. We, the real owners of this continent, are denied the right to vote. Why? I don't know. The Government doesn't know. It is not thinkable that white leaders could take our voters as cattle or lok upon us as chattels.

"We must educate the electors of Ontario, show them that we are qualified for the franchise, and they will in turn advocate that justice be done the Indians. They will see that the Government of Canada shall not be slow to give the Indians their rights. The mere politician has been the curse of our race, and we must reach out to the better class of white man. And as he believes that Belgium has been wronged, he will see that he has been unjust to us through all these years, and I am sure he will not be slow to make proper reparation."

The address of this Indian clergyman of the Anglican Church was a rare treat, and it is an empty compliment to the Indian delegates to say that they are far more worthy of the franchise than thousands of the whites, both of native and foreign parentage.

Chief Yorke, of Rama, believed that the Grand Council should meet more frequently than every two years. In the interim the interest aroused gradually lapsed and the influence of the Council was for the most part lost. He suggested that the appeals to the Government should be warmer, and told the story of the calf that wouldn't move until its owner lighted a fire under it. This illustration tickled many of the delegates.

Franchise Resolution.

The following resolution was passed toward the close of the afternoon session:

"Moved by Rev. S. A. Brigham, seconded by Peter Crowe, that we, the Grand General Indian Council of Ontario, in special session, assembled in view of the fact that many of our fellow-Indians have given themselves for the defence of His Majesty's Empire, and many of them have made the supreme sacrifice, humbly pray the Government of Canada—

"1. To grant the franchise to the Indians of Ontario.

"2. To simplify the legislation governing the enfranchisement of Indians that any competent Indian applying for enfranchisement shall forthwith be enfranchised without the three years' probation period."

Object to Probation.

An Indian may obtain a limited enfranchisement to-day on the recommendation of a judge, minister or magistrate. His application is sent to the Indian Department, but he must wait three years before he is finally accepted by the Department. He does not receive the right to vote but may bequeath his property, although he cannot sell it. This probation period is looked upon as a hardship, and the Indians demand that it be withdrawn.

Publicity Agents.

John Lake, of Alderville, moved, seconded by Chief Manass, that every delegate be appointed a publicity agent for the Indian cause.

This resolution was carried unanimously.

"My experience has been that it is useless to present petitions to the Indian Department. Let us prosecute a vigorous educational campaign. Go to the localities around the reservations, use the press, give lectures and generally disseminate information letting the electors of Ontario know what we want." This was Rev. Mr. Bingham's advice, and President Jacobs told how in his lodge at Sarnia he never missed an opportunity to speak in behalf of the Indians.

Chief Whetung moved, seconded by Henry Cowie, that the franchise resolutions be printed and distributed to the members of Parliament for constituencies near the Ontario reserves.

MANY SIDED RALPH CONNOR

The author of the books, "The Sky Pilot" and "Black Rock," from both of which the play "The Sky Pilot," has been taken, is a distinguished individual in more ways than one. In strictly private life he is plain Charles W. Gordon. In a ministerial capaciay he is Rev. Charles W. Gordon, D. D., pastor of St. Stephen's Presbyterian church, in Winnipeg, Manitoba. In military life he is Major Charles W. Gordon of the Canadian Highlanders, with a record of active service in France. In the literary world he is Ralph Connor, under whose "nom de plume" he has endeared himself to millions of readers of his popular stories.

The Sky Pilot" will be seen in this city at the Grand Opera House, on Thanksgiving Day, October 8th, for two performances. The regular reserved seat sale opens at the box office to-morrow (Friday) morning.

Capt. Blanchard Is Very Ill in Toronto

Local Officer Who Returned From Overseas Last Week is Now in the Base Military Hospital

His many friends will be sorry to learn that Capt W. H. Blanchard, V.S., of Peterborough, who has been overseas since early in the war with the British Army Veteran Corps, is very seriously ill in the Base Hospital in Toronto. Capt. Blanchard was taken ill with throat trouble, while on active service and was invalided to England. His condition failed to improve and finally it was decided to send him back to Canada.

He arrived at Halifax on Tuesday of last week and after a few days in the Hospital there he was brought to

CAPT. W. H. BLANCHARD

Toronto in a special car and placed in the Base Military Hospital.

The was thoroughly examined on Sunday and the doctors decided upon an operation. He was in the operating room for two hours on Tuesday and a silver tube placed in his side by which to feed him.

Capt. Blanchard was reported very weak yesterday, but had a fair night and is doing as well as can be expected, according to word received today. On account of the condition of his throat, which was almost closed, he had been unable to take any food and was practically starving to death.

Capt. Blanchard has two sons overseas, one of them Lance Corp. Bruce Blanchard of the 21st Battalion won the Military Medal last year.

WHY REPRISALS ARE MORE DIFFICULT.

When German aeroplanes come from Osterd to raid London, 120 of the 150 miles of the journey are over the sea, where there is no danger from land defences but if the allied airmen fly from Verdun to Coblenz—the same distance they have to go and return over land dotted with anti-aircraft guns and enemy aerodromes.

NEW ONTARIO PIONEER DEAD AT PORT ARTHUR

HAD VARIED CAREER AS BANKER, RAILWAY BUILDER AND FARMER.

PORT ARTHUR, Oct. 2.—Daniel Francis Burke, one of the pioneers in the development of the northern part of Ontario, died Saturday at St. Joseph's Hospital in his sixty-eighth year.

The settlement of the district surrounding Port Arthur and Fort William owes much to the late Daniel Burke. Born in Bowmanville, he entered the service of the old Ontario Bank at the age of nineteen years. Forty-two years ago he was appointed manager of the bank here. In 1884 he became associated with his brother in building 100 miles of railway for the C. P. R. He then became identified with the Port Arthur, Duluth and Western Railway, and was general manager of the road when it was taken over by the C. N. R. in 1898.

Sometimes a man is so respectable that his neighbours have but little respect for him.

WEDDING BELLS

CHEEL—ROSE.

At St. James' Methodist parsonage yesterday afternoon the wedding was solemnized of Edgar Smith Cheel, of Toronto to Miss Florence E. Rose. The ceremony was performed by Rev. B. Greatrix. The groom was assisted by Mr. Howard Rose, brother of the bride, while Miss Pearl Milligan, was bridesmaid.

KINCIAD—PENNELL.

The following in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, refers to the marriage of Professor Kincaid of the University of Washington, and son of Dr. Kincaid, formerly a well-known physician of Peterborough, and who at the age of 83 years, is still practising in Seattle:

The marriage of Miss Louise Farrar Pennell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Pennell, and Trevor Kincaid, son of Dr. Kincaid, formerly of Peterborough, was solemnized Thursday noon in the Plymouth Congregational Church. Dr. Herbert H. Gowen officiated. The choir loft was banked with ferns and greens and a screen of greens and pink and white phlox formed an effective background. Pink sweet peas and roses were combined in the decorations, which were very simple. Before the ceremony Mr. Judson W. Mather at the organ played "Wedding Song," by Harriett Ware; "Bride's Song (Rustic Wedding)," by Goldmark, and "Love Song (A Day in Venice)," by Nevin. A trio, "Extase," by Ganne, was played by Mrs. Mather, violinist, and Mr. Waldo Mather, 'cellist, with Mr. Mather at the organ. Reubenstein's wedding march from the opera 'Feramors," announced the approach of the bridal party. Dr. Gowen, with Prof. Kincaid and his groomsman, Mr. F. S. Hall, took his place at the altar and awaited the bride and her attendants. First came the four ushers, intimate girl friends of the bride, Miss Madell Gille, Miss Helen E. Hill, Miss Dorothy Wade and Miss Beth Neterer. They wore simple summer frocks in white and pink, with corsages of water lilies. The maid of honour was the bride's sister Miss Elisabetta Pennell, who wore a frock of white net over pink, delicately embroidered in pink. A pink picture hat completed her costume and she carried an arm bouquet of pink water lilies. The bride, who walked with her father, wore a suit of Alice blue chiffon broadcloth, with Georgette bodice embroidered with steel beads. With this she wore a white picture hat, and her flowers were white water lilies.

OBITUARY

SAMUEL NEWELL.

Samuel Newell died suddenly this morning at 8.30. He was employed at the Quaker Oats, and while engaged in his work yesterday afternoon, took a sick spell and was taken to St. Joseph's, where he died. Mr. Newell was born in Douro 54 years ago, and has resided in Peterborough practically all his life.

He leaves of his immediate family to mourn his death two sisters, Mrs. McCarthy and Mrs. J. Drain, of Norwood, and one brother, Thomas, in France.

The body will be taken to Norwood to-day for burial.

PATRICK CONROY.

Patrick Conroy, a well-known and widely respected farmer of Otonabee, died suddenly yesterday. He had attended to his daily duties about the farm during the day, apparently in his usual good health. However, at about 6 o'clock, with absolutely no warning, he passed away.

Mr. Conroy was born in Otonabee 75 years ago, where he has resided all his life. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. William Cavanagh, Otonabee. His wife predeceased him one year ago.

The funeral will take place at 9 o'clock to-morrow to St. Martin's Church and Cemetery, Douro, from his late residence, Lot 31, Concession 1.

CITIZENS AND SERVICE

It is the Push of its Citizens That Makes a Community Noticeable in the View of the Province

Ever meet a man on a train who has said to you that "Peterborough is a mighty fine and progressive city?" You felt that you and yours, meaning the city, were appreciated, and that in fact it was deserved appreciation. Did it ever strike you that that encomium was drawn from the speaker, not by one impulsive municipal effort made in furtherance of some local project, but as the aggregate impression gained by years of successful effort? That's Peterborough, if you want to know it. "Sees it through" in all it undertakes. Just now we are seeing the coal emergency through, for example.

So we want you to loyally help to make and register another success. Your individual help, only trifling, will ensure. It means the transference of coin from your pocket to another. And you are doing a Christian act while performing.

THE CHILDREN'S AID ANNUAL TAG DAY is on, Saturday, 6th. Next Saturday. Day-after-tomorrow. This Tag Day is ours. We own it. Be liberal. Buy one or more tags. If Greater Production has blessed you with a fair garden crop, show it by your small, but we hope, frequent gifts. So much can be spared, and well spared too.

No use to advise you of the object. The very fact that you do not hear of a case of privation and hardship among defenceless children is proof that such cases are looked after. But the work is there to be done, and done it is.

The sources of revenue are limited. Too limited. The whole thing has in some way been shouldered out of sight — the claims of the work we mean—by the many and serious war obligations and calls. But none the less we are here and needy.

Put some change handy. The rattle of the coins as they drop into the cash box is as grateful to the collector as was the "tinkle of the ice in the pitcher as the boy comes down the hall" to the thirsty man with last night's reflections.

Be liberal. Be frequent in liberality in a mighty good cause. We can build dreadnoughts from the avails of five-cent pieces, if we get enough of them. And the Children's Aid can work on in confidence and prosperity if you will be so good.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), October 4.—"The night was calm except on the right bank of the Meuse, where artillery on both sides was very active."

A story is going the rounds concerning the inquiry in London into the best method of checking extravagance in restaurants and hotels, says Pearson's Weekly.

Among the witnesses before the committee was a certain stolid-looking waiter. The particular article of food under discussion at the moment happened to be margarine, and one of the members asked incidentally:

"How do you call it in the restaurant business—'margarine' or 'marjorine?'"

"Neither, sir," blandly replied the waiter; "we calls it butter!"

A Ministerial Appeal For The Children's Aid

To the Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Having represented the Ministerial Association upon the Board of the Children's Aid Society for the past year, I have been in a position to know something of its workings and of the earnest efforts being put forth in its behalf by a number of our public-spirited citizens. Will you then allow me to say a word appropos to the approach of its annual tag day?

Surely there is no work in time of war or any other time more calculated to appeal to our sympathy and generosity than that of the Children's Aid. There is no finer work being carried on in our community. It is truly religious and eminently patriotic. It has occurred to me, however, that such a work is in danger of suffering the disadvantage of all public charity—that of being regarded simply as an institution. An institution as such doesn't appeal to us. It is too unpersonal, too lacking in the very thing that constitutes the basis of sympathetic appeal. It doesn't speak to us with any heart. The inmates of an institution are usually dressed alike and this atrocious custom well represents the idea too often in the public mind and heart:—that of a machine where the ordinary emotion and hopes and ambition of life figure very little.

Let us not be hardened by a spirit of institutionalism. When we think of our "Children's Shelter" let us have in mind the little ones, who are being cared for within its walls. Here are girls and boys who have not had the chance that comes to the average boy and girl. They have known little of all that is represented to most of us in the word "home," while some of them have suffered from almost criminal neglect on the part of parents and others. It is the aim of those who have taken their case in hand, to give them the opportunity of becoming respectable and useful citizens.

Let us bear in mind that every contribution dropped in the boxes next Saturday will go to help some boy or girl who depends upon the charity of a Christian public. If we only keep in mind the claim of the individual behind the institution, the average contribution will be much larger than it usually is, and will represent a great deal more than the price of a tag.

Yours faithfully,
R. B. GROBB.

Betting On Big Series

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Betting on the world's series indicates to-day that vast amounts will be staked on the games. One broker declared he had already placed $15,000 on the White Sox to win the series. One bet of $5,000 at even money on the Giants was reported. Another broker had a similar amount to put on the Giants and was offering $800 to $1,000 that New York wins the opening game.

Foodstuffs For Mexico

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 4—President Carranza to-day told a delegation from the Chamber of Commerce that he had instructed the Treasury Department to take steps to secure a sufficient supply of cereals and foodstuffs for Mexico.

Red Cross Nurses Will Parade To-day

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.— One of the most remarkable parades in the history of New York will be held here to-day when 12,000 Red Cross nurses who will soon be on duty in France, march down Fifth avenue. In all between 20,000 and 25,000 Red Cross workers and others will be in line. The nurses will march to the music of 24 bands, headed by that of Lieut. John Philip Sousa. The Sousa organization came here from Chicago by special train to take part in the farewell to women who will soon be on the battle line.

MEETING DID NOT MATERIALIZE

The meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council called last evening did not materialize for the want of a quorum. Ald. Dobbin, Chairman of the Committee, and Alderman Smith and Duncan were the sole representatives of the Committee. The absentees were Aldermen Worth, McIntyre, Stratton, Weir and Taylor. Failing to have sufficient members to conduct a regular meeting the abreviated committee adjourned to the central fire station where the firemen's winter uniforms were inspected and approved.

FIRST CLASS WILL BE CALLED OCTOBER 13

Proclamation Notifying Men of Class I of Military Service Act to Report For Service or Claim Exemption Will Be Issued a Week From Saturday—Regulations to Be Published.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—The first class of recruits under the military service act will be called up on Saturday, October 13. A proclamation will be issued on that date notifying men in Class 1 that within a specified time they are either to report for military duty or to file a claim for exemption Class 1 comprises:

"Those who have attained the age of twenty years and were born not earlier than the year 1883, and are unmarried, or are widowers but have no child."

With the proclamation calling up the men will also be published regulations by which Tribunals appointed to hear applications for exemption will be governed. There will be between three and four weeks' delay, after the issue of the proclamation, in which applications for exemptions may be filed. This will bring the Tribunals into full operation, it is expected, early in November, and probably by the middle of the same month the first batch of men—there are many who will not claim exemption—will be with the colours. An appeal from the decision of a Local Tribunal will have to be filed within two or three days after the applicant is notified that his claim for exemption was disallowed.

Only "A" Men to be Called.

From the medical point of view, men who have submitted themselves for physical examination are divided into various categories. Only "A" men—those fit for general service overseas—will actually be called to the colours. All within Class 1 should, however, send in either a report for service or a claim for exemption. The certificate of the Medical Board is to be attached. Men in Class 1 placed in any medical category other than category "A" will then be granted exemption till men within their category are called to the colours. When "B" and "C" are so called, any other ground they may have for claiming exemption will be considered.

Eight Grounds for Claim.

No special class, occupation or trade will be granted exemption as such, but exemption may be claimed on eight separate grounds.

(1) Importance of continuing employment in habitual occupations.

(2) Importance of continuing employment for which applicant for exemption is specially qualified.

(3) Importance of continuing education or training.

presentatives will be instructed not o oppose a claim of exemption made

(4) Serious hardship owing to exceptional financial obligations.

(5) Serious hardship owing to exceptional business obligations.

(6) Serious hardship owing to exceptional domestic position.

(7) Ill-health or infirmity.

(8) Adherence to religious denomination of which the articles of faith forbid combatant service.

Causes of Delay.

It was at first hoped to have the proclamations issued by the end of September, but unforseen delays prevented such a course. The Board of Selection was unable to make its appointments to Local Tribunals, and will not complete them till next week. The enormous mass of printing required has also been somewhat of a difficulty. Fifty different classes of forms are required in connection with the administration of the act, and millions of forms and circulars have been printed. When the Board of Selection finishes its work, however, (the board meets again on October 9), everything is expected to be in readiness for the call.

Negotiations are under way, it is understood, between Ottawa and Washington with a view to bringing Americans of military age resident in Canada within the scope of the draft law. Canadians resident in the United States would similiarly be affected under the American law.

Bereaved Families Considered.

Families which have lost several members in the war will recieve special consideration when drafts are called under the military service act. A definite regulation on the point has not been laid down. But military representatives will be instructed not to oppose a claim of exemption made to a local tribunal on such grounds. No doubt is felt further that tribunals will recognize the validity of a bona fide claim of his nature.

Aliens Not Affected.

Men of alien birth and still retaining their foreign citizenship will not be required either to report for service or to claim exemption when the first call is issued. But every naturalized subject, no matter where or how naturalized, must report or claim exemption—that is, if he comes within the class called out by proclamation.

Men of alien enemy origin, naturalized since the war-time elections act, and under the same act are given exemption from military service. The exemption must, however, be claimed by filling in a claim in the ordinary way.

ADMISSION—Afternoon 10c, Ev'ng 15c

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In your issue of this evening I see that you reported the case of Ayotte vs Township of Smith heard to-day.

In that report you make it appear that Mr. Wearing was in the case and do not mention my name, so that the public would get the impression that Mr. Kerr and Mr. Wearing were the Counsel in the case.

If I were an old resident it would not so much matter to me, but as I am a new comer and not as yet very well known it is likely to do me in a way, an injury.

I was Counsel in the case for the Plaintiff, and it was me that made the announcement that the case had been settled. And if there is any credit to be had by members of the Bar in consequence of the remarks of Mr. Kerr, I am entitled to share in that credit.

Lawyers cannot advertise, and the only chance of a new man getting known is the publicity of cases in Court, and that I am entitled to.

Although I have been in the city only since the 1st May last, I have been in no less that eight law suits, and am in every case up for hearing at the County Court not sitting. And I have already settled three of the law suits instead of fighting them and every settlement has been to the advantage of my clients. And I may say that I have now instructions that will probably result in three more law suits if I fail to effect amicable settlements whch I am now endeavoring to do, to avoid litigation.

I will be much obliged if you will give this letter as much publicity as you gave the report of the recent case.

Yours truly,
J. G. GUISE-BAGLEY
440 Water Street, Peterborough.

TO THE HEARTS OF THE PEOPLE

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—We beg to remind you that Saturday, October 6th, has been set for the Annual Tag Day of the Children's Aid Society of this city.

The work of the Society was never more satisfactory than it has been this year. The aim has been to improve conditions in home wherever possible in order to prevent neglect of children, and the separation of children from parents is only resorted to in extreme cases. We believe that this method commends itself to all friends of the Society and is productive of the best results.

We are anxious to raise the fullest amount possible on Tag Day, because the needs of the work demand it. The employment of an Agent for our work increases our expenditure by about $500.00 but the results of his work more than justify this added expense.

This letter is written in the hope that you may assist the work by making out a substantial cheque in favour of The Children's Aid Society of Peterborough, and dropping it in one of the boxes on Tag Day.

Very sincerely yours,
E. A. PECK, President.
JOSEPH WEARING, Secretary
Peterborough, Ont., October 1, 1917.

Took 78,000 Serum Units.

David Lambert, 11 years old, of Camden who was admitted to Cooper Hospital, Philadelphia, on May 24, with his jaws tightly locked and his body racked with convulsions from tetanus, has recovered. It required 78,000 units of anti-tetanic serum to save the boy's life. Lockjaw developed from a small nail wound in the sole of his right foot. It was at first believed he would die.

Farm Help Is Needed

Mr. G. A. Gillespie has had a number of applications from farmers who want help. If there are any men in the city who would like to accept positions on the farm, they are asked to notify Mr. Gillespie, who will have no difficulty in placing them.

LABOUR MEN ARE PREPARING TO MOVE IN COMING ELECTIONS

At the meeting of the Trades and Labour Council last night there was considerable discussion of the advisability of active participation in the coming elections. It was suggested that a branch of the Independent Labour party should be formed in Peterborough to support a Labour candidate. Offers have been received from Messrs. James Simpson, Fred Bancroft, D. J. O'Donoghue and Miss Laura Hughes, of Toronto, to address meetings that might be held here in the interests of the party. A committee was formed to formulate a plan of action which may include interviews with prospective candidates in this riding to sound them on their attitude toward labour.

A REPORT ON COST OF BREAD

Small Margin of Profit for Bakers According to O'Connor's Figures.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—It cost 6.6 cents for bakers to produce one pound of bread in Toronto, and 6.44 cents in Ottawa, and from these prices the cost of production runs up in various cities to as high as 7.85 cents per pound in Vancouver and New Westminster, which is the maximum. This is the finding of High Cost of Living Commissioner W. F. O'Connor, K.C., as stated in an interim report given out here to-day after six months' investigation into the milling and bread manufacturing industries in Canada. The Toronto and Ottawa figures may be assumed to generally represent the cost in most Ontario cities.

PARLIAMENT IS DISSOLVED

Dissolution of House of Commons Will Date From Saturday

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—Parliament has been officially dissolved to-day, and dissolution will date from Saturday next. In connection with the announcement of the proclamation breaking up Canada's House of Commons, Premier Borden said the date for the elections will be decided later. It is generally understood here they will not be held before January. Sir Robert also stated that beyond the additions of Messrs. Ballantyne and Guthrie, there were no other cabinet changes to announce. Western Liberals will hold a meeting here this afternoon, and it is expected that Hon. H. S. Brewster, Premier of British Columbia, and Hon. A. Calder, Saskatchewan, will enter the Union Cabinet. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will take no further step respecting his resignation till after consultation with his friends in Toronto.

CAN WEAR UNIFORMS WHEN IN UNITED STATES

Ottawa, October 3. — The entry of the United States into the war has caused an alteration in the regulations with regard to the wearing of uniforms by Canadian officers and men when in that country. Canadian soldiers are allowed to visit the United States now in uniform, whether on duty, leave or furlough, as long as they have first secured a permit, signed by their district officer commanding or another officer in authority. The list of names of those to whom such permits have been granted must be on record at district headquarters and in the case of officers, the names must be referred by wire to militia headquarters here. Soldiers of the United States army are allowed to enter Canada in uniform.

A SHORT CIRCUIT.

The Fire Department was called last night at 1 o'clock to the corner of George and Charlotte street to attend to a short circuit made on an electric pole. The Chief notified the Power House. No damage was done.

Burnham, M.P., when the news of his recent marriage to Miss Christina McGilchrist, of Ottawa, was announced. Capt. Burnham spent many months at Barriefield Camp last summer with the 93rd Battalion, and made many friends who wish him and his accomplished bride many happy years of married life.

The weekly Wednesday tea, which is looked forward to by the large number of ladies of St. Peter's Patriotic Society as a break from the steady routine of Red Cross sewing, was held yesterday at St. Alphonsus Lyceum, Mrs. J. F. Crowley and Miss E. Tangney acting as hostesses. Mrs. John Grisdale, who poured tea, was assisted by Mrs. John Dwyer and the Misses L. Hurley, Gertrude McFadden, Mary Doris and Olive Tangney. The large number of ladies of St. Peter's Patriopressed by the particularly tasteful decorations of asters, flags and salvia.

The Alleged "Dips" Got Bail And Have Gone On Auto Trip

Three or four smooth strangers who were arrested on Fair Day on a charge of picking pockets, were admitted to bail of $1,000 each yesterday morning and started on an automobile trip that may or may not wind back to Peterborough. Tom Flynn, Owen Foley and Frank Davis apparently had friends and influence enough not only to give them eulogistic passport into Canada, but also to provide a total of $3,000 bail that freed them until October 9th, when they are due to re-appear at the police court.

Sammy Scarting, the Toronto member of the quartette, is not so fortunate as his Boston friends. He is still in jail and with every prospect of remaining there until Tuesday, at least.

The departure of the trio, told in the hearing of reporters at the Police Court this morning by J. D. Carrold, who had been brought down from the hill to appear on a charge of theft.

"When they were going out," he said, "one of them said to Scarting, Good-bye, Sammy, we'll see you again next Tuesday." And he winked at Scarting as he finished."

It was also said that one of the men had remarked that Peterborough might never see them again.

Police Uninformed.

The Police Department was greatly incensed when they learned that cash bail without additional sureties had been accepted, and the prisoners turned loose. The news was broken to them by Carrold, and dropped with the effect of a bomb in the smooth working department.

Chief Thompson stated that it was usual for the police to be notified before prisoners were admitted to bail on one charge for the reason that there might be other charges held in reserve. In the case of these three men there were certain other alleged offences which had not been disposed of.

Detective Newhall, who was largely instrumental in the arrest of the men, expressed his doubts of their return, and was plainly disappointed with the turn of the case.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who had acted as Solicitor for the men, was not communicative about his part in the negotiations for bail. The money had been paid over, the men were liberated and had left on an automobile trip. Ostensibly they are to return for trial next Tuesday.

Crown Attorney Hatton stated that only cash bail had been demanded, and it had been paid. He showed the press a certificate of character that had been issued by Mayor Jas. M. Curley to Foley and one of the others, stating that Foley "is a person of excellent standing in the community and of high character, probity and honour." With this recommendation the men crossed into Canada on a trip that included the Peterborough Fair. The police hold the $1,300 that was taken from the prisoners.

NIGHT SCHOOL FOR VETS.

New Work to be Started by M.H.C. if Demand Warrants.

With the idea of establishing evening classes for returned men if the interest among the men is keen enough, letters have been sent to all the vocational training officers of the Military Hospitals Commission directing them to enquire into the matter and report the number of men who would avail themselves of the privilege in their districts if the arrangements were made.

While the bulk of the men returning take advantage of the assistance offered them by the Commission it is known that there are many men independent by nature and full of initiative who found positions in spite of disabilities, who might be eager to ing officers who have passed on numadvance themselves. It is to help these men who help themselves that the scheme of evening classes is suggested. (6)

Explosion And Fire At Fernie, Wind Is Low

Dynamite the Cause and Method of Procedure Discovered, Says Despatch

FERNIE, B.C., Oct. 5.—At four o'clock yesterday morning a terrible dynamite explosion totally wrecked the Farry Creek water main, the main water supply line of the city, and about five minutes later a fire alarm was turned in from the Fernie Annex. The fire brigade responded quickly but on arrival at the scene of the fire, a large two storey residence, owned by William Cole, no water could be obtained and they endeavored to hold the progress of the flames by means of their chemical apparatus but this method was absolutely a failure and the flames spread to a close-by cottage.

The wind, however, was low and by this time the auxiliary water supply from the coal creek main was being used, but owing to the small force behind it it could only be used to keep the flames from spreading further. Both houses were burned to the ground, but are covered by insurance. On investigation of the cause of the wreckage of the Ferry Creek water main it was found that someone had crawled under a small culvert through where the main runs and had blown up the whole structure by means of dynamite. A large number of men are now working swiftly to repair the damage and restore the water supply, but it will take a considerable time before water can be turned on. Chief of Police Welsley and Chief Brown are hard at work this morning in an endeavor to trace the dynamiters.

THE KING'S HEALTH.

King George's recent visit to the Grand Fleet recalls to one mind a custom, reminiscent of bygone days, which still holds good in the navy.

Despite the vast changes in the type of ships, numerous old rules still obtain, and none of them is more surprising to a landsman than that which forbids the health of the king to be drunk aboard ship up-standing. Members of the senior service always sit whilst drinking the king's health, and it is remarkable how proud they are of the difference between them and their comrades of the land service.

The explanation is simple. In the old days of wooden vessels the deck above was perilously near the head of a man of even average height, and in many cases, if an officer rose with any alacrity, he bumped his head against the ceiling of the cabin. So now in ward-robes, and gun-rooms, the president of the mess gives the toast of "The King," and it is honored without anyone rising.—Tit-Bits.

When you were one hour old,
They brought you back to me.
You were a queer red crying one,
But dear as life to me

Dear—but how new and strange!
You could not be my own!
I thought: "She is so wonderful,
But helplessly alone.

"Alone she leaps to life.
How shall I understand?"
And then they laid against my cheek
Your little curled dream-hand.

And, oh, it was my hand!
My fingers, one hour old!
The crooked thumbs, the old blunt tips,
Turned frail as flowers to hold.

Then you were mine at last—
My echo! And I knew
That all myself and all of life
Lay curled like flames in you!

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

In addition to these prime movers in the expedition, there were in the four boats some fifty men all told, desperate characters gathered along the docks and in the taverns of Port Royal, who, the proceeds of their last adventure spent, were ready to engage in any enterprise, no matter how desperate, to secure the share of silver or gold that would enable them to enjoy another period of unlimited dissipation in the pot-houses and brothels of the town.

Ormiston had learned through a sailor who had arrived the day before from Maracaibo, that the governor of that place was about to send out two ships, heavily laden with gold and other valuable commodities, under the protection of a thirty-two gun man-of-war. They had been too late for the regular plate fleet, now on its way to Spain. Ormiston's plan, desperate in its conception, was to hover about the western end of the Windward Passage, in the hope that he might intercept this squadron and surprise and capture one of the merchant ships at night. Even the man-of-war he did not greatly fear, once he could lay his crew of cut-throats alongside; the danger lay solely in the approach. Of the arrival in these waters of the Rio del Oro he knew nothing, hence his lookout men, as the little fleet skirted the southern coast of the Island of Jamaica and turned northward, directed their watch to the west and south, rather than to the east.

It was the evening of the second day out, when the buccaneers arrived off the entrance to the Windward Passage. The north-east wind, that had held steady and true since their departure from Port Royal, began to grow fitful as night approached, and showed every indication of dying out altogether. The sun went down with a rush, behind a mass of ash-coloured clouds, and almost immediately the soft, velvety tropical night was upon them.

A high and brilliant moon lighted the misty surface of the ocean; as both wind and sea went down, a wet fog enshrouded the drifting boats. Ormiston, his craft in the lead, stood off to the eastward on a long tack that would in the course of several hours bring him to the shores of Hispaniola. With his eyes upon the slackly drawing sail, humoring the light breeze so as to take advantage of every puff, he was forced to look ahead, while his men were searching the surface of the sea to the rear, hoping to pick up the expected arrivals from Maracaibo. Suddenly his eyes, grown preternaturally keen from long practice, caught a glow of light upon the shadowy surface of the water, above which there presently loomed the swelling topsails of a large vessel. She had come very near to them without their realizing it, owing to the mist and fog. Over the slow ground swell Ormiston could hear the faint creaking of her yards, the rattle of the blocks as the sheets were alternately slacked and drawn taut by the fitful breeze.

He threw his boat up into the wind, and waited in silence until his companions should overtake him. They stood alongside, close enough for whispered conversation from boat to boat, then grappling irons were made ready, cutlasses drawn, sails lowered and replaced by long oars muffled at the locks, while the crews of the several boats with the exception of the men at the sweeps crouched down along the rail, ready for instant action when the time should come.

The Rio del Oro drifted along under a cloud of canvas, the breeze so light as barely to lift her sails. There were few lights aboard; as she parted the phosphorescent sea, only a few ripples, like molten silver, curled about her cutwater.

Now that the passage of the channel had been made, and the broad Caribbean lay before them, the lookouts on board had relaxed their vigilance. Even the fog should not have prevented them from seeing the four black specks that lay athwart their course, yet the buccaneers were almost under the shadow of the galleon's sides before they were discovered, and then discovery came as a result of the splashing of the muffled oars, rather than through any vigilance on board.

A quick hail came from the deck, and a few moments later the attacking party heard the bugler summoning the crew and men-at-arms to quarters, but the summons came too late. Two of the boats, under the command of Tench and Portuguese Joe, bore down upon the vessel from starboard, while Ormiston and Long Rodgers lay alongside to port. As the huge hulk of the Spaniard swept past them, grappling irons, thrown from each boat, became entangled in the shrouds near the waist of the ship, holding the four boats to her like hounds to the flank of a stag. From four points amidships the buccaneers swarmed up the sides and over the rail of the vessel. Those aboard had made on ineffectual attempt to bring into action the brass culverins with which she was armed, but the range was too close, and the shots went far over the attacking party's heads.

On deck there was a vast disorder. Unable in the darkness to determine either the character or the number of their assailants, or indeed their point of attack, the Spaniards, under the command of their captain, gathered hurriedly at the base of the mainmast, adjusting their headpieces and drawing their swords as they ran. A dozen men, headed by Tench and Portuguese Joe, sprang over the starboard rail, their swords in their teeth. The Spaniards, ready to make a rush in either direction to repel boarders, swept toward them, thus leaving the port rail unguarded. Almost at the same moment the huge figure of Long Rodgers tumbled aboard in their reaer, followed by Ormiston and a score of others. With yells of fury and exultation they struck the Spaniards from behind.

The latter, exposed to this double attack, and unable to make effective resistance in either direction, soon saw that only by retiring in good order either forward or aft could they hope to oppose their adversaries with any chance of success. The appearance of further buccaneers near the stern, as the men at the oars joined their companions in the fight, precluded retreat in that direction, so that the Spanish captain was forced to order his men to retire in the direction of the forecastle. This they at once did, closely pressed by the buccaneers, who, gathering from port and starboard to join forces, swept forward along the deck, showing no quarter to the few stragglers that opposed their advance.

Presently the voice of Ormiston was heard above the tumult.

"Inboard with the midship guns," he roared. "Give the rascals a taste of their own powder."

Half a dozen of his followers, grasping his meaning at once, dragged two of the light brass pieces from their ports, and turning them about so as to rake the deck forward, discharged them by exploding their pistols at the touchholes. The guns were heavily shotted; at such close range they literally swept the decks. Fully one-half of the Spaniards about the foremast went down. Many of the others flung themselves overboard in a mad attempt to escape the charge with which the bucaneers followed up their volley. The few that stood fast were quickly overcome and throwing themselves on their knees, begged for quarter. The Spanish captain did as befitting a fighting man, sword in hand. Don Francisco de Lara, a great gash in his side, resisted to the last. Thrown to his knees, his hands bound, he asked no mercy for himself, but begged only that his captors would spare his daughter. She, poor girl, with the other women on board, crouched at the foot of the companionway, awaited the result of the combat with fear at their hearts.

One by one they were dragged to the deck. Ramona, for all her youth, her terror, came proudly enough. The de Laras were not ones to show their fears, however they might feel them. Her pride, her beauty were her undoing. Even as her father staggered to his feet, entreating Ormiston to deal gently with the girl, the Firebrand stepped forward.

'We'll spare her, old graybeard," he laughed, and swept the girl into his arms.

Don Francisco, in a sudden fury, rushed toward him, and raising his bound hands, struck the buccaneer full in the face. The latter gave a snarl of rage, then whipped out his sword and cut the older man across the forehead. He fell, senseless, upon the deck.

"Ovrboard with him!" Ormiston exclaimed. "Take the girl aboard my boat." It was thus that Ramon de Lara came to Port Royal.

PRESS AGENTS IN DISMAY AT BOLO ARREST

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Bolo Pacha's arrest has struck dismay into the hearts of the correspondents here of a certain string of American papers which before America's entry into the war openly proclaimed pro-German sentiments and have not completely concealed them since.

Bolo was at the legations with them. One accompanied him on his trip to the United States. His arrest, proving the government's determination to hunt down and punish drastically all Germany's agents here, has stunned these correspondents.

The sudden turn taken in the Bolo case has also started a boche hunt in Paris, one after another of the newspapers joining in trying to out-Daudet Daudet, son of the famous novelist. Leon Daudet is editor of the Action Francaise, a royalist newspaper. For two years he has been indefatigably denouncing the little band of traitors, such as Almereyda, who were allowed to operate with impunity to the detriment of France in the interests of Germany. One newspaper, the Petit Blue, prints a list of three columns of firms in Paris suspected of enemy affiliations.

WARRANT FOR AGENT IN SPAIN

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Gaston Routier, a French citizen, who founded the pacifist newspaper the Paix at Madrid with funds supposed to have been furnished by Bolo Pacha. The publication aroused the indignation of the French colony in the Spanish capital on account of its Germanophile tendency. As a result Routier declared he would cease publication and return to France and enlist in the army.

Detectives were sent to the frontier in anticipation of his coming, but nothing has yet been heard from him. According to other information money was furnished Routier by Von Krohn, German Naval Attache at Madrid.

Senator Charles Humbert, owner of the Journal, announces he has cancelled his contract with Bolo Pacha and refunded the 5,500,000f, ($1,000,000) paid by Bolo for an interest in his newspaper. The Senator, writing of his request a promise that Fernand Monier should be appointed a director of the Journal on his retirement as president of the Paris Court of Appeals. He felt at the time that the presence of such a man as Judge Monier on the Journal board, as the representative of Bolo, reassured him as to the wisdom of accepting Bolo's money.

The French Ministry of Justice last week decided to send Judge Monier before the Court of Cassation on account of his association with Bolo.

After he signed the contract, Senator Humbert says, he saw Bolo only at wide intervals, and noticed nothing suspicious. It was a year after that the contract was signed that the Senator learned a judicial inquiry had been opened in regard to Bolo. He immediately offered to return the money but Bolo declined to accept it, and there was no way in which he could be forced to receive it. Furthermore, he had not been arrested and protested his innocence, and the Premier, whom Senator Humbert consulted, told him even as late as three weeks ago that nothing definite had been found against Bolo. The Senator accordingly could only await further developments, and conclude he had the right to break the contract and refund the money.

5 YEARS OF SUFFERING ENDED

The little son of Mrs. W. Adams of 489 La Salle Rd., Verdun, Montreal, suffered for over five years with the worst form of eczema. Mrs. Adams tried everything—took the child to various hospitals, where he received the best possible medical treatment, but it was of no avail. The doctors said the case was incurable. Then she heard of Zam-Buk and used it, with the result that to-day the child is completely cured of the terrible disease.

Mrs. Adams writes: "The eruption started on my little son's neck and spread rapidly until his body was entirely covered. It was terrible to see how he suffered with the burning and irritation. I took him to a hospital for treatment of the skin, but instead of getting better the sores became worse. I then took him to another hospital, where he remained for some time, and although at first he seemed to be getting better, the improvement was only temporary, and the doctors finally pronounced the disease incurable.

"Five years had now elapsed since the sores first appeared, and I was beginning to fear the doctors were right, when I was advised to use Zam-Buk. This balm was so highly spoken of that I determined to give it a trial, and a few weeks after commencing its use I noticed a decided improvement. This was so encouraging that I continued. Gradually my boy got better and better until after four months of Zam-Buk treatment he was entirely cured and his skin absolutely clear.

"Although it is now six years since this wonderful cure was effected, there has not been the slightest trace of the disease returning."

Zam-Buk is unsurpassed for eczema, chronic sores, ringworm, bad legs, blood-poisoning, pimples, boils and piles, as well as for cuts, burns, scalds and all skin injuries. All dealers, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

BATTLE STORIES FROM THE WESTERN FRONT

'During one of the hottest day's fighting of the year" said a wounded suabltern, "the Germans delivered a terrific attack on our bridgade. After heavy fighting they broke through the battalions on our left and right. We managed to repulse them five times. All the same our position was very bad, as we were being attacked very soon from three sides at once."

"I was sent along to try and clear up the situation on our left. I went along the battered trench for a hundred yards and quite suddenly came face to face with a particularly hefty Bosche. We both dashed at one another. He was a big, strong devil, and I had a ghastly scrap with him. He got me down once and tried to choke me, and then I recovered and threw him finally. How I blessed the half dozen wrestling lessons I once indulged in!"

"All the same I never really mastered him. He managed to bite me badly all over the wrists and arms, and then he brought up his leg and and kicked me in the back about ten times, very nearly laying me out. I can speak German, and I kept cursing him and telling him I'd kill him if he didn't stop struggling. All he did was to grunt and bite me!"

'It was an extraordinary position. There we were in the middle of a terrific battle having a lonely little scrap all to ourselves."

"At last I heard someone coming down the trench. It was a nasty moment. It was an absolutely even chance, whether he was wearing a kilt or field grey. In the latter case I knew my number was up. If you can put yourself in my position, you'll realize what a huge sigh of relief I gave, when I saw a pair of naked knees coming around the traverse. My bird immediately became very docile and told me all about himself, his unit and how much he hated the war. And that was how I got a septic arm, a slight touch of pleurisy and a prisoner."

'Not that my troubles were over for the day. After we'd been scrapping for another sixteen hours, we managed to restore the position. It was an absolute fight to the death. By that time I had almost forgotten my best of three falls with the big Wurtemberger."

"I remember, said a gunner captain, that once there was a fight in the air over a battery. A Bosche plane had come over and four of ours dived at his tail. It was rather horrible in a way. The Bosche was so obviously bound to go through it. After about half a minute his machine blazed up and the poor devil jumped out, and fell 9,000 feet. We could see him going over and over in the air. Curiously enough his machine carried on and came down miles further on."

"One day we pulled the Bosches leg properly. The balloon section with which we worked had an old, worn out balloon which they hadn't any further use for. They were ordered to send it up partly to test local Hun enterprise and partly for another reason, which I won't explain. So they let it up to 5,000 feet, quite empty, and waited."

"Sure enough after some time a Bosche came over and with great skill and care set her alight. Three days later we saw in the Bosche communique that "opposite B—— our gallant aviator, Lieut. G—— destroyed a hostile kite balloon, so gaining his sixteenth aerial victory." We laughed quite a lot when we saw that."

"All the same, Fritz is a wily animal. One time he began strafing balloons with gun fire rather successfully in a certain sector. It was distinctly annoying, especially for the parachute brigade. So we were put on to stop it. We found that the cunning old creature had got a 5.9 Archie in his front line! Once we had located it, however, it didn't last long, and he hasn't repeated the experiment."

STOP TANGO AT TROUTVILLE

Police Interfere, but the Gay City Continues to Shock France.

TROUVILLE, France, Sept. 25.—The fourth war season at this great French seaside resort has been the most successful since that of 1913. The villas have all been occupied, the hotels filled to the garret, and the daily promenade has been almost as brilliant as when it was interrupted three years ago. It has been to a certain extent a gay season, with the result that France generally has been scandalized by it. Millionaires are not playing high stakes at baccarat, and the horses are not across the river at Deauville, but tango was here, which caused trouble.

The casino was only half opened, but each evening the lights burned a little later for what was called "Children's fetes." These children's fetes became so popular and were prolonged so late as to attract attention. The prefect of the Department of Calvados decided that the fetes resembled too much the tango which, since the war, has been danced in France only claudestinely. Nearby resorts, which observed the curfew regulations, and put out their lights at 12 o'clock, complained that Trouvile was wasting coal that would be needed next winter to keep the wounded soldiers warm in the Grand Palace, so tango has been exiled, but the crowd remains.

There is no obvious gambling here but there is an intensive consumption of drink. Champagne, which by common consent was to be reserved for the celebration of the final victory, has come out of the cellar with three years of accumulated energy.

There is nothing a woman enjoys more than telling how much better her husband's digestive apparatus works since she married him.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

When you leave your happy, comfortable home to-morrow morning, and your well-fed, well-sheltered, well-cared-for children, take with you a mind picture of homes where ill-fed and neglected children, whose help and rescue demand your aid, are physically and morally shelterless; and take Iago's advice, "put money in thy purse" to meet the appeal of the collectors for the Children's Aid Society funds. PARTIZAN TO THE LAST.

The efforts to form a union government has for its object the elmination of partizanship in order to secure unity of effort; a war measure, should be marked by a becoming spirit. One would think that in negotiating this fusion of parties the Borden government would set the example of abstaining from the partizanship that has marked its policy and administration ever since the war began. There is no record of the government in its appointments to important responsibilities losing sight of the bestowal of partizan reward.

There has not in three years been found a Liberal of sufficient ability in the government estimate to warrant his appointment to national service. of important and responsible character. Dr. Adam Shortt, retired from the chairmanship of the Dominion Civil Service Commission. Dr. Shortt was not a politician; he was a man of eminent abilities and scholarly attainments, and his successor needs to be a man of similar ability, breadth of view and high standards of service. The public loss will be distinct if his position is filled by a mere politician. The office vacated by Dr. Shrott has been immediately filled. A suitable man could not be found in a moment, but a politician is always at hand. Mr. Clarence Jameson, M.P. for Digby, Nova Scotia, has been appointed to the position, thus maintaining the patrizan traditions of the government. Mr. Jameson is a strong party politician, selected to fill a post that demands a strong spirit of independence to defend it against the assaults of patronage exploitation. Sir Robert Borden will have a take Sir John Macdonald's "d—d sharp curve" if he qualifies as a leader of a new, non-partizan government.

If Sir Robert Borden had freed himself and the administration of his government, from partizanship and formed a union cabinet, two or three years ago, Canada's share of war contribution would have been larger and infinitely less costly.

UNION GOVERNMENT.

If the pendig fusion of parties in a new government will result in the formation of a real win-the-war government we can discredit the proverb that says there's nothing new under the sun—we shall have a real win-the-election government. If we had had a win-the-war government in the past we should not have had the tremendous waste of money—the chief element in war winning. We should not have had the government's appeal for food saving met by the government permitting waste of millions of bushels of food grains in the making of whiskey. We should not have had the permitted importation of strong drink in defiance of the spirit and in menace to the success of prohibition in Ontario; we should not have had the hat-in-hand attitude of the government to the demands of the big interests; we should not have had the Senate loaded with members friendly to the big interests, to knock a hole in the Hydro Electric system of Ontario. We should not have had the Opposition members goaded to partizanship to meet the tactics of the Borden Government. And we should have had more of the spirit of patriotic service, not only at headquarters, but by the force of example of patriotism in high places, more patriotic service spirit among the people.

If we get a real union government —a fair fusion of parties—we shall have a revolution in national administration, a revolution in national sentiment, a new spirit of courage and resolve in the people of the country. We shall have money spent for the best results, without reference to the fortunes of incidental beneficiaries; we shall provide hard sledding for the profiteers; and the whole national effort, official and popular, will be one of fruitfulness in seed of costly futility.

Everything will depend upon the quality of the new blood introduced into the union cabinet and upon the character of the old blood retained in the new Cabinet. If Sir Robert Borden, who, as leader, will have the chief "say" in the matter, measures up to the magnificent opportunity presented him, to win a reputation for patriotism and statesmanship in selecion of cabinet members and vigorous weeding out, we shall have hopeful results.

He will, howeved, have to discard a good deal of the old leaven of partizanship and exploitation of the public interests to reward of partizans. When everybody is called upon to sacrifice in the interests of war winning, the spirit of sacrifice does not seem to have permeated the Borden Cabinet and following. The Ottawa Journal, a Government organ, tells us of the profitable billets retiring ministers are accepting in sacrifice. Hon. Dr. Roche goes out of the Government and into a comfortable position in the Civil Service; Hon. T. W. Crothers, who goes out, is slated for the Bench; Hon. Edward Kemp is to go back as head of the War Purchasing Board. Sir Robert Borden has prudently provided for two of his supporters. Mr. Gerald Brabazon, of Pontiac, is made superintendent of storage dams on the Upper Ottawa, and Mr. Jameson of Digby, is appointed head of the Civil Service Commission, in the stead of Dr. Adam Shortt.

Sir Robert may be perfectly innocent of showing partizanship in those matters, but it looks as if he were laying the foundation of a union, a non-partisan, cabinet, on partizanship. Or, it is possible, that by removal of material for appointments he is saving the new union government from temptation.

If we are to have a union, a win-the-war government, we want it to be a good one; to embody the best elements, the best ability, the highest character, the loftiest patriotism of the Dominion, without a trace of the policy and elements of an administration that has made the work it has done in the interests of the cause more costly, less effective, and less inspiring than might have been.

It is wiser and less expensive to save children than to punish criminals.

DOGS TO DESTROY WOLVES.

Russian Hounds Imported into Utah to Rid Infested Country.

Utah is to employ Russian hounds to rid the State of wolves which have destroyed live stock in this State to the extent of $100,000, it is estimated.

Sylvester Robinson of State street, has six of these Russian dogs. He conferred recently with Dr. R. W. Hoggan and Thomas Redmond of the State Live Stock Commission. He is going to the southeastern part of Utah, where wolves infest the country in great numbers. Mr. Robinson will receive $150 for each wolf his dogs run down, the stockmen contributing $100 and the State the remaining $50. The dogs were imported from a stock farm in Russia.

THE MOST VALUABLE TREE.

A full-grown Mysore sandalwood tree is said to be the most valuable tree in the world. Mysore is a province in India and is the world's chief source of sandalwood, although the tree is found also in other parts of the country. In Madras the total annual output of sandalwood is about 240 tons, but in Mysore sandalwood procured in 1912-13 aggregated 2,883 tons. According to a recent consular report the war in Europe has greatly affected the market, as France and Germany have long been among the best customers for sandalwood. We read: "It is only the heartwood of the sandal tree that is of great commercial value. In a small way the wood is used for carving, especially in India, for making small carved boxes and for inlaid work; but the high prices which the wood brings are due its yielding an oil much used for medicinal purposes and the preparations of perfumery. For distillation of oil, chips of heartwood from the roots are preferred."

THE WASTE IN MUNITIONS MANAGEMENT BY EXCESSIVE OFFICE AND FREIGHT CHARGES

And while on the subject of our declining war industries, it would be well for the public to know the whole truth respecting the gradual closing down of our shell industries. We all know that lack of money to finance these purchases on behalf of the British Government is one of the causes, but are there others? For instance, is the Imperial Munitions Board, as presided over by Sir Joseph Flavelle, extravagantly managed? We are creditably informed, and will stand corrected if misinformed, that under the old Shell Committee's regime the office was administered at an expense of 1.7 per cent. on the turnover of $75,000,000 of shells, whereas the Imperial Munitions Board on a turnover of $550,000,000 of munitions have expended over 5 per cent. In other words the old Shell Committee which had all the pioneer work of organization, and made in a night a great industry out of onthing, expended $750,000 on administration, whereas the Imperial Munitions Board, with a great part of the work already done for them, have expended some $27,500,000 on administration. The expenditure of a great part of this vast sum may have been necessary and it may not. We do know however, that in one building alone in Ottawa there have been employed by the Imperial Munitions Board no less than 800 clerks, and that there is a total staff of some 1,200. We also know that the methods pursued in whirling forgings from one end of the country and back again has been wasteful to a criminal extent. These forgings have journeyed in the process of shell making from Hamilton to St. John, N.B., there to be machined, and on the other hand other forgings have taken a railway journey from St. John to Hamilton, there in turn to be machined. Ontario makers of shell boxes have shipped their product to Quebec, and Quebec shell box makers have shipped their boxes to Ontario. Altogether a more scandalous waste of money for freights alone has never been witnessd in this country.

We are informed that the various members of the Imperial Munitions Board are not even consulted by Chairman Sir Joseph Flavelle in respect to the workings of the special activities in which they are presumed to be engaged. Sir Joseph goes ahead and does it all, and the other members of the Board are merely called in to verify matters and place their O.K. at the bottom of the page.—Toronto Saturday Night.

QUALIFIED OFFICERS SCARCE IN ALBERTA.

So Medical Boards there may not Easily be Organized.

Calgary, September 29.—Word has been received here from Ottawa that, while the members of Local Tribunals under the military service act will be appointed at once, they will not be expected to begin their sittings until about the middle or perhaps the end of October. It appears that there may be some difficulty in organizing Medical Boards in Alberta, because of the scarcity of efficient qualified officers of the Canadian Army Medical Corps in Military District No. 13. Col. George MacDonald, D.O.C., left for Ottawa last night to consult the Headquarters there on the subject.

WINDSOR OFFICIAL SUFFERED 15 YEARS

Declares He Feels Like a New Man After Taking Tanlac

Few persons in Windsor are better known than Patrice Marentette, who for the past nine years has been Reeve of the township of West Sandwich. Mr. Marentette is a progressive and successful farmer and is one of the most influential men in the community; therefore his testimony regarding the remarkable results he has derived from the use of Taniac is significant and will interest everyone who knows him. In telling the story the other day of his recent restoration to health, Mr. Marentette said:

I suffered from a serious stomach trouble for fifteen years and during that time I tried all kinds of medicines but never found anything to relieve me till I started on Tanlac. Mine was really a case of chronic dyspepsia and I had to be very careful what I ate. Most everything soured on my stomach and made me feel like I was burning up inside, gas would swell me up so I could hardly get my breath and I would often spit up bits of my undigested food. My head ached and I would get so nauseated and dizzy I was afraid of falling. I felt too weak and rundown to do my work with any satisfaction, I was so restless I couldn't half sleep and got up in the morning feeling just as bad as when I went to bed.

I don't know what I would have done if I had not read so many endorsements of Tanlac from people I knew to be reliable. That convinced me and I got a bottle. I am on my fourth now and I feel like a new man. My stomach is in good condition, I have a fine appetite, and I don't have to worry about my eating. My head has stopped aching, I sleep better than in a long time, I have got rid of that tired, worn out feeling and I am stronger and better fitted to get through with my work without getting tired.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

U. S. NATIONAL SCHOOL OF MUSIC PLANNED.

Example of Canada. Reginald de Koven Heads Committee.

A movement was just launched by a number of representative United States musicians and composers to give that country the long-hoped-for national conservatory of music. At a meeting held in New York recently, an executive committee was appointed to nominate a national committee in order to inaugurate the permanent formation of such an institution.

This committee of which Reginald de Koven was appointed chairman, consists of Dr. Horatio Parker, professor of music at Yale University; George W. Chadwick, composer and director of the New England Conservatory of Music; Henry Hadley, composer and conductor; Clarence Eddy, organist; Albert Spalding, violinist; David Bispham, singer; Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler and Ernest Schelling, painists; Pierre V. B. Key, critic, and Rose L. Sutro, pianist.

In speaking of the project Mr. De Koven said: "Those interested in this movement believe that this time of ardent patriotism and newly aroused national feeling is really the propitious moment to enlist the sympathies of the nation in a movement which will certainly tend to develop our national possibilities of musical expression, and will also serve to overcome, without chauvinism, those influences in our midst which have certainly tended to retard our development and musical expression along national lines.

"This proposed national conservatory of music, will, it is thought, and hoped, unify American musical interests and aims, provide an authoriezd body whose judgment of musicians in every branch of the art will have definite weight with the people at large, and will also serve to promote that confidence in and recognition of our artistic possibilities, which alone can beget a national art."

WEEKLY REPORT ON FARM CONDITIONS

Following is a summary of weekly crop reports made by District Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Silo filling is receiving the chief attention of farmers at present, as early frosts, though not severe, have hastened cutting. Most of the corn, however, had reached a fair stage of maturity for making ensilage.

Fall wheat seeding is about completed. A large acreage has been got in despite the fact that the land has been so dry and hard. What has come up looks well, and there is a fair prospect of the crop meeting the winter in good condition. Winter rye is still being sown.

Threshing operations continue to show a good return for all classes of cereals.

In Kent, the chief bean raising district of the Province, the late crop has been caught by frost, which will prevent ripening more or less, and greatly lower the average yield per acre.

Potatoes are turning out at least an aerage yield and are of good general quality.

Roots are still highly spoken of, more particularly mangels. Brant reports shipments of turnips at 21c. a bushel.

Second growth and new clover both look well, as scattering showers have kept the fields growing nearly all fall. The yield of clover seed will be fair.

Most of the early apples have been marketed. The Duchess have borne better relatively than any other fall variety this year. In Dundas County, however, the Wealthy has netted growers $4.00 a barrel. Winter varieties are late in maturing, and are ligth in yield.

Vegetables have had a most successful season, except in the case of tomatoes, which in both field and garden are ripening very slowly, with some rot.

Live Stock:

Market values keep high, especially for hogs, which are quoted at $16.50 and $17 per cwt. Lambs are selling at from 11c. to 14c. per pound according to quality and locality.

Pastures, though good for the time of year, have thinned out considerably recently, and the flow of milk has correspondingly decreased. Referring to the dairy situation the Dundas representative says: "Milk at condensory and shipping centres has been advancing in price. The condensory at Chesterville is expecting to pay $3.00 per 100 lbs. for October milk. This firm is now getting in 150,000 lbs. of milk per day, and intends increasing its plant so that it can handle 250,000 lbs. daily. Many farmers feel that the standard set by the British Government for cheese prices should be raised at this time of the year, as it costs more to produce milk, and the supply is less."

Labour:

The Middlesex report claims that fine harvest weather and women help nearly solved the labour problem this year. The dry, warm weather of the last three weeks of September has retarded fall ploughing on clay soils, which are very hard. Even the tractors are meeting with difficulty in operating from this cause.

School Fairs:

These Fairs for juniors have been held in many districts recently. For example, the Kent representative reports: "I have had three School Fairs. We had delightful weather, good exhibits and large crowds. At Wheatley School Fair there were at least 1,000 people present."

ALL EXPORTS ARE PROHIBITED TO HOLLAND AND SCANDINAVIA

London, October 4. — The Gazette prints a proclamation prohibiting the exportation to Sweden, Norway, Denmark and the Netherlands of all articles except printed matter of all descriptions and personal effects accompanied by their owners.

Although heretofore exports to Holland and Scandinavia have been under strict supervision by the British authorities, the new proclamation doubtless means that these countries now will suffer more poignantly than ever, for the necessities of which they have been short since the American embargo went into effect.

The new order undoubtedly is the result of exportation from the countries under the ban into Germany of various articles, including foodstuffs needed by the enemy in the prosecution of the war. The proclamation is the most sweeping as regards neutral countries that has been issued since the commencement of the war.

CANADIAN "CALLS BLUFF."

Mutilated by Germans, He Seeks $1,000 Offered by Chicagoan.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Private I. S. Rossiter, a Canadian veteran, will claim from Dr. Albert Fuchs the $1,000 reward offered for proof of an atrocity committed by the Germans on a prisoner of war. Rossiter carries his proof with him. His right hand is fearfully mutilated as the result of treatment received in a German prison camp after he was captured in battle June 4, 1916.

"I was shot in the hand before I was captured," Rossiter said. "They took me to a German military hospital—not a first aid station, but a fully equipped hospital. There the surgeon cut off one of my fingers, although my wound was not serious. Then with his scissors he worked around my hand and in the tendons until I was deformed for life.

"The surgeon refused to give me ether. He said he had plenty, but none for 'schweinhuns.' He would not even let me have a torniquet to deaden the pain.

"The destruction of my hand was wanton and deliberate. I will claim Dr. Fuchs' reward to-day."

Dr. Fuchs is owner of the Chateau apartments and theatre at Broadway and Sheridan road. His wealth is estimated at $1,500,000 and he has announced the entire amount is ready to defend Germans against charges of brutality and atrocity. Rossiter plans to finance the transportation of enough victims of atrocity to Chicago to claim Dr. Fuchs' fortune.

THE MAGYAR COMEDY

PARIS.—The Magyars of Hungary are, of course, bitterly opposed to any electoral reform in Hungary. In their struggle against democratization they found the most faithful allies among the Germans of Hungary, who alone of the various nationalities are treated as citizens. The leader of these Hungarian Germans is Mr. Emil Neugeboren who, just before the dismissal of Count Tisza, as Hungarian Premier, published a very interesting article in the Reichenberger Zeitung, in which he reveals the duplicity of the alleged Magyar opposition to Austria and declares that the national interest of the Germans of Hungary, as well as that of the Magyars, compels them to oppose at any price the introduction of universal suffrage, for the introduction of such suffrage would inevitably result in the dissolution of the present Hungarian State.

"The Magyar opposition," he writes, "is only playing a comedy and does not at all take seriously its agitation in favour of electoral reform, for no Magyar can honestly desire equal and universal suffrage for the inhabitants of all nationalities of Hungary. Such a reform would bring the Magyar hegemony to an inevitable end, and would give the Slovaks and Roumanians a majority in Hungary. The same as the Magyars, the Germans of Hungary have no more reason to wish for a radical electoral reform, knowing the fact that only an actual aristocratic constitution—which could be more or less adapted to meet the exigencies of the time—can guarantee their national existence."

When one returns to the subject of the "Magyar Opposition," its attitude towards democracy and peace, he must immediately recall the words of Neugeboren, for every successive change in the ministry of Hungary affords an opportunity for hypocritical manifestations of the famous "Magyar Opposition." Really, this "Magyar Opposition" would be a fruitful theme for the most screaming of farces.

Pay Will Be The Same

Men selected under the Military Service Act will receive the same pay as those now on active service receive. Pay will start from the time a man reports for duty. Money from the Patriotic Fund and Separation Allowance will also be available for selected men.

Canadian soldiers are well paid. The fact that wages in Canada are generally higher than those paid in Europe is recognized in the system of remuneration for men on active service. Clothing and all equipment in addition to food is also supplied to the Canadian soldier, leaving him with no expense except personal incidentals.

The rate of pay for men in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, other than commissioned officers, is as follows:

	Pay	Field Allowance
Warrant Officers	$2.00	30 cts.
Regimental Sergt.-Major, if not a Warrant Officer	1.85	20 "
Quarter-master-Sergeants	1.80	20 "
Orderly Room Clerks	1.50	20 "
Orderly Room Sergeants	1.50	20 "
Pay Sergeants	1.50	20 "
Squad., Batt., or Co. Sergt-Major	1.60	20 "
Colour-Sergeant or Staff-Sergeant.	1.60	20 "
Squad., Batt., or Co. Q.M.S.	1.50	20 "
Sergeants	1.35	15 "
Lance-Sergeants	1.15	15 "
Corporals	1.10	10 "
Lance-Corporals	1.05	10 "
Bombardiers, or Second Corporals	1.05	10 "
Trumpeters, Buglers, and Drummers	1.00	10 "
Privates, Gunners, Drivers	1.00	10 "
Sappers, Batmen, etc.	1.00	10 "

As in the case of those already gone overseas, Separation Allowances will be available for those dependent for livelihood upon selected men. The Separation Allowance is $20.00 per month for the rank and file, $25.00 for sergeants and staff-sergeants and $30.00 for warrant officers. The experience is that many men can afford to assign half their pay to dependents, in addition.

A considerable number of men who have enlisted in the Canadian forces have found themselves better off under the army rate of pay, which is granted in addition to board, lodging, clothing, equipment, transportation, etc., than they were while in civilian positions. Their wants are provided for, and they receive a steady addition to the bank account each month.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Stolen Diamond

A Case of Double Detective Work.

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

One winter when congress was in session I was invited to the national capital to spend a week with my friend Jim Treusdall in company with others, forming a very pleasant house party. Jim had not been long married, and I was a bachelor. I have always thought that his wife got up the affair especially for my benefit and that of Miss Mildred Sweet. Mrs. Jim desiring to make a match between us. If she did she had no trouble, so far as I was concerned, for I had not been acquainted with Miss Sweet ten minutes before I remarked to myself, "That's the girl I am looking for."

I have a theory that a good way to win a girl is to conjure up something in which you and she may have a mutual interest. Fortune favored me in this wise:

One evening at dinner Mrs. Jim showed plainly that something had happened. She said nothing to any of the guests and when they spoke to her replied in monosyllables. Treusdall labored hard to keep a certain amount of life in the party, but was not successful.

After dinner Jim took me up to a little den he used to hide away in and told me what was the matter. His wife had lost a diamond as big as a hickory nut. It had been handed down to her from five generations and been turned over to her on her wedding day. She had taken it out of its receptacle to wear it that evening at a reception that was to occur at the White House and had left it on her bureau while giving some directions about the dinner.

He had no sooner told me this than it recurred to me to make a detective of myself for the purpose of discovering the thief and to take Miss Sweet into the business with me. By interesting her in the case I hoped eventually to turn that interest from the gem to myself.

I asked Jim a good many questions, but only elicited the information that every servant in the house during his wife's absence from her room was downstairs and quite busy, most of them with the preparations for the dinner. The men guests were all in the billiard room. Two of the women guests were dressing in their rooms for dinner and after that the function at the White House. A third, a widow, Mrs. Jernegan, with a little daughter, five years old, had finished her toilet and was assisting her nurse to put the child to bed.

Mrs. Jernegan was my first choice for the thief. Women who are not dressed don't run about in another person's house, and Mrs. Jernegan was the only person on the floor at the time the stone was lost. I went to the White House reception with Miss Sweet and during the evening told her about the loss and began to excite her curiosity as to who could have been the thief.

"It would be a nice thing," I said, "if you and I, working together, could recover the stone and turn it back to the rightful owner."

"Indeed, it would," she said, "but how can we do that?"

"I don't know that we can, but we can try."

I confided to her that I suspected Mrs. Jernegan. She did not especially fancy the widow, but could hardly bring herself to feel that she had stolen the diamond. I told Miss Sweet that she, being a woman, could keep an eye on the suspect better than I, and she agreed to do so.

I had a little scheme up my sleeve to compel Mrs. Jernegan to show her colors if she were guilty. Of course that was not proving her guilty or getting back the stone, but it would serve for a clew. I invited a party, including Mrs. Jernegan, to visit the capitol. Miss Sweet was, of course, with us. After showing the party through the building I took them up into the dome. There is a whispering gallery in this dome in which a voice speaking on one side can be heard at the other. Leaving the widow on one side of the dome, I took Miss Sweet halfway round the semicircle, and, watching till Mrs. Jernegan was separated from the others, I suggested to Miss Sweet to put her mouth near the wall and whisper the words, "What did you do with it?"

She did so, and the effect was instantaneous and unmistakable. The widow staggered, turned pale and looked hurriedly about her. When she turned her eyes upon us we were looking down on to the marble floor far below.

My companion was delighted with the success of my device. She seemed to be struck with surprise and admiration at what she was pleased to call my ingenuity. I was more interested in Miss Sweet than in the thief. I disclaimed any great shrewdness—indeed, thus far I was simply lucky. But I must keep up the illusion. I must find some method of learning from the widow what she had done with the diamond.

And here I showed that instead of being an experienced detective I was a mere bungler. I permitted the widow to discover by keeping a watch over her that I suspected her. I knew that she was aware that I did suspect her, for she showed me plainly that she feared me. Doubtless she would have taken or sent away the diamond (if she had it), but Treusdall, at my suggestion, would not permit any one to leave the place without being searched, the guests volunteering to submit to the ordeal if they were obliged to leave before the gem was found.

I held long deliberations with Miss Sweet, who was now profoundly interested in the case. These deliberations, besides giving us something in common, enabled me to be a good deal with her. I hoped, if I made any further progress, to lead my assistant to think that it was her ingenuity or perceptive faculty that was doing the work and not mine.

"I have made a discovery," said Miss Sweet to me one day, with great glee.

"You don't mean it!" I replied. "Have you found where the gem is concealed?"

"No. I have discovered that Mrs. Jernegan's nursemaid shares her secret with her."

"How so?"

"They know that we are watching them. Whenever the nurse sees me looking at her she quails."

"It's two against two, isn't it?"

"Yes, and we'll beat them yet."

"No doubt of it."

"Have you anything to suggest?"

"Well, no; not just now."

We saw the nurse go out with her charge and knew that every afternoon she took the child to a little park in the neighborhood. Treusdall should not have permitted this, but he said that it wouldn't do to keep the little girl in the house. I proposed to Miss Sweet that we walk out, follow the nurse to the park and see if we could learn anything. She consented, and, getting her hat and wraps, we sallied forth.

We soon saw the nurse walking slowly, the child trotting along, either beside or behind her, carrying a toy balloon. We measured our pace to suit theirs, and they entered the park without knowing that we were near them. A moment later the nurse turned and, suddenly seeing us, gave an involuntary start.

"The plot thickens," I remarked to my companion. "I'll bet that this nurse, being permitted to leave the house, will get rid of the diamond."

"Suppose she has it with her now?" said Miss Sweet.

"It's possible."

"I have never seen her so agitated as when she turned and saw us behind her."

"You are on the track. You made the discovery that she was in league with her mistress. Suppose we let her see by our acts and the expressions of our faces that we are watching her. It may drive her into doing something that will expose her."

By this time the nurse had taken a seat on a bench, while the child played about with her balloon. On several occasions she let go the string, the balloon rose, and the nurse caught it only in time to save it. We walked by the woman and as we did so stared at her ominously. She trembled like a leaf. We walked on a short distance and turned. The child's balloon had escaped and was caught in the branches of a tree overhanging the seat where the nurse sat. The child was crying for her toy, and the nurse was trying to quiet her.

"I'll buy you another, dearie," she said. "That one has gone where one can't get it."

The nurse spoke the truth. Only a long ladder would enable any one to reach the toy. It had lodged some thirty feet from the ground. As I walked past the tree I looked up at it. I noticed that the string attached to it hung straight. I suggested nothing at first, but presently I asked my companion:

"Do you notice how straight that string hangs? Is it caught on a branch, and does the balloon keep it taut?"

"No; the balloon is against a bough. But there is something—very small—tied to the end of the string."

"So there is."

I glanced at the nurse, who knew we were talking about the balloon, and saw she was holding her breath from suspense. I called some boys who were playing near and offered any of them a quarter who would climb the tree and bring down the balloon. One of the boys took my offer, and in a few minutes I was in possession of the toy. At the end of the string was a bit of tissue paper. In the paper was the diamond.

I looked around for the nurse. She had vanished.

The delight both of myself and Miss Sweet may be imagined. We started to the house with the little girl. Far down the street we saw the nurse running ahead of us. It did not occur to us what she was going to the house for till we got there, when we discovered that she had warned her mistress and gone on. Before saying a word to any one I took the stone to Treusdall, and we had a long consultation. We had no proof against the widow, and since she was a connection of Jim's he decided to tell her that her maid had stolen the diamond and not intimate to her that she herself was supposed to have been an accomplice. This would avoid any unpleasantness.

When the matter was given out to the guests I told them all that the find was entirely due to Miss Sweet's ingenuity and foresight. She was the cloness of the party from that moment till we broke up and generally became convinced that she had done it all herself.

That gave me a good start, and in time I won—not a stone, but a woman.

Friends Vainly Try To Change Mind Of Miss M. Thompson

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Realizing that Miss Margaret Thompson, 390 Victoria street, will not be released from jail unless she adopts one of the only two courses that lead to her liberty, friends and relatives have approached her in the last few days in an endeavour to get her to act in what they consider her own interests.

With the last hope gone that she will be released by any court without an appeal on her part, or her obedience of the high court judge's order, her relatives and friends have pleaded and argued with her in vain to change her mind.

Miss Thompson was committed to the county jail over three months ago because she refused to give information leading to the whereabouts of her niece, Jean Link, or produce the child in court as ordered. After remaining in jail over three months, she refuses to disclose the information, the one course that would immediately gain her liberty, and also refuses to appeal to a high court judge for her freedom on the grounds that she had "purged herself of the contempt," in view of the fact that she had served three months.

Nothing More Possible.

These are the only two ways in which she can gain her liberty now that the minister of justice and the attorney-general has refused to act, but as she continues to remain obdurate in her stand, despite the pleadings and arguments of friends, there seems to be nothing more that can be done for her. Her stand is that she is right in her contention for the possession of the child, notwithstanding that the high court judges awarded the child to the father, William Link, 89 Mamelon street, after one year of litigation.

Miss Thompson still maintains that the dictates of her conscience will not permit her to act differently in the future than in the past, and consequently she elects to remain silent and stay in jail.

Father's Stand Unchanged.

William Link, the father of the girl, stated to-day that he was unchanged in his attitude with respect to the case. His position in the matter is that the case was fought out in the courts, that he was awarded the child by the judges and Miss Thompson refused to obey, consequently she must expect to abide by the result of her disobedience to the court order. His desire, he stated, was to get possession of his child, who he has not seen for over seven years, and with that end in view, he expressed the hope that Miss Thompson would obey the court order and deliver up the child. He still thinks that Jean may be dead, and will not be convinced that she is alive until produced.

Whitby Would Develop Poets as Well as Printers and Pressmen.

WHITBY, Ont., Oct 4.—Poets as well as printers among the returned soldiers at the Whitby Military Convalescent Hospital will have opportunity to develop when the press, which is being bought from canteen profits, is installed.

The patients are going to get out a paper and according to the boys, several of whom were newspaper men before they enlisted, "it's going to be some sheet." To prove it a whole sheaf of literary gems garnered in the wards is flourished before the doubters.

The paper will give many of the men a chance to learn the printers as well as compositors end of the business and provide an outlet for an abundance of talent in this centre.

All departments of a metropolitan daily will be represented, news, sports and even society. The community offers every phase of life, and according to Mr. Norman Burnette and Capt Harry Nicholson, the vocational train in gofficers who have passed on numerous poems and editorials already the enterprise is a certain success.

THE BRITISH VICTORY YESTERDAY WAS ONE OF THE GREATEST OF THE WAR

Germans So Badly Defeated By Field Marshal Haig's Thrust That They Were Unable to Make Counter Attacks---Australian and New Zealand Troops Shared in the Glory of the Victory With Imperial Forces--French Repulse Surprise Attacks

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 5. — The Germans have undertaken no further counter attacks against the positions east of Ypres gained by the British in yesterday's offensive, although they kept them under a heavy fire during the night. The British are consolidating their newly won ground. The following official statement was given out to-day: "Our new positions east of Ypres were heavily shelled by the enemy during the night, but no further counter attacks were made. Our troops have been engaged with organizing captured positions. A hostile raiding party endeavoured to enter our trenches last night north of Gouzeavcourt but was driven off with loss."

All over Britain to-day the victory is being acclaimed as one of the greatest since the war started. It is pointed out that the Germans were apparently so badly defeated following Haig's thrust that they are not able to make counter attacks of any moment.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT.

This morning's official statement of the big British victory in Flanders indicates that the Mother Country and Australian troops were prominent in the action. The statement says: "The assault was delivered by English, Australian and New Zealand divisions. Included among the British troops were battalions from twenty-eight English counties. There were also two battalions from Scotland, Ireland and Wales.

"At all points rapid progress was made from the start.

"The enemy's losses throughout the whole fighting have been exceedingly heavy, being greatly increased by the unusual number of German troops on the battle front at the opening of our attack.

"Our casualties have been light.

In addition to prisoners taken we also captured a few guns and much other war material.

"The villages of Beutel and Noordenhoek were captured by English troops, who also secured the high ground overlooking Becelaere, east of Ypres.

"Australian regiments took the village of Broodseinde and established themselves well over the ridge five miles east of Ypres."

PARIS, October 5.—French troops during last night repulsed German surprise attacks in Champagne and in Upper Alsace, the official statement from the War Office to-day says. There was violent artillery activity along the right bank of the Meuse in the Verdun region.

PETROGRAD, October 5.—Premier Kerensky has again asserted his authority and defied the Democratic Congress by announcing a new coalition government, which was exactly what the Democratic Congress declared against. Further than that Kerencky has announced that the new cabinet will include members of the Constitutional Democratic party which was bitterly opposed by the Congress. Thus the political situation in Russia has again become acute.

BRITAIN DECIDES ON AIR REPRISALS

What Will Be in Effect "A Department of Retaliation" is Answer to the Public Demand—General South Likely to Be Selected as Man in Charge

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, October 5.—What will be in effect a "Department of retaliation" is England's answer to-day to the public demand that the German sky devil be fought with fire. The War Cabinet decided to carry out an elaborate programme of strict retaliation on German cities for German airmen's murder raids over English cities. It will be practically an air offensive of tremendous proportion. General South, who, with Premier Lloyd George, is credited with inventing aerial barrage which has proven partly successful in repelling raiders on London, appeared likely to-day to be selected as the man in charge of the new aero department. He will operate independently of the Royal Flying Corps of the army, or the Royal Naval Aero Service, but will call on both these branches for co-operation. The first fruit of this decision that England must return measure for measure, was seen to-day in orders for a speeding up of aeroplane production. Officials realize that if a strict eye for eye policy of air raiding is carried out, and if a great aerial offensive is to achieve its aim of sweeping the German bomb droppers from the sky, a great number of aeroplanes kept on patrol and fense duty over England, can be sent to swell the fighting forces utilized by Field Marshal Haig.

MOTOR CAR IS DAMAGED

The car belonging to Mr. Joseph Minicolo, which he was driving, accompanied by four other members of the 57th Band, skidded on the pavement in turning the corner from Simcoe to Aylmer street, the party heading for Millbrook Fair at 1.30 to-day. The car struck the electric pole, smashing the front axle and bending the fender. The party, none the worse for the unfortunate start, rented another car from Jones' Livery, and up to going to press no further mishaps had overtaken the musical quintette.

CONSCRIPTION MUST STAND

This is the Position Sir Wilfrid Laurier is Taking and He Will Resign if Quebec Liberals Fail to Fall in Line

IS LAW OF THE LAND

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 5.—Political developments at the Capital so far are of comparative national unimportance. It is generally recognized here that union is set far from read accomplishment. Real union will depend very largely on the attitude taken by the Western Liberals at the conference which commences to-day. What that attitude will be is at present problematical and nobody seems inclined to venture any guesses on the subject. The general impression appears to be that everybody is waiting to see what Sir Wilfrid Laurier will do. And Sir Wilfrid is still keeping his own counsel and remains sphynx-like as ever. He has returned from his second visit to Montreal and still remains inscrutable as to his intentions. It is certain that the Western Liberals will not confine their conference to one side only, but that they will, while here, also consult the Liberal Chieftain. There will be no conference with Sir Robert Borden this morning at any rate.

The Ottawa Citizen this morning publishes editorially the following signification comment upon the Liberal Leader's standing: 'The Citizen does not pretend to be in the confidence of the Liberal party any more than it can claim to be the depository of the political secrets of the Conservative organization, but it is obvious that the political situation as it exists at present is being obscured for purely partisan purposes. And that the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is being misrepresented in the administration press.

"The matter of union government is not related in any way to the position assumed by Sir Wilfrid. The facts are that the Quebec wing of the Liberal party insist upon the leader agreeing to rescind the conscription measure and to make this a promise to the Quebec element before election.

With anti-conscription as a war cry the province, this element asserts, could be swept for the Liberals. But Sir Wilfrid has, according to the best information, absolutely refused to agree to this proposition. He takes the stand that conscription is now the law of the land, that it must be obeyed, and that, come what may, it must stand on the statute books as far as the calling to colours of the required hundred thousand men is concerned.

Sir Wilfrid's Alternative.

The Liberal leader has placed his alternative before the Quebec section. If this element will not accept his view he will at once step down. Only on condition that the law as it stands will be respected and obeyed in Que-

TREMENDOUS FOE LOSSES

British Barrage Was the Fiercest Yet, a Veritable Cloudburst of Steel Rain Which Melted Enemy Trench Line Away

SOME HOT FIGHTING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

With the British Armies in the Field, Oct. 5, 1917.—(By William Phillip Simms).—The British bulldog held fast to-day to the great bite on which his vice-like jaws closed yesterday morning. Close to the vital centre of Germany's positions in Belgium, German counter attacks failed. Hot fighting was still in progress today, as the Tommies consolidated their victories on the main Passchendaele ridge.

TREMENDOUS LOSSES.

Every man in the stream of German prisoners which flowed back to the cages, vouched for the tremendous losses suffered by the enemy in Haig's latest and master stroke. No such barrage as that which the British guns wove in front of the attacking Tommies, has ever been seen in the war. It was a veritable cloud burst of steel rain. It melted the enemy trenches away—it cleft whole lines of German troops. It was this unprecedented curtain of fire which made the work of troops in reaching the first objectives comparatively easy.

One position thus carried contained a dismal remnant of a company which had lost practically its whole bayonet strength.

Over all the eight mile front of the attack the commanders reported today that groups of Germans and Bavarians came in, hands aloft and shouting "Kamerad" the first minute after rain of British steel dropped near their lines.

But there was desperately hot fighting in numerous spots. Behind the preliminary trench lines the enemy had spotted fields with "pill boxes" or with machine gun detachments cleverly hidden in patches of wood or deceptive shell craters. Bombers and "moppers up" encountered determined resistance here.

A TROUBLE SPOT.

Polderhook Wood was particularly a trouble spot. The German machine gun nests literally studded the ground but a concerted assault finally silenced them. No sooner had the British achieved their brilliant success than the enemy flung his reserves into counter attack. The strongest of these early blows came from above Broodseinde, but it was broken up quickly. As this desaptch is written headquarters reports show that British attackers near Gravenstafel and further north are having trouble in dislodging the enemy and in crossing the Stroombeek, but are slowly pressing on. Troops a little below are reported briskly advancing on both sides of the stream. One great lumbering tank was observed advancing near Poelcapelle. Every company commander report, as it came to headquarters today, showed that the German Prince, Rupprecht, has received another and staggering blow.

Enjoy the Turkey

You don't know how much better the Thanksgiving turkey tastes when you are wearing a stylish pair of shoes on which you had saved enough by buying them at the Peterborough Shoe Store to almost pay for the turkey. That may sound big at the present price of turkeys, but listen to this special bargain for Saturday on your holiday shoes. We bought right a line of ladies' high top, black kid boots, with a nice average toe, short vamp, heels that anyone can wear, all sizes. PETERBOROUGH CLUB SUGGESTED AS HEADQUARTERS FOR WAR VETERANS

LLOYD GEORGE AT THE EISTEDDOFOD.

Mr. Lloyd George drew a moral from the Eisteddofod, which he addressed at Birkenhead, Sept. 6th. The first condition of the work of this ancient institution, he said, was that all difference should be sunk and thus it had a lesson for this tremendous hour of fate, the lesson of national unity in the greatest enterprise this country had ever embarked upon. The photo shows Mr. Lloyd George addressing the meeting.

Secretary Knight's Eloquent Address the Feature of Last Night's Meeting — Splendid Exposition of Aims and Ideals of the G. W. V. A.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED

As a result of last night's meeting called by Mayor Duffus to discuss ways and means of providing suitable headquarters for Peterborough's Great War Veterans, a committee composed of Mrs. W. R. Morris, His Worship, the Mayor, Messrs. G. N. Gordon and J. J. Turner, representing the citizens, and Comrades H. J. Staunton, George Toone and Sidney Whatley, representing the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans Association, will meet the directors of the Peterborough Club with a view of endeavouring to make arrangements for the use of the Club's quarters by the Veterans. The Committee will have power also to look at other quarters and will report back to another meeting to be held in the near future.

If there were any doubts in any one's minds as to the duty the people of Canada owe to their returned soldiers or as to the aims and ideals of the G.W.V.A. and the value of the work, it is carrying on, they were speedily dispelled last night by the magnificent address given by Comrade N. F. R. Knight of Ottawa, the Dominion Secretary of the War Veterans.

Mr. Knight's fervid speech made a deep and lasting impression upon his audience, who were held firmly in the grip of his eloquence. His address was logical and forcible, presenting the case of the returned soldier from many angles, and the remarks of the citizens who followed him, left no doubts as to the impression he created. It is hoped that before long many more citizens of Peterborough will have an opportunity of hearing Mr. Knight, as he will likely be here to address a meeting in the Opera House when the War Veterans' campaign is launched.

A Representative Meeting.

Last night's meeting was a representative one with a good showing of ladies present. The War Veterans had a large delegation present, the Active Service button and the G. W. V. A. insignia being strongly in evidence.

Mayor Duffus, on motion, took the chair, and opened the meeting. He said it was hardly necessary to explain the object of the gathering. It was generally known that the present quarters of the Veterans were inadequate and the accommodation not in keeping with what the men deserved. The Veterans were entitled to every consideration. They had not made the name of Peterborough but the name of Canada greater, and citizens were proud that by reason of them this city held a record second only to Winnipeg in the number of recruits raised, according to population. This, in itself, was sufficient reason why the men who had returned should be given every consideration.

As to what should be done His Worship was not prepared to say. It had been suggested that a property be bought and given to the Veterans, and dedicated as a memorial to the Peterborough men who had made the supreme sacrifice. This might not meet with the approval of everyone, and there were those who had lost their dear ones at the front who should be consulted in regard to a memorial.

Mayor Duffus reminded his hearers that there were many demands upon the city and that the financing of Peterborough during the next few

ADMIRAL DEWEY HEARD HUN PLANS IN 1898

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 5—Prediction that Germany would wage war for world conquest in about 15 years, was made to the late Admiral Dewey at Manilla in 1898 by Capt. von Goetz, of the German imperial army, Senator Lewis yesterday told the senate.

Quoting a report from Admiral Dewey to the navy department, the Illinois senator said that von Goetz told the American naval officer that Germany would capture Paris as the first step of subtugating England. The taking of New York and Washington was to follow in order that Germany might secure an enormous cash indemnity.

The wiping out of the Munroe Doctrine and the control of South America by Germany also were predicted by the German officer, declared Senator Lewis, who was discussing peace negotiatione.

SAYS W. R. HEARST HAD BOLO AS SOCIAL GUEST

Attorney-Gen. of N.Y. Issues Statement on Spy-Suspect —What Royal Bank Says—"None of Companies and Banks Had Knowledge of Original Source or Destination"

HOW MONEY MOVED

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The investigation of the State Attorney-General, Merton E. Lewis, into the activities here of Bolo Pasha, under arrest in France as spy and peace propagandist, disclosed that William Randolph Hearst, the newspaper publisher, attended a dinner given in this city by Bolo, in March, 1916, according to the Attorney-General.

There were present at this dinner, Mr. Lewis told newspaper men, Adolf Pavenstedt, who figured as an intermediary for the transfer of German funds into New York banks to be sent to Paris for peace propaganda among French newspapers, Captains Boy-Ed and Von Papen, naval and military attaches of the German Embassy, and Jules Bois, a French lecturer, who, it was revealed, received money from Bolo Pasha. Sometime prior to this dinner, Mr. Lewis said, Mr. Hearst had entertained Bolo at the editor's home. It was explained by the Attorney-General that the editor's relations with Bolo were purely social as far he was aware.

The Attorney-General was busy today examining further witnesses in the Bolo Pasha matter. Further disclosures are expected.

Schmidt Appears.

Evidence indicating how the German Foreign Office placed at the disposal of Count Von Bernstorff by wireless funds for Bolo Pasha, was obtained to-day from Hugo Schmidt, agent here of the Deutsche Bank, by State Attorney General Lewis.

Subpoenaed to appear before the Attorney General to-day, Schimdt produced the text of eight wireless telegrams in code exchanged between him and the German Foreign Office in March and April, 1916, while Bolo was in this country. The messages authorized Schmidt to place at the disposal of Count Von Bernstorff more than a million and a half dollars held in the Guaranty Trust Company to the account of the Deutsche Bank.

In these messages Von Bernstorff was referred to as Charles Gledhill, the German Foreign Office was known as William Foxley, and the Guaranty Trust Company was called Fred Hooven.

The messages, said Mr. Lewis, served as links in a chain of evidence showing how German money was transferred to France by way of New York.

None Had Knowledge.

From the Guaranty Trust Co. the money made its way by a system of cashier's checks to G. Amsinck and Co., exporters, to the Royal Bank of Canada, to J. P. Morgan and Co., in New York, and thence to Paris. By this method, none of the companies and banks had knowledge of the original source of the money or its destination.

Schmidt himself claimed to-day to be only the "ignorant representative" of his bank, doing what he was told to do in blind obedience and not knowing to what purpose the money was to be put. Mr. Lewis intimated he was inclined to place credence in Schimdt's protests.

It was at the request of Von Bernstorff, according to the State Attorney, that Schmidt wirelessed to Berlin for authority to pay over money to the then Ambassador. All the messages came and went by way of Sayville.

Schmidt was the only witness examined to-day, but the investigation is by no means concluded, Mr. Lewis said. Thus far no evidence has been uncovered which can be made the basis of prosecution of any person in this country, he asserted. The sole purpose of the enquiry at present, Mr. Lewis explained, is to aid the French Government in the prosecution of Bolo Pasha and others who have been involved with him.

It was explained that the events indicated in the evidence all took place before America entered the war, and nothing tends to show a violation of American neutrality.

Royal Bank's Statement.

Montreal, Oct. 4.— Enquiry at the head office of the Royal Bank of Canada regarding the report of the financial operations of Bolo Pasha, now under arrest in Paris as a German spy, in New York, elicited the following statement:

"No transactions of any unusual nature have taken place in the agency of the Royal Bank of Canada in New York. Bolo Pasha was introduced to the Royal Bank by its Paris bankers. A deposit account was opened, but after a short time the funds were withdrawn and transferred to J. P. Morgan & Co. Insofar as the Royal Bank is concerned, the transaction was entirely regular, and the New York office had not the slightest suspicion that the depositor had any connection with Von Bernstorff or the German Government."

The house of Thomas Chatterton is divided against itself. Indulged by their wealthy father, Joseph, the son, is an inebriate, and Anne, his sister, a social butterfly, neglectful of her babe and her husband. The old man lives in solitude.

Edith Conway comes to visit the Chattertons and finds herself distinctly out of place. She is of a different type. Thomas Chatterton finds in Edith a long wished for companion. Joseph accuses the girl of designs on her father's wealth. The boy in a delirium attempts to stab his father, but Edith arrests his action.

From then on the girl exercises a peculiar influence over the entire family. Slowly she spreads a gospel of love and kindness hitherto unknown there. Anne is drawn back to her babe and husband on the eve of becoming entangled with a designing young society man. Had $340 Stolen At London Fair

John Stitt of Blantyre, P.O., Grey County, lost $340 at the London Fair, and reading of the capture of pickpocket suspects in Peterborough, wrote Chief Thompson, giving the description of the bills. This is one of the cases which the Chief was holding in reserve for further investigation until the four prisoners had been brought to trial on other charges. Mr. Stitt's complaint was not the only one that hadn't been cleared up, and because there were these uncertainties pending the Police Department keenly feels the admittance of three of the suspects to bail without the slightest intimation that bail was being accepted, and that the prisoners were about to be liberated.

There is a flavour of American Court methods, according to the opinion expressed in police circles, where this case has left a bad taste that will linger even if the three men return for trial next Tuesday.

MILITARY NEWS

service since the Medical Board commenced is Garfield Torrance, of 460 Park street, who has enlisted with the Forestry Depot. Pte. Torrance was overseas with the 93rd Battalion band. On coming up for examiantion by the Board he was put in A2 category and has lost no time in enlisting. Capt. Potts has established a recruiting office in the dressing room of the armouries and will be prepared to take men for any branch of the service except artillery or engineers. This is the only chance for a man to voluntarily select what unit he dishes to go to, as after the proclamation is issued a week from to-morrow, there is no choice.

Yesterday's sessions of the Medical Board showed a total of twenty-two men considered fit for the trenches, exactly the same number placed in A category on Wednesday. In all 43 candidates were examined, which is the record day's work so far. In two cases the decision of the Board was held over for further consideration.

The morning's session brought out a good clas sof men and eleven out of seventeen were found fit for Class A. In the afternoon the reverse was the case and out of eleven who were tested only two were pronounced of sufficiently good physique for the firing line, over half of the number examined being rejected altogether.

In the evening, when fifteen men went before the doctors, the quality improved and nine were placed in the A category, with the result that the day's figures show that a little over 50 per cent. were considered as physically capable to stand the hardships of active service.

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—Returns are to hand here which show the success attending the creation of Medical Boards prior to the formal calling up of the first class under the military service act. Up to and including Saturday, Sept. 29, there were 12,658 men who submitted themselves to voluntary medical examination. This includes all the military districts in the Dominion. Of the 12,658, no fewer than 7,491 were placed in medical category "A"—the category of men deemed to be fit for general service overseas.

During the last week Military District No. 2, with headquarters at Toronto, ranked first in the number of medical examinations. Military District No. 4, with headquarters at Montreal, came second, and Military District No. 10, with headquarters at Winnipeg, came third.

The Serious Sayings Of Funny Folks

Scene: Somewhere in Peterborough.

Characters: Mr. Director Grasp and Sir Joseph Flathell.

Time: A week later.

Mr. D. G.—Good morning, Sir Joseph; I hope you're feeling fit for Thanksgiving.

Sir J. F.—Not too bad, and I guess we've a lot to be thankful for this year. Whilst I would have liked to see another million or two profit on our bacon, I'm expecting a good make-up on butter and eggs, this winter.

Mr. D. G.—Oh, I don't know; see what a lot we've lost through the British Government not buying.

Sir J. F.—We've made that right by raising the price to the home consumer, and our stocks are growing, and the B. G. will have to buy presently; then we shall do better than ever.

Mr. D. G.—Yes, but suppose they set a price?

Sir J. F.—Oh! don't worry. My Aunt Hanna knows all about that, and she says they are drawing attention from us by talking about potatoes and fish and meatless days and incapable middlemen in our line as our cold storage arrangements enable us to freeze 'em out.

Mr. D. G.—Well, I hopes you're right; now what did you do about that feller, Paskins?

Sir J. F.—Oh, my! That's a very bad man. He was really disrespectful to me; told me he would sell at what prices he liked and intended to offer another lot of hams at 29c per lb. for Thanksgiving.

Mr. D. G.—Lor', is that so? It's a good job they don't make the likes of him Food Controller or we'd not get any more profit than the producers and retailers.

Sir J. F.—He's a terrible nuisance. While I was there I heard him say that he was going to sell lard at 3 lbs. for 93c, and shortening at 3 lbs. for 72c.

Mr. D. G.—It's horrible! And it's the same with everything he sells. I hear he's selling on Saturday, Cabbage at 2c each, and potatoes at 30 cents a peck, best pickling vinegar at 40c a gal., and he even says he's going to sell all 10c goods at 3 for 28c, 13c goods at 2 for 24c, and 15c goods at 2 for 29c.

Sir J. F.—Well, I can't think what to do with him. I think we must call a meeting of the Profiteers' Association, and see what can be done. You arrange to take a party of them to his store, on the corner of Hunter and Aylmer, and let them see for themselves, and tell some of them to call him up on Phone 317 and ask his prices, so they can judge for themselves.

Mr. D. G.—All right, Sir Joseph. I'll attend to it.

Peterborough Club Suggested As Headquarters For War Veterans

years would not be a small matter. The best way was to talk the matter over frankly and decide on what was best to be done. He then introduced Mr. Knight who was enthusiastically received.

Caught His Audience.

"When the soldiers started to come home from the front," he commenced, "some people used to call them loafers and kickers, and apply many other similar epithets. When we started to organize our Association in Winnipeg there was criticism. They said we would go to pieces; that we couldn't develop leadership. Well, we are now an organized body of 23,780 veterans, over 96 per cent. of the men who have come from overseas, with 89 branches throughout the country. There is no lack of organization or leadership. There is no job in the Dominion of Canada that I can't get a man capable of filling among our members. I don't care what the job is, but we still maintain that the man in khaki is on the biggest job of all."

Only Want a Square Deal.

"We don't ask for what is not deserved," continued Mr. Knight. "This is an effort on behalf of the returned soldiers, by which they can help themselves. The returned soldier still feels that he owes a duty to the state—that he must, as far as possible, carry on a useful occupation when he comes back. The G. W. V. A. will be a great factor in this country, making for a new citizenship, a citizenship purified by sacrifice and suffering. Men are not going to be judged, after this conflict is over, by what they got out of the war, but by what they put into it. That man will be poor, no matter how much riches he has, who has not measured up to the test.

"We often hear people say they are tired of the war, tired of talking about, tired of reading of it. They generally mean tired of giving. Think of the men who went out with me in the first few days of the war with the 1st Gordon Highlanders, and fought through the retreat from Mons. There are a few of them left there yet. Think you not that they are tired? Worse than the machine guns and the shrapnel, and the cold, and the dirt, and the vermin, is the exile from the loved ones. Hearts are breaking over there, carrying burdens too great to bear. All we ask is that a square deal be given them."

Reinforcements Wanted.

"We have been forced to put aside some of our grievances that we may see that reinforcements are sent to our comrades. We are on record that that was our first purpose. We are about to get them."

"But now that the State has taken hold of the men who must go and risk their lives why should not the State take that which the man who stays at home has, and place that in the struggle?"

Familiar Promises.

Mr. Knight reminded his hearers of the promises that had been made when the troops went away. "There will be nothing too good for you when you come back," the mayors of many cities had told their citizen soldiers. "You all remember that?" asked Mr. Knight. He went on to point out the necessity of the War Veterans' organization sticking together. This was necessary when such men as Mr. Denyss of the C.P.R., suggested putting the returned soldier in a concentration camp. Other men said, "Give him a gratuity of $25, $50 or $75 and get rid of him. He never had that much money at any one time in his life." Even the Military Service Council had published an advertisement which was nothing less than a falsehood, as it insinuated that many men in the army had been much better off financially than they were before.

"The returned soldier doesn't want something for nothing," said Mr. Knight, emphatically. "He doesn't take the position that he fought for his country and now his country must keep him. Men of that stamp never saw France — most of them never meant to see France. You'll find that the real returned man is as anxious to serve in a civil capacity as he was in khaki. They are the kind that are going to make this old Dominion a changed country. Everybody knows that a man cannot go through what is virtually Hell without being a changed man. Men are thinking differently. This old sod feels pretty good when you get back to it. We can't be indifferent or indolent any longer.

"I don't want you to think we are looking for something for nothing. If you think we are asking you for a building so that we can have a good time and for entertainment, you are away off. We don't want a lounging place, a rendezvous for loafers. We only have contempt for that class. We want a place where we can work for the good of each other and for the benefit of the dependents of those who have gone—a place where the element of sympathy will be infused with common sense and reason.

The Work at Ottawa.

For the next few minutes Mr. Knight explained to his audience some of the pathetic cases that have been dealt with by the G.W.V.A. He gave names and particulars in a manner that left no doubt as to the accuracy of his statements, and it was evident that this portion of his address was a revelation to his hearers. Every week, he said, his office dealt with over 300 cases of dependents not receiving the money they were entitled to, of inadequate pensions of men being discharged before they were fit to take up the duties of civilian life. Each of these cases was taken up with the particular department at fault.

Many young boys had gone overseas too young, but they had fought bravely and were heroes every inch of them. These boys had sacrificed their youth, had become men too quick. Mr. Knight asked his hearers to be patient with them when they came back, some of them perhaps a little wild. They were worth fighting for, and the War Veterans were going to be older brothers to these youngsters.

Proud of Canada.

"We are a body of earnest thinking citizens," said Mr. Knight. "This old country means a lot to us. It is dearer and more precious now because it has cost us something."

"I never was so proud of anything as I am that I am a Canadian, that I was born in this country. I do not say that to reflect on the Englishmen. I never realized what a wonderful people they were over there until I went over. Each one of us who has returned is an Imperialist in every sense of the word. I wouldn't change places with Sir Joseph Flavelle if he had twice as many millions as he has. My conscience is clear as regards my duty in this war.

"In this city," said Mr. Knight in conclusion, "you owe your boys a building. Give it to them, no matter what it costs. It won't hurt the city's credit so much to provide what they want as it will hurt the city's conscience if it fails to do its duty. Be as true to them as they have tried to be true to you."

The impression that Mr. Knight's speech made was indicated by the enthusiastic applause that followed.

The Discussion.

The Mayor then threw the meeting open for discussion.

"I am converted," said Mr. J. J. Turner, President of the Board of Trade, the first speaker. "Anything in reason these boys want they can have as far as I am concerned."

Mr. Turner paid an enthusiastic tribute to Mr. Knight's eloquence. As regards the proposal that the War Veteran building should be a memorial to those who had been killed, Mr. Turner thought that perhaps a monument would be more permanent. That was a matter for discussion, however. What the War Veterans needed was suitable headquarters, and he was prepared to assist them in any way possible.

Mr. G. N. Gordon made a novel suggestion to the effect that every member of the Great War Veterans' Association might be made a life member of the Peterborough Club, and thus they could use the splendid building as they wished, making the Club their headquarters and having the same privileges as the other members.

Mr. R. R. Hall was of the opinion that it might be well to develop Mr. Gordon's suggestion and consider an arrangement by which the quarters might be taken over entirely from the Club at cost. He suggested the formation of a committee to look into the matter.

Lieut.-Col. Miller remarked that nothing that could be done for the War Veterans would be too great. He referred to the glorious record of the Canadians overseas and was sure that the Council was proud of them and would do its share.

Mrs. W. R. Morris suggested hearing the views of the local Veterans.

President H. J. Staunton remarked that the building suggested by Mr. Gordon would do splendidly now, but he doubted if it would be large enough when all Peterborough soldiers came back. Over 4,000 had gone from Peterborough and district.

Mr. Joseph Wearing, after congratulating Mr. Knight upon his address, moved that a committee composed of Mayor Duffus, Mr. Gordon and Mr. Turner, with three members from the War Veterans, be appointed to see the Peterborough Club directors in regard to the matter. The motion was seconded by Mr. R. R. Hall.

Mrs. Morris suggested that the committee be authorized to look at other buildings and also be instructed to report back to another general meeting. These suggestions were incorporated in the motion, which was drafted by Ald. Dobbin and carried unanimously.

Mrs. Knox, president of the Kitchener League, expressed her appreciation of Mr. Knight's address and offered her assistance.

Mr. C. N. Meserve of the Y.M.C.A., said that his organization had a deep interest in the work of the Veterans because 325 of their members had enlisted. He wished the Y.M.C.A. to be placed on record as willing to co-operate in any way possible with the Great War Veterans' Association.

On motion of Mr. F. D. Kerr and Mr. Meserve, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Secretary Knight for his address after which the meeting adjourned with the singing of the National Anthem.

Delivery Problems Can Be Solved By Assistance of Women

Some women of the city have adopted a practice of placing their orders with merchants a day in advance of the required delivery. Thus, groceries are purchased to-day for delivery to-morrow, and the system has proved, as far as it has been employed, a decided boon to the grocers, who would like to have it extended. On account of the difficulty of securing delivery men, not a few grocers have had to make their own deliveries. This entails considerable extra work which could be appreciably lessened if supplies required for to-morrow were ordered to-day. This applies not only to the grocers but it is felt that it would be a benefit to nearly all the merchants. The problem of delivery has grown acute, but it can be relieved by the co-operation of consumers with the merchants. Several grocers have suggested that the women of the city should be requested to assist them in this matter.

How To Find Out About Casualties

Inquiries Should Be Sent to Ottawa by Relatives and Not to the Overseas Offices—The Procedure is Explained by the Authorities

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—In view of the fact that the Canadian military authorities overseas are almost swamped with inquiries in regard to casualties among the Canadian troops at the front, the Militia Department has thought it advisable to issue a statement showing how information may best be obtained, and describing the method employed by the authorities in handling all information received.

To begin with, it is stated that all inquiries with regard to casualties in the Canadian forces should be addressed to the Director of Records, Militia Headquarters, Ottawa, and not to the authorities overseas. All information with regard to casualties is dispensed from London, Eng., by cable as soon as it is received, and consequently the Records Office here is possessed of it at the earliest possible period. Sometimes, when casualties are heavy, it takes as long as two weeks to get details at the Record Office in England, but as soon as these details are available they are cabled to Ottawa. Information is then sent to the next of kin by telegram at the earliest possible time. Sometimes unofficial information is received by the next of kin by direct cable from the soldier's commanding officer, but of course the Militia Department can issue only information which has been confirmed.

How Information is Sought.

The procedure in obtaining information in order to reply to inquiries regarding officers and men whose names have appeared on the casualty list is as follows:

In cases of death, wounds or serious illness, first reports reach the Record Office by cable; in the event of death occurring, or the condition of the wounded or sick soldier becoming worse, the report is received through the same channel. In all other cases further particulars, with the exception of replies to inquiries from this office, reach the Record Office by mail.

On receipt of a telegram or letter asking for information, the casualty records are searched to ascertain if any later information than that already in the possession of the writer has been received. If there is any it is at once sent to the inquirer. If none has been received, an acknowledgment of the telegram or letter is sent condition and whereabout of the inquiry is being made as to the person condition and whereabouts of the soldier, and the reply when received will be communicated to him or her.

All inquiries of this nature are then sent to the section known as the War Service Message Section. Each day, according to the number received, one or more "packed" cables are sent to the officer in charge of records, London, asking the present condition and whereabouts regarding those concerning whom inquiries have been received. These cables are forwarded in code. A record is kept of the soldier inquired about, the person who makes the inquiry, also the date on which it is sent to England.

Communication of Replies.

On receipt of each 'War Service Message' cable from England steps are at once taken to decide same and to communicate the information received with the least possible delay to all concerned. A portion of the staff works each Sunday, so as to expedite the information being communicated to those concerned. The report is also entered on the casualty records of the officer or man referred to.

Copies of all telegrams and letters received or sent are placed on the individual files of each officer and soldier.

One of the curious things about the Gulf Stream is that no whales are found in it.

It is a remarkable fact that the deepests parts of the sea are in all cases very near the land.

Immaculate Conception School Fair Proves A Very Great Success

Splendid Display of Children's Work, Vegetables of All Kinds and Home Cooking—The Prize Winners

The school of the Immaculate Conception, Ashburnham, held its School Fair on Tuesday afternoon. There was a splendid display of the children's work, artistically arranged in the school hall, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

Vegetables, of every kind, fancy needle work, plain sewing, canned fruits, products of the cookery, such as bread, cakes, pie and biscuits were all harmoniously arranged for the inspection of the visitors.

The attendance was large and the work of the children much admired. The task of the judges was difficult in deciding, which was best, where all was so good.

Great praise is due the children for the excellence of their produce and due credit must be given the teachers, who guided them in their efforts, excited their interest and stimulated them to so much activity.

Other features of the day were the oratorical contests, fancy drills, and a long list of sports.

In passing through the crowd one could hear many exclamations of surprise, that children so young should accomplish so much. The same opinion was expressed at the end, in neat little speeches by Father John O'Brien and P. J. McGuire, while the countenance of Father Collins plainly registered his approval. Very Rev. Dean McColl also expressed his appreciation of the results obtained and was evidently proud of the children and the teachers of his parish.

Bishop O'Brien In Lindsay

LINDSAY, Oct. 5.—The services in connection with the Forty Hours' Devotion came to a close at St. Mary's Church Wednesday night. The closing sermon was preached by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, of Peterborough and was a strong and impressive deliverance on the necessity of saving one's soul.

The services during the past few days have been largely attended and will be productive of much blessing.

HOTELS MUST KEEP DINING ROOM

Toronto Telegram:—Reports have come to the Ontario License Board that some hotels which have secured standard licenses have closed down their dining rooms, and given notice that no meals are to be served.

"The standard hotel license calls for the regular service of meals in all hotels having this license," said Chairman J. D. Flavelle this morning, "and the dining rooms must be kept open. If the hotels shut up their dining rooms they will lose their licenses."

AUSTRIAN WARSHIP LOST FLAG IN FIGHT

DAMAGED CRUISER WAS ABLE TO LIMP INTO CATTARO HARBOR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—One Austrian officer was killed, the ship commander was seriously wounded and the Imperial flag was shot off an Austrian warship during an engagement in the Adriatic Wednesday with The Italian destroyer Aquila.

According to official cables received to-day the damaged cruiser, which sustained severe shell damage, was able to withdraw into the Cattaro, accompanied by two sister cruisers. An Italian torpedo flotilla and other units of the Italian fleet pursued the retreating Austrian ships. The Aquila, battered by shell fire and with her naphtha tank ablaze, made an Italian port.

LATEST HOLD-UP.

In the latest hold-up of a jewellery store in Montreal a woman assisted the four strong-arm men, who pounded the victim with a blackjack. The case is an exceptional one in Montreal, but it is a fact that the fair sex is breaking into some of the other sex's fields of violent activity.

No Preaching In "The Sky Pilot"

Although Ralph Connor's stories, "The Sky Pilot" and "Black Rock," were written by a clergyman, and may be considered by a few readers perhaps a little preachy, the play founded upon these novels, called "The Sky Pilot," is said to be a tense, thrilling drama of life in the old West, with not a preachy line or dull situation in the entire three acts. The Pilot, himself, as drawn by the dramatists, Frank Mandel and George H. Brennan, is a flesh-and-blood Westerner, who, though soft spoken, is a man of action, and as brave as any cowpuncher who ever drew a gun.

The play comes to the Grand Opera House on Monday next, for two performances. The cast includes Brandon Tynan, Regina Wallace, Ernest Anderson, Harry D. Southard, Eddie Heron, Louis Leon Hall, Elza Frederic, Isabelle Winlocke, Edwin Caldwell, Joseph Lawrence, Thomas Wall and Edward Broadley.

Jack Primeau's New Men's Millinery

Your hat, Sir, is now ready for Fall wear, at the "Fashion Craft" store, Hunter street. A new hat section has been fitted up, specially for select models in fine felt hats by Mr. Jack Primeau, to which the attention of men of taste and fashion is particularly directed. This new hat section will be found very convenient for the gentlemen patrons of "Fashion Craft." There will be a lively rush for these hats before Thanksgiving Day, as the blocks are distinctly new and smart for present season wear. If you have not inspected this natty display of men's fall millinery, do so soon. Many have already pronounced it the most stylish and wearable in the city.

THANKSGIVING OPENING

New Hat Section for Fashion-Craft

140 Hunter Street

Gentlemen,

U-Boats Not Beaten, Neither Need Allies Quail, Asserts Navy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Navy officials deprecated the publication of reports that go too far in either direction as to the progress of the campaign against German submarines. There is no reasonable ground, they said, for feeling that the submarines have been definitely beaten because the announced losses have decreased recently, while, on the other hand, there is nothing in the present situation that warrants serious apprehension on the part of the Allies.

The drain on Allied shipping resources still is heavy, but with steadily increasing numbers of fighting craft going into conflict against the U-boats, and with the accelerated merchant craft building programmes of Great Britain and the United States showing results, American officials have complete confidence in ultimate victory over the undersea craft.

The policy of convoying merchant craft now has been adopted by all powers. Originally, naval opinion was against this practice. Its effect, it was believed, would be merely to increase the size of the target, and under that theory merchant craft were sent zigzaging separately over unusual courses, scattering them as much as possible with the U-boats given the task of finding them.

Under the convoy arrangement, the U-boat commanders is certain of a fight if he comes to the surface, and so dares not pursue a convoyed flotilla, except when submerged. Then his speed is too slow to allow him to conduct a successful pursuit.

MEDICATED WINE CASES TO BE TESTED

Ontario Board of License Commissioners Purpose to Bring Matter To An Issue

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Oct. 5.—"We propose to bring to an issue the question of whether medicated wines, which are now so widely used, actually come within the law," declared W. S. Dingman, vice-chairman of the Ontario Board of License Commissioners to-day.

Mr. Dingman stated that a test would soon be made as to whether the most prominent of wines actually came within the law. "Hitherto we have been in doubt as to whether we have had the right to prosecute," stated Mr. Dingman. "When the Dominion law clashed with the Ontario Temperance Act, the Dominion law was supreme, but we understand that this has been amended by the Doherty Act so that Provincial law is supreme."

Mr. Dingman stated that if the Board could secure convictions, fines ranging from $200 to $1,000 could be levied. The Board's authority to prosecute is based on Section 125 of the Ontario Temperance Act, which says that if anything is sold as a colourable device for an evasion of the provisions of the act the offender shall receive the penalty imposed by the Act, as in the case of selling liquor without the required license.

Sudden Death Of Mr. MacGregor

Well Known Citizen Passed Away Yesterday

The sudden death of Mr. Robert Findlayson MacGregor, of 509 Water street, will come as a shock to his many friends in the city.

Mr. MacGregor left a few days ago for Perth to complete a contract for the William Hamilton Company, and was expected home on Wednesday. However, on Thursday morning Mrs. MacGregor received word that he had received a paralytic stroke, and later the announcement of his death at 12.45 this morning.

Deceased was born in Keene in 1863 coming to the city when four years of age. During his residence in the city he has been prominently identified in public life, having been for many years assessor, a councillor and a member of the Masonic Order. In religion he was a staunch Presbyterian. He leaves of his immediate family to mourn his death his wife and three children, Mr. Alec., Miss Margaret and Miss Kathleen, all of the city.

The funeral, under Masonic auspices, will take place on Saturday, from his late residence, 509 Water street, at 2.30 o'clock. A service conducted by Rev. Mr. Pogue, will be held at the house at 2 o'clock.

Fines For Speeding Will Be Increased

The price of automobile speeding is going up, Magistrate Dumble announced this morning, after he had taken a fine of $5 and $2.60 costs from Willis Rutherford, chauffeur for Mr. A. W. Cressman. There have been recently, he remarked, too many cases of fast driving, and the light fines have not been sufficiently discouraging to car drivers. Hence, the tariff will shortly be boosted to a figure that will take some of the pleasure ou of opening up the throttle around the city streets.

WHAT THE GERMANS ARE SAYING

The Military Party still rules in Germany. In a debate on the political censorship, Dittmann, an Independent Socialist member of the Reichstag, insisted that the "maintenance of the censorship and the prohibition of public meetings showed who were the masters of Germany, i.e., the Pan-Germans, Junkers, and Industrials." "These are influential in the Army Command, and the new Chancellor is a mere tool in the hands of the military party" Geners, Liebert, writing in the Tagliche Rundschau of September 1st, the anniversary of the battle of Sedan, showed the true spirit of the Junker, the nauseating assumption that God is on their side, a distrust of the people, and the mad expectation that Germany is going to acquire more territory and a larger indemnity than after the 1870-71 war. "Our present troops surpass their fathers," he wrote, "as their task is far more difficult What must the Old Lord God (Der Alte Herrgott) have in store for the German people that he sets it even more difficult tasks? As on the day of Sedan, the German armies have assured the victory on all fronts. If the people at home do not lose their nerves, Germany must succeed in the great war. It is to be hoped that the coming peace, as in 1871, may be in accordance with the heroic deeds of the Army." If the German people only will not lose their nerves—the General apparently is not very confident about this. And his faith is a little disturbed by the fashion in which Der Alte Herrgott is delaying victory. We are surprised that just as he dangles the idea of a huge indemnity in front of the German people, he does not also promise an honorary colonelcy say in the Regiment of the Crown Prince, to the Alte Herrgott.

There are traces of wiser counsel in Germany, faint glimmers that some at least are beginning to see reason. According to an Amsterdam telegram of September 3rd, Herr Erzberger, the leader of the Cntral Party, who forced the peace resolution on the reluctant Reichstag, is considering making a recommendation that Germany should permit Alsace-Lorraine to decide its own fate. This suggestion, of course, is not nearly so fair as it seems, because after forty years of Germanization, and of suppression of Alsace-Lorraine would not give an adequate representation of the sentiment of the country. But in any case the admission that the question of Alsace-Lorraine is open, shows a great advance towards terms of peace that the Allies can accept. Even more impressive are the utterances of Prince Lichnowsky, late German ambassador in London, on the Polish question. He admits the past guilt of Prussia towards Poland and the hopeless incompatibility between the fundamental principles of Prussianized Germany and the idea of Germany giving freedom to Poland. Writing in the Berliner Tageblatt of September 2nd, he said: "Prussia arose from the destruction of Poland; East Prussia was formerly a Polish country. These facts alone should prevent the illusion that Polish political ideas can be reconciled with Prussian and German ideas. A new division of Poland with Austria must be ruled out, because not only would it make Germany's reconciliation with Russia, which is imperatively required, almost impossible, but it would seriously increase Germany's domestic, national, and political difficulties, prejudice the German basis of German political existence, and confer on Germany the favour of a Jewish proletariat which would then flow all over Germany, unhindered." "From a weapon invented for fighting our enemies and securing our frontiers, the Polish political idea has become a highly dangerous plan for Germany's future." There are many plans "invented for fighting the enemies of Germany and for securing her frontiers" which have become "highly dangerous for Germany's future." The Germans, themselves, are beginning to see that there is no place for Prussian Grmany in a free world.

The medical papers in Germany have been subjected to a heavy censorship which has prevented the publication of the usual statistics about diseases and the effects on the health of the people resultng from the food restrictions. Some of the truth is now being allowed to leak out, as if the military party who control the censorship, were preparing the nation for a fall. The Professor of Physiology in the University of Halle, wrote in the Kreuzzeitung of September 1st, that "Germans to-day do not extract the full nutritive value from their food," and added that he attributes this to "the fact that the people "have to live largely on turnips and similar roots" and he warned the public against them. Most excellent advice. The absence of worry and a couple of good meals a day of meat, bread, and beer, would do a world of good to the German people. But they must stop the war first.

DOCTOR AND PASTOR IN SHOOTING MIX-UP

Pastor Says no Quarrel, but Rest is All Mystery.

RUSSELLVILLE, Alb., Oct. 5.-Dr. Tom Hughes, prominent physician and surgeon, and Rev. J. T. Terry, pastor of the Methodist Church, both of this city, were found Wednesday night near here, the former dead and the latter dying from gun-shot wounds. Dr. Hughes had been shot in the face with a shot gun. He was also shot in other parts of the body. His entire right hand was shot off as if he had thrown up his hand to ward off the shot from the face.

Mr. Terry was still alive when parties who had hurried to the scene reached him, but was unable to make a statement. He had been shot through the lungs twice with an automatic pistol.

When asked if he and Dr. Hughes had quarrelled, Mr. Terry shook his head negatively. According to the police, when asked if he shot Dr. Hughes, he answered yes by nodding his head, and if Hughes had shot him, he answered yes again.

The two men had left here only half an hour earlier for Rockwood, seven miles south of here, where they frequently went together on hunting trips. Mr. Terry has a wife and several children. Hughes leaves a wife and several small children. Both were prominent in this section. Police authorities were unable to advance any satisfactory theory to account for the double tragedy.

Better a cheerful failure than a morbid success.

Col. Johnston Was Warmly Received By Indian Council

Spoke at Wednesday Night's Concert—The Closing Business of Thursday's Session Included Several Minor Questions.

COUNCIL A GREAT SUCCESS

The Grand Council of the Indians of Ontario at their closing meeeting yesterday afternoon selected the Christian Island reserve for their regular sessions next June. Several questions of secondary importance were dealt with. President Jacobs had suggested that an application be made to the Indian Department for permission to provide houses of refuge for old Indian men and women who had no relatives to take care of them. He related the case of an aged woman of his reserve who had been refused admittance to the County House of Refuge at Sarnia. The officials gave as their reason that the Government did not contribute to the maintenance of Indians in the home, and Mr. Jacobs urged that the Indians should have their own institutions which should be located on reserves in order that the old people would not be separated from their friends.

Chief Whetung pointed out that the expenses of a House of Refuge would be large. The caring for the aged was a duty that devolved upon the individual bands. The County Houses of Refuge might receive old Indians who could pay their board with their interest money, and the band could make up the difference.

Peter Crowe, of Alderville, agreed that the obligation of caring for the aged rested upon the individual bands. After considerable discussion it was decided that if any group of bands, located close together, desired to ask the Department to provide a central House of Refuge for Indians, they had the Grand Council's permission to make the application.

Hunting Licenses.

It was also decided to ask the Government to suspend the hunting licenses which the Indians have to buy at the same price paid by white hunters. The speakers agreed that the hunting laws were desirable as a protection to game, but the Indians had an old treaty with the King of England which gave them the right to hunt and fish without paying for a license. They wish to safeguard this right which has come down from early days, hence they will ask to be relieved from paying this fee.

An Inter-marriage Problem.

According to the explanation of an interpreter, if a white girl marries an Indian their children are regarded as Indians, but if an Indian girl marries a (shog-no-sh) white man, she surrenders her rights in the band and her children are regarded as belonging to their father's race. One of the chiefs presented a problem that had arisen out of one of these latter marriages. The white man was allowed to live on the reserve and had improved a certain piece of property. During the past twenty years these improvements had grown to about $1,900. According to the regulations the band must pay for such improvements when they reclaim such land which is their permanent possession. In this case it was argued that the white man had used the land for twenty years and was thereby sufficiently compensated for his improvements. The contention was put forward that a band should not have to pay for such improvements, but in this particular case it was felt that the band had been remiss in not making the proper agreement with the white man twenty years ago.

Col. Johnston a Favourite.

The Wednesday night concert was attended by Colonel Johnston, of the 93rd Battalion, who, by the way, is the idol of the Chemong reserve. He was expected at 6:30 o'clock, and the band had planned to meet him at the ferry. While some of the Indian musicians were tuning up their slide trombones, bass horns and euphoniums, with bars from "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," and other marches, two little Indian boys stood in the dark and the rain on the dock, about a quarter of a mile from the village, where the ferry crosses from the Ennismore shore to the Reserve, waiting for the lights of the Colonel's car. One of them was to race back to the town hall to summon the band, the other was to cross with the ferry.

The youngsters waited with all the patience of their race, and just as impatiently Colonel Johnston was trying to discover the trouble that had stalled his car three miles down the Ennismore road. A good Samaritan luckily discovered him and quickly located the difficulty. Although his arrival was an hour or more late, the two boys were still manning the ferry. But the concert had commenced and the reception by the band had to be dispensed with. At the hall, however, Colonel Johnston was given a great reception and a first place on the programme. He extolled the bravery of the Chemong Indians of the 93rd Battalian, and stated that for discipline and courage they were unsurpassed. He had been only 75 yards away from Isaac Taylor, the oldest of five brothers in the 93rd, when he was gilled. Colonel Johnston said he was always too glad to do anything for the Chemong Indians. They had a warm place in his heart and he was always delighted to visit the Reserve. In conclusion the Colonel related some of the incidents in the life of the 93rd, a feature that deeply interested his audience of four hundred that packed the hall to its utmost capacity.

Last night's concert closed the three days' convention and was even better than that of the previous evening. The programme included a speech, song or other contribution by each of the seventeen chiefs, and Chief George Fisher, of Muncie, responded with a war dance. It was an occasion that rarely comes to Chemong Reserve, and the residents and visitors made the most of it.

The delegates arrived in the city this morning on their way home. They were delighted with the success of the Council and of the hospitality of Chief Whetung's band. Chief Alfie Crowe, of Hiawatha, wore a black eye that he got last night after the concert, when in leaving the hall he collided with a post which the dense darkness had ambushed.

This ultimatum of Liberal leaders has brought about the present crisis in the fortunes of that party. It is not related in any way to the appointment of certain nominal Liberals to office in the present administration and has no reference whatever to union government. If the Quebec Liberals fall into line, Sir Wilfrid will continue as leader. If not, he will abdicate.

The public will be interested in knowing the fact. Sir Wilfrid must be given credit for loyalty to his convictions and respect for the law of the land. His position in this matter must immeasurably increase his influence in all parts of the Dominion outside the province of Quebec, and even in that part of the country his stand must entitle him to the respect, if not the support of, the anti-conscriptionist element. The Citizen has difference with Sir Wilfrid's view of the conscription measure, but recognizes that in the present instance he is showing himself above party influences and that he is prepared to leave political life rather than precipitate confusion, if not worse, in this country, by an abuse of power."

LE CANADA NOT PLEASED

Montreal Paper Calls Ballantyne and Guthrie Deserters

Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner.

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—Le Canada is not a bit pleased with the entrance of Messrs. Ballantyne and Guthrie into the Borden Cabinet. This morning it says, editorially, under the title "Mr. Guthrie Goes Over to the Enemy": "Mr. Guthrie was ripe for this post of Solicitor-General, which is thrown to him in charity and will be his punishment. But we cannot understand how they can dare to speak of the entry of the Liberals is a union cabinet in connection with the acceptance by Messrs. Ballantyne and Guthrie of portfolios in the Borden Government. Two traitors have gone over to the enemy, with an eclat which betrays the Conservatives' joy at such a desertion. But if the English proverb be true that one swallow does not make a summer, it is ridiculous thus to augur an adherence by the Liberal party to party programme of Borden. With Rogers, Flavelle, Sam. Hughes and their like thank God the Liberal party is not compromised by these desertions. Only Messrs. Ballantyne and Guthrie are compromised and the latter, if he stands for re-election anywhere, can only be elected by Conservatives. As for Mr. Ballantyne we suppose that he will look for an electoral seat in the Province of Ontario, unless he tries to take Herbert Ames' Montreal seat.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 5.—In future the police authorities of all Canadian municipalities are in duty bound to see that the regulations of Food Controller Hanna are carried out. Cicotte vs. Schupp In Opening Game Of World Series

Canadian Press Despatch:

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 5. — Reserved seats for the world's series games at the White Sox park having been distributed among lucky applicants, hundreds of baseball fans planned to stand in line to-night in order to have advantageous positions when the office opens at the park for unreserved seat sale to-morrow. Weather prediction for the opening game to-morrow calls for fair weather with a slight drop in temperature. This, the followers of the game say, will not work any hardship on either team, as both squads are in the pink of condition and will not feel any slight change in the weather.

Much interest to-day entered on the question of the two pitchers in the first game. Manager Rowland of the White Sox, refused to commit himself, but many have picked Eddie Cicotte as the probable starter for the locals. Cicotte worked out yesterday afternoon and said afterwards that he was ready to start the big series at any time. Ferdinand Schupp, the left handed star of the New Giants, is the most frequently mentioned to open the series for the visitors. The Giants will practise at White Sox park this afternoon. They will be given all the time needed in order to become accustomed to the light and shadows peculiar to the Park.

John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants believed that his team will win the championship, but he says that he has not under-estimated the strength of the White Sox.

Go To Prison For Two Years

Maximum Sentences For Men Who Took Bribe to Exempt Man From Draft

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Oct. 5. — Maximum prison sentences of two years each were imposed in the Federal Court to-day upon Dr. Henry Seligman, physician of a Brooklyn draft board, and Nathan Enrlich and Lasarus Jacobson, clerks, as penalty for receiving money for exempting a man examined for the draft. Seligman, in addition, was fined $3,000.

Dec. 17th As Probable Date

Speculation as to When the Election Will Be Held

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.— Speculation is rife here concerning the date of the Dominion elections. In official circles Monday, Dec. 17th is stated as the probable date so far as can be foreseen at present, but it certainly has not yet been definitely fixed. An enormous amount of work has to be done before arrangements are completed for taking a vote. Registrars must be appointed before writs are issued, then comes the swearing in of a literal army of enumerators, who shall add to the lists the names of soldiers and women voters and strike from the lists disenfranchised aliens and others under the Franchise Act. With regard to the registration of soldiers' vote overseas, it is thought that this will be done during the four weeks between nomination day and election day here, so that definite results may be known soon after election day in Canada.

"I was in Toronto yesterday," said Mr. O'Connor, "and while there secured the permission required. These people are not be treated as a law unto themselves."

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statement must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—If Mrs. Collins had given a little more thought to the subject of her letter which appeared in your columns yesterday, I am persuaded she would have hesitated before placing herself on record.

The movement which she and her association so summarily disposed of has reached such large proportions, extending as it does from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Northern Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, that any attempt to belittle its far-reaching influence would seem to be an unwise if not a disloyal action. Mrs. Collins and her association were quite within their rights to refuse to sign the pledge cards, and if they feel like doing so to take pride in their decision, but it is another thing to call on the mothers of Ontario to sign no pledge cards until the British and Canadian Governments have measured up to what she or any handful of women have decided is right. Already over 2,000,000 women in the United States have pledged themselves, and during the week of October 21 to 28, a house-to-house canvas of the 22,000,000 families of the nation will be a feature of this great movement for food conservation, and every man and woman will be asked to enroll. "Food Will Win the War" is to be the slogan. In Ontario several thousands of the women have already signed this pledge, and our school children are being instructed into the necessity and loyalty of saving food, self-denial and service for others. Surely such a noble impulse taking hold a whole people, making the very atmosphere vibrant with high ideals of self-denial, duty, humanity and honor cannot fail to have a reflex influence on our country, making us a better disciplined, stronger and happier people. By elimination of waste, we serve ourselves economically and morally. Mr. Hoover does not minimize the importance of this nation-wide pledge. To quote his own words, "On the success of this unprecedented adventure in democracy will largely stake the issue of the war." Mrs. Collins, in arraigning the Government for its "colossal impudence" in asking the women to economize does not seem to recognize that it was the Executive Committee of the Women's Auxiliary who came to the conclusion that a house-to-house canvas with a view to obtaining a pledge from each individual housewife to do her best to prevent food waste and to encourage thrift and economy in the home was the best solution to food conservation. They took up the matter with the Food Controller, who authorized the adoption of such a pledge. After all, food consumption is woman's problem, and it is only logical if this question of food conservation is to be settled by the people voluntarily and not by the Governments of the U. S. and Canada first commandeering and then distributing the meat and wheat to meet requirements (and such letters as Mrs. Collins' goes to confirm my conviction that such action of the part of our Government would be wisest if any great results are achieved). I say it is only logical that women must be relied upon to save the situation. The women of Europe have come up to every need since the war began, and why should Canadian women shirk? The housewife has worked for generations on the principle that the dinner bell must be rung when dinner time comes, and if Canada and the United States have agreed to share meals with the Allies their women will not let their guests go unfed. Our women will see this thing through not to save money but to save lives. At least two-thirds of the grain used in the making of drink in Great Britain is barley, and we are not asked to conserve barley, but wheat. The manufacture of beer in Great Britain is only one-third of what it was when the war commenced, and reliable writers have pointed out time and again the fact that the British Government, especially since Lloyd George's Premiership, is in favour of the total elimination of the manufacture of beer, but the working men and women stand rigidly opposed to taking away what for centuries they have considered their right to have, viz., beer for drinking; and the issues at stake are too great and awful for the Government to arbitrarily use its power. Any sane person knows what the result of internal revolution would mean now. Look at the outcry in Canada against conscription and the mob riots in Quebec when so called "Liberty of Action" is called in question. Mrs. Collins is by no means an exponent of obedience to sumptuary laws herself, even when they are enacted to meet great emergencies.

She says, "Let no mother sign the Food Controller's cards till the Canadian and British Governments have done all in their power, etc., etc.," and again, "I ask any woman of brains, is she willing to take this attitude? No." In the meantime let us carry out her argument to its logical conclusion. Let the 50,000 Canadian women who have for over two years been fed by the heavily burdened British people and who are of no assistance whatever in carrying on, continue to take the children's share of bread which has already dwindled down to such a meagre portion, let the French people, the Belgians, the Americans and those splendid men who have stood in the front line fighting for us for over three years feel the pangs of hunger. Think of even one Canadian boy standing on the battle front with his bright face turned to the Hun, a smile on his lips, a noble purpose filling his breast, ready to dare all, and if it has to be, to give his life for God and home and native land, think of one such lad failing of hunger, because some woman in Canada would not deny herself and family three slices of white bread a day out of her abundance, until all the wrong uses to which wheat is put are done away with, until there comes into being Governments which measure up to her standards of right. Does any Canadian woman wish to take such a position and say she is proud of her action? Why should Canadians want to read "The Fiddlers?" Will it give them a more courageous faith in the ultimate outcome of this horrible war and all its associations? The Canadian woman and her American sister need a higher courage and faith to stiffen her as her sons march to battle. There has been too much of this German propaganda allowed into our homes. Anti conscription arguments are largely the result of this insidious German propaganda which works through so many unsuspected and apparently innocent sources. Mrs. Collins is very much disturbed over the "disfranchise of a large number of women who are filled with patriotism"—no woman will be disenfranchised as no woman has yet been given the Federal vote. She is yet a very young woman and will probably have the privilege and responsibility of recording her ballot at many coming elections. I have been an ardent suffragist for a great many years, and may not look forward to but few, if any, opportunities of using my ballot, but I will gladly forego the privilege that I would have had to record a win-the-war vote, and with greater alacrity still will I stand aside to let the women who have so nobly given those who are dearer than life itself, for Canada help, Canada by their vote, to still "carry on." I am more convinced than ever since reading Mrs. Collins' letter that the Borden Government did a wise thing in putting the ballot at this time into only those hands who have, by suffering, been proved worthy to meet the one great vital issue in this election—"To Win the War."

PECULIAR DESCENT.

A writer in the Toronto Star has prepared a gallery of pen pictures of the members of Parliament and the name of the member from this riding appears in the list with the following note:—"John A. Sexsmith, of East Peterborough is of peculiar descent, as his great grandparents emigrated from Germany to Ireland. He has a grandmother who had fourteen children who grew up and married. All but two had children, and to-day the old lady, who is a nonagenarian, has fifty grandchildren and sixty great-grand-children."

Borden To Go To Country With Union Party

So States Hon. Hugh Guthrie the New Solicitor-General

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Oct. 5. — Hon. Hugh Guthrie, the new Solicitor-General, left Toronto at noon to-day for Guelph.

Mr. Guthrie stated that every effort was being made to prepare for an election and thought January was the nearest guess to the date.

"What will your position be in the election? Will Sir Robert Borden go to the country with a union government, of which you are a member?"

"Yes, I presume so."

"And you will in the elections be a supporter of the government?"

"Certainly. I gave my views plainly to my constituents. I have nothing more to add," he said, as he rushed to catch his train.

UNPLEASANT WAR BREAD.

The Dundee Advertiser says: Reports of illness through eating war bread are being received from all over the country, and the news that Lord Rhondda has instituted an inquiry into the cause will come as a relief to many. The bread is said to have given rise to digestive troubles and then eruptions in many places. This is said to be due to the fact that some bakers are using imported flour that contains beans and rice—ingredients which are quite unfit for bread making. The inclusion of the germ sets free a large percentage of fat, which is unsuitable for weak digestions. Then of course regulation flour does not possess the keeping properties which wheaten flour does, and this fact again gives rise to disorders. The grey loaf can never be as palatable as the white one, but it can be made equally digestible and nourishing, if the necessary precautions are taken. Still our bread of to-day, with all its defects is not as bad as that which the Parisians had to satisfy their hunger with at the time of the siege of Paris, when a quantity of straw was mixed with the flour in order to help eke out the supplies of grain.

BIG INCREASE IN REVENUE

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—The Dominion of Canada revenues during the six months ending September thirtieth showed an increase of twenty-five millions over the same period last year. The total for six months of this year was $127,477,904. The ordinary expenditures were about fifty millions, being a half million more than last year. Capital expenditure, including war account, totalled 95 millions, as compared with 116 millions the same six months last year. The decrease is due to the heavy movement of troops overseas. The Dominion of Canada debt now stands at 901 millions, which is an increase of nearly thirty-seven millons for the month of September.

Steady Market For Choice Cattle

A Big Demand For Canadian Lambs For U. S. Sent Prices Higher

A strong, steady market for practically all the grades of cattle, except the very roughest of the light Eastern variety has been the character of this week's trade. While there have been few of the extra choice quality heavy steers or choice butcher offering, several small lots sold at good prices around $12. Fair to good butcher were always in good demand at steady to firm prices around $10 to $10.25, and 10.50 to $11 for anything choice. The bulk of the week's offerings was of a poor average quality. A keen demand developed for choice fat butcher cows, and as these were very scarce, prices steadily advanced to $9 and $9.50 for good cows. Good butcher bulls were also in good demand at steady to firm prices arund $8 to $8.50 for the best.

There was a good, firm market all through the week for choice quality stockers and feeders.

Milch cows in godo demand.

Calves, steady to firm.

A feature of the market this week has been the heavy dmand for lambs for shipment to the United States. The bulk of the week's offering of about 6,000 lambs, were bought for New York and Boston. As a result of this extra demand prices were forced up about $1.50 for the week, the market closing very firm.

Hogs are again in a strong market, the mid-week price soaring up to $19 and $19.25 on the fed and watered basis, but easing down a little for the week-end at about $18.75.

Easier Tone In Grain Market

Prices Shaded Off a Little Yesterday

Prospects of an early settlement of the elevator strike at Fort William had an effect on the oats market in the easier tone which prevailed. Cash prices at Winnipeg are quoted one cent lower, a corresponding decline taking effect in the local quotations, on the basis of in store at Fort William. No. 3's and the feed grades are also included in yesterday's quotations, the first time these grades have been quoted for some time past. The corn market opened easier, but later picked up again, closing 3-4c. higher on the December option.

CUTS BRITISH SUGAR RATION.

Controller to issue Cards Dec. 1 for Half-Pound Per Capital Per Week.

Passengers from England who arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port said that every one in Great Britain would be put on a ration of half a pound of sugar per week on Dec. 1, and that forms to insure that supply were being sent out by the Sugar Controller, to be filled and returned by heads of families.

The present per capita allowance of sugar is one pound a week, and no cards are required, although it has been necessary to obtain official sanction for the use of larger quantities for preserving fruit.

The passengers also reported that heavy rains throughout the British Isles since early in August had done great damage to crops.

Among the passengers were fourteen non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Army Medical Corps, under the command of Captain R. W. Gimmel. They were on their way from France to the West Indies.

SEEMS EVERYONE IS ANXIOUS TO TRY IT

Recent Discovery of Ether Compound That Dries Up Corns So They Lift Out

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the recent discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

A quarter of an ounce costs very little at any pharmacy, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet on every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

Huns Forced To Shoot Messages To Commanders

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES — The French artillery barrage fire has now been perfected to such a degree of density and intensity that the Germans in order to keep in communication with their lines back to the barrage, have been forced to adopt the expedient of enclosing their messages in a grenade or a shell and firing it through the barrage.

In the early part of the war the Germans used the system of running back field telephones from the advancing troops. When these lines were constantly cut by shell fire, efforts were made to run the lines underground. But here again the French high explosive shells were developed to a degree where the lines, could not be conveniently buried at a depth beyond their reach.

THE GERMAN SYSTEM.

Wireless telegraphy has since been tried by the Germans together with low flying airplanes, while the use of individual soldiers who endeavored to run back through a barrage with messages came likewise to prove both too costly from the point of view of human life and of uncertainty as to the eventual arrival of the message. Germany's new system of trying to shoot back her communication with trench mortars and trench cannon has only recently been hit upon. The grenades or shells in which the messages are enclosed are referred to in the German orders as "Nachrichtongeschoses" or "projectiles for messages."

The "Melde-Wurfgranaten" or 'message carrying bombs' are fired from the 1916 model of mechanical trench grenade thrower. This has a range of about 600 yards and is counted upon for maintaining communication between the first line and the commanders of battalions and regiments who, under the German system, always remain at the rear of the advancing and fighting troops.

The second class used, the "Loichte Nachrichtermine" or "message carrying shells" are to be fired from the "Minenwerfer," or trench mortar for firing torpedoes. These have a range of about 1,300 yards and with them the Germans hope to keep up their communications through the French barrage fires between the battalion and regimental commanders in rear of the advancing troops and the artillery brigade and divisional headquarters still farther to the rear.

According to the German orders that have been found, the distribution of these messages carrying grenades and shells to the troops on the western front began about June 1.

MILLBROOK CENTRAL EXHIBITION HELD DESPITE WEATHER

Repeated Showers During the Afternoon Marred the Prospects For a Record Fair—Crowd Was Fairly Large Under Circumstances—Big List of Entries.

The Millbrook Central Exhibition was accounted for yesterday. Despite the inclement weather and the poor condition of the roads a large crowd gathered on the grounds during the afternoon and participated in the list of good things that had been provided by the directorate. A couple of heavy showers during the early part of the afternoon must have discouraged a large number from attending the fair, but there was enough left in the way of gate receipts to ease the minds of the officials as to the financial outcome of Durham County's banner fair. Mr. H. R. Armstrong, secretary-treasurer of the fair, was very optimistic concerning the results of a season's hard work in preparing for the event. He apparently ignored the rain which pattered down on his tent as he dilated upon the many features that characterize the creation of a fall fair. A coal-oil stove occupied a strategic position under the improvised table and to some extent offset the scotch mist that seemed to hang over the land outside. It was anything but an ideal day for a fair, but the people who were there made the best of it and accepted the condition in a spirit of evident unconcern.

The Exhibits.

The exhibits in all classes were well up to the standard. The classes were well filled and the judges had no easy task in making the final awards. The vegetables were particularly fine. All varieties were represented testifying in a marked degree to the fertility of Cavan township soil. A feature of the vegetable exhibit was the unusually good quality of potatoes.

Another class that was well filled was that of the dairy produce and bread class. The butter and bread makers of the district won well deserved honours and no small amount of voluntary praise for the high quality of their product. One man at the close of the fair walked away with a prize crock of butter which he claimed to have purchased for forty cents a pound or a difference of six cents over Peterborough prices for store quality butter.

The Fruit Classes.

In the fruit classes a number of good exhibits of apples were shown. Apples are scarce this year, but the exhibit at the Millbrook Fair did not indicate any depreciation in quality. Other fruits were well represented. The ladies' fancy work department, fine arts and plants and flowers, were a source of considerable interest. The entries were numerous and the quality in all classes very good.

The poultry exhibit attracted a lot of attention, and included in the list of prize-winners were a number of Peterborough poultry fanciers.

The cattle classes suffered a handicap owing to the inability of the exhibitors to show animals outside to advantage. The ground was wet and muddy, and the afternoon was punctuated by intervals in which a downpour of rain intruded upon the scene. The horses were good and each class was well filled. All kinds of cattle have had a good season, as both pasture and feed of all kinds have been plentiful.

Red Cross workers were active in collecting funds for their work, and also in serving meals on the grounds. The musical side of the fair was well looked after by the 57th Regimental Band.

PARLIAMENT JUST CLOSED LONGEST YET

OTTAWA.—The session of Parliament, which prorogued last week was the longest in point of actual time between its calling and its ending in Canada's history. Other sessions, however, have a higher record in the number of actual sitting days.

Parliament was called together on January 18. It adjourned to enable Premier Borden to attend the Imperial War Conference on February 7. It reassembled on April 19, and prorogued to-day, September 20, on the eve of the sixth anniversary of its birth at the general election of 1911.

For some weeks past Parliament has sat six days each week, and the sittings have frequently lasted until 2 o'clock in the morning. The length of the session just ended was eight months and two days, and the total number of days of actual sitting, 135.

A LAMENT FOR RUSSIA FALLEN.

Florence Vicars in Toronto Mail.

Lost in the mists and marshes, astray on the trackless plain,
Stripped of the old good garment, galled by the broken chain,
Prey to the evil beasts, and bowed to the driving rain:
Moaning, "Yes, I am free!" yet when was thy bondage so stark?
Caught in the net thus hast woven, groping blind in the dark.
Hast thou no torch, O wanderer?
Thyself extinguished the spark.

These be thy gods, O Russia! They have led thee into the mire.
Into the mire and murk, and the flickering false marsh-fire;
Deeper thou plungest still, while a mocking voice cries, "Higher!"
This have the new gods given, to pay the price of thy soul—
Stained droops the flag of Russia, blank lies her honor's scroll,
And over dead fealty's grave the enemy cannon roll.

This is thy crowning sin—thou hast chosen the false for the true,
Changing the olden yoke, for a tyranny strange and new,
Yet they shall find forgiveness who know not what they do.
Cast out the devil spawn, that are feeding thy soul with lies!
Look o'er the distant hills, to the gleam in the Eastern skies;
There dwells the hope of Russia, thence shall her freedom rise.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

CHAPTER V.

Ramona De Lara was eighteen years of age when Ormiston brought her to Port Royal. It was her youth, and some unquenchable spark of hope within the depths of her being, that saved both her reason and her life. She would very gladly indeed have parted with the latter, but since God willed that she should live, her religious training did not permit her to question His decision. But for this, self-destruction would have freed her at once from her wretchedness.

Ormiston recognized in the girl a refinement of caste to which, through the blood of his father, he had himself some slight claim. With a greater delicacy of feeling than might have been expected from one of his savage nature, he endeavoured to spare her in every material way. A fierce love of possession overcame his innate cruelty; this dark-eyed girl was his, by right of conquest; being his, he felt himself obliged to treat her with a certain consideration. It was perhaps as much a concession to his personal pride, as to Ramona's individual wants, that caused him to install her in the old Spanish house on the outskirts of the town, to provide servants to wait on her, to surround her with all the material comforts and luxuries that his position afforded. Priceless rugs, tapestries, silks and satins, jewels and plate, all the varied loot that was caught in the buccaneers' net, he placed at her disposal, thinking thus to provide a setting worthy of her charms. Women he had had in the past, many women, hard creatures from the Port, who gathered vulture-like about the incoming ships; they had appealed quite shamelessly to the animal in him, and had been treated accordingly. It is not surprising that the very innocence of the girl on whom he had showered his attentions should have given her a far greater appeal. His companions smiled at one another, behind his back, and concluded that the Firebrand was actually in love. they would none of them have dared say as much to his face, but it afforded them vast amusement. Singularly enough, Ormiston had reached very much the same conclusion himself, but it did not amuse him, although it did afford a highly interesting occupation for his idle moments. He know that Ramona hated him, that she must hate him, because of the past; he set himself the task of turning her hatred to love. It was perhaps an indication of the man's unconquerable egotism that he considered this possible.

As for the girl herself, she underwent many changes, as was inevitable, for on so situated. At first, after a long illness, she staggered through life as though in a stupor, mercifully unable to realize the full horror of the fate that had overtaken her. Then, as realization came, she prayed for death, although with every youthful beat her heart bade her live. In a later period, dull resignation crept over her spirit, an almost oriental acceptance of the decrees of fate. She no longer prayed to die, not to live, in fact she did not pray at all, but lived with her flowers, her guijar, thankful when some marauding expedition took Ormiston from her side for half a score of peaceful weeks.

Escape, during some one of these periods, had many times entered her mind, but she soon realized the futility of any such idea. Lucia, her maid; Petro, the hunchbacked boy, were both devoted to her, but greater than their devotion was their fear of the Firebrand. He had made them responsible for the girl's safety. Failure on their part to live up to this responsibility meant not only death, but death in some hideous and unbelievably cruel form that caused their blood to chill, even at thought of it. Ormiston was well served, because he was served through fear; it is wonderfully effective, up to a certain point; when that point is reached, vengeance frequently recoils upon the heads of those that inspire it.

Had Ramona been an older woman, she would in all probability have ended the situation in one of two ways, either by falling in love with Ormiston or by killing herself. Her youth saved her from either fate. With unconquerable optimism she waited for the coming of a new day.

Mentally she was of course utterly alone. Lucia, her maid, a curious mixture of English, Spanish and negro, observed her mistress's luxurious surroundings, and regarded her as a very lucky woman. She had been raised by an English family, and spoke the language fluently; Ormiston commanded her to instruct Ramona in its intricacies. The effort provided the latter with something to do; it was not long before she found her native tongue relegated to the background, because she had no longer any occasion to use it.

Occasionally, as a result of some drunken vagary, Ormiston would bring some of his companions and their women to the house. They were a care-free lot, these women of the buccaneers, some of them naturally light-hearted, others hiding the resentment they felt toward their masters beneath a cloak of gayety, striving forever to outwit them in some way of infidelity, as a measure of revenge, no doubt, for the treatment they had received. Occasionally would be found one to whom had come the love that strong men inspire even in women they abuse, yet even in spite of this, their vanity led them into innumerable escapades, most of which, strangely enough, were never found out. When they were, sudden death, or a lashing followed by a sale in the slave market was their fate.

Ramona held herself aloof from these women, in spite of the advances that many of them made; as a result, they hated her cordially, and openly sneered at her innocence, which they regarded as a pose, at her almost conventual mode of life, at her daily tasks, the care of her flowers, the embroidering, the innumerable small avocations with which she strove to render existence more bearable. The contempt of these women did not fret her; she gazed above and beyond them, into a future that meant nothing to her, and which she awaited with patient indifference. Her soul slept. It was merciful that this was the case. Love alone could awaken it, but as Ramona did not know this, she no longer dreamed of love.

And then, by the merest chance, a new experience had come to her, a new element been injected into her life.

It had been her habit to go to the town twice each week, to buy in the market supplies for her household. As the distance was but little more than two miles, she usually walked, taking along with her either Pedro, the hunchbacked boy, or Lucia, to bring back the heavy basket. These small expeditions into the fringe of the world constituted the greatest excitement her life afforded; she looked upon the varied and never-ending activities of the town with wondering eyes, in which tears not infrequently rose, at sight of some train of unhappy captives, some heap of loot from the captured galleons of her people.

The town, both because it was a seaport, and because its traffic attracted with a magnet of gold the adventurous spirits of two continents, was intensely cosmopolitan. Englishmen, Portuguese, Hollanders, negroes, Jews, Frenchmen, Puritans from New England, Indians, rubbed shoulders along its narrow streets, or trafficked in its great market place. Ramona found much to interest her in them all; absorbed in the contemplation of external things, she forgot for the time being the bitterness that lay within her soul.

On one of these occasions, as she was leaving the market on her way home, there had occurred the encounter that resulted in her acquaintance with John Barton. The manner of it did not differ materially from the account given by her to Ormiston; it was its effect upon her that she had kept to herself. The drunken buccaneer who had attempted to kiss her was Portuguese Joe; he had cast covetous eyes upon the girl for many a day, but his fear of Ormiston had prevented any overt act on his part. This day, emerging suddenly from the rum-clouded atmosphere of a tavern, his lustfulness increased and his caution in like proportion decreased by long hours over his cups, he had come without warning upon the girl, an apparition of beauty, flagrantly enticing in the morning sunlight.

With a swift and ill-considered movement he had attempted to sweep her into his arms, to kiss her. Ramona was too greatly astonished even to scream. Lucia, struggling along with her basket some distance in the rear, was equally dumfounded.

None of the three observed the swift approach of a tall, soberly dressed young man, whose forehead was black with rage beneath the wide-spreading brim of his Puritan hat. He descended upon the befuddled Portugee with ready fist, and sent him sprawling into the road.

The two, Ramona and Barton, had searched each other's faces, had looked into each other's eyes, and had seen, in one blinding instant, their dreams become realities. Not that Ramona had ever dreamed of a lover in Puritan garb; no costume, in fact, would have seemed to her more incongruous, nor had John Barton pictured to himself a mistress of his heart who wore scarlet stockings, ridiculously high-heeled Spanish shoes, and a gown of yellow muslin trimmed with green. Such a costume, by the very teachings of his faith, straightway consigned its wearer to the abode of the damned. Perhaps they saw each other's souls, in that first look, innocent of either wrongdoing or clothes.

They had walked, side by side, across the market place before the Portugee gathered himself from the slime of the gutter and lurched back into the tavern. For a moment he had contemplated reprisals, but the nature of the quarrel prevented. To have attacked Ramona's rescuer in the open would have been too dangerous, since it must inevitably result in the disclosure by the girl of his reasons for doing so—a matter he was by no means anxious to have come to Ormiston's ears. So he fingered his rapier, and consoled himself with thoughts of secret revenge, washed down by many more cups of wine.

The two, so suddenly aware of each other's presence in the world, walked on, their talk, quite commonplace, having to do with their reasons for being where they were. Barton told of his trading ship, now seven weeks out from New Bedford, and of its almost completed cargo of satins and rum. Ramona, although she did not lie to him, permitted him to believe that which was untrue. She lived on the outskirts of the town, she said. Her parents were dead. He was too new to the Indies to realize the improbability of all this. Port Royal, indeed, had once been a Spanish town, before the English took it away from them. none of that race lived there now, save those who, like Ramona, were slaves.

Their second meeting, the following day, had not been quite accidental—both of them had been too eager for it, for that. He had matters to attend to in the market each morning. Some bargains in Spanish cloths were still to be consummated. She came to buy fruit, although for that she might well have sent the hunchback. Ormiston was much aboard his ship, these days, refitting, cutting ports for some larger guns he proposed to mount forward; these preparations suggested to Ramona an impending expedition, rumours of which had otherwise reached her. She told Barton, when he asked permission to walk home with her, that it could not be, that day—she made some minor excuse—that perhaps some time later he might come to see her—she would send him word by the maid. She said this merely to put him off, although the thought of welcoming him in her garden was very dear to her, but so long as Ormiston remained ashore it was not to be dreamed of; the coming cruise might open the way, she argued to herself, provided it took place before Barton himself was obliged to depart. If not, then—then she could go back to her hammock and dream with a more tangible figure at the centre of her dreams that had been there up to now. It was of him, indeed, that she was thinking, when, with no word of warning, he staggered that night into the moonlit garden.

With a dreadful fear gripping her heart, she had asked him why he had come. Why, God knows, she thought, with Ormiston inside the house, ready to kill both her lover and her love with his rapier and his biting laugh.

"Why have you come here?" she whispered again, going toward him very swiftly.

Barton paused, and over his face there crept a look of bewilderment. He felt that he was not welcomed; by her manner she made him feel that. He found himself unable to explain it, or her fear.

There are 250 cups of strong, rich tea—all from a pound package of Red Rose.

That seems a very large number, but then you must remember that Red Rose Tea is composed chiefly of the strong, rich Assam teas from Northern India, which yield an astonishing amount of tea essence.

Why! You can brew five generous cups from about one cent's worth of Red Rose.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Two men were disputing over their respective churches. One was a Baptist and one was a Presbyterian. Finally one of them called a neighbour who was passing and asked his opinion as to which was the better church in which to be saved. "Well, neighbour," he said, "son and I have been hauling wheat nearly forty years. There are two roads that lead to the mill. One is the valley road and the other leads over the hill and never yet has the miller asked me which road I came, but he always asks: "Is the wheat good?"

There is a good deal of undeserved censure passed on women on account of their not making home more attractive. Most of this blame is fairly chargeable on men. With what heart can a woman strive to make the fireside cheerful when she knows, from bitter experience, that the companion of her life will come home to criticize her cooking, to disregard her personal appearance, and to let off upon her wounded but patient ear fretful language on account of everything that has gone wrong out-of-doors? See to it that you do your part, Mr. Husband, to make home happy by cheerful encouragement to your wife.

* * *

A bond of sympathy should, and in most instances does connect mother and daughter. What is more natural than that a young girl should seek her mother's sympathy and advice when trouble comes. Mother's voice has been music to her ear since memory first dawned, her hand has rocked the cradle, rested upon her head as she lisped her first prayer, and smoothed her pillow during the weary hours of sickness. She can be trusted and into her ear is poured the secret that no one else may know. Whether it be an offer of marriage or an intimation of a broken vow, mother will know best how to advise.

* * *

Our home should be so filled with pleasant smiles, loving words and kind acts, that the moment a member enters it the sunshine of happiness will beam from every countenance and a thrill of joy fill every heart; in fact the home should be to its members, the pleasantest spot on earth. If cross words must be spoken let them be directed to strangers or better still go into the woods and direct them to the wild animals; but a still better way is to keep the mind so full of good thoughts, and the hands so busy in performing kind, Christian acts that there will be no room for cross words to mature, and no time or disposition to utter them.

* * *

We estimate a mother's importance in her family as high as any one can; and yet we do not believe she monopolizes all the qualities needed in the great work of training up human beings. Her familiarity with her children places her in some respects, at a disadvantage for the exercise of wholesome authority. The wise father will not indeed take the reins of the family government from his wife; but he will make his children feel and know that her gentle sway is sustained by a firm and steady hand; that behind their mother's tender heart stands a cool judgment and a will stronger even than their own, and that cannot impose upon the one or resist the other.

* * *

The truest, best and sweetest type of the girl of to-day does not come from the home of wealth, she steps out from the house where is comfort rather than luxury. She belongs to the great middle class—that class which has given up the best wifehood, which has given helpmates to the foremost men of our time; which teaches its daughters the true meaning of love, which teaches the manners of the drawing room and the practical life of the kitchen as well as teaches its girls the responsibilities of wifehood and the greatness of motherhood.

Don't be a grumbler. Some people contrive to get hold of the prickly side of everything; to run up against the sharp corners, and find out all the disagreeable things. Half the strength spent in growlin would often set things right.

* * *

The woman that saves up her household worries and her bodily pains and aches to entertain her husband with on his return home, drives a sure nail in the coffin of conjugal happiness.

* * *

To us it is a beautiful sight to see an aged Christian mother basking in the sunset of a life that has been nobly lived. We visit her at her home There she sits—the old Christian mother—ripe for heaven. Her eyesight is almost gone;; but the splendors of the Celestial City kindle up her vision. The gay light of heaven's morn has struck through the gray locks which are folded back over the wrinkled temples. She stoops very much now under the burden of care she used to carry for her children. She sits at home to-day, too old to find her way to the house of God; but while she sits there, all the past comes back to her and the children that forty years ago trooped around her arm chair with their little griefs and joys and sorrows—those children are all gone now. Some caught up into the better realm, where they shall never die, and others out in the broad world, attesting the excellency of a Christian mother's doctrine.

* * *

There should be no day in our lives that did not record some act of kindness, some help held out to the needy. One self-denying act or some kind word, or a pleasant glance, has fallen like sunshine or ceased an aching heart. There is no act intended to help another, too small for the Master's notice. It is the conscious attention to what the world calls little things that makes the great beauty and success in life.

A touch of the hand, a look of love, a kindly deed, a sympathetic smile are the medicines for a broken heart.

The Idea of the Food Service Pledge

The chief end to be attained by the work of the Food Controller is to have available as large a quantity as possible of suitable foods for the sailors and soldiers fighting for us and for the allied people overseas. The attainment of this end, however, involves many questions, one of which is the maintaining of a sufficient, and suitable food supply, at reasonable prices, for the civilian population of Canada. But the providing of food for overseas is the pressing concern of the moment, and the Food Service Pledge emphasizes nothing but that.

The principal foods which we can export are beef, bacon, including ham, and wheat, including flour, and for these there is the greatest need among the men in the trenches and people of Great Britain, France, Italy and other allied countries. Therefore, the Food Controller has had a regulation enacted under the War Measures Act, providing that all "public eating places" at which twenty-five meals or more a day are served, must not serve beef or bacon on Tuesdays and Fridays, and that these houses must not serve those meats at more than one meal on any other day in the week, and that at every meal at which white bread is served there shall also be served some substitute or substitutes for it. While it may not be feasible for all private houses to observe these regulations to the letter, it is urged upon all housekeepers that they observe them in spirit by using substitutes for beef, bacon and wheat (flour) wherever possible.

In addition to all these commodities which the United States and Canada can normally export, there must remain a tremendous shortage in these foods overseas, and unless the people of the United States and Canada can curtail their normal consumption of these particular foods by at least 25 per cent., our soldiers and allies will not be adequately fed

The so-called embargo on bacon recently enacted in Great Britain does not mean that the import of bacon is prohibited, but simply that no bacon can be imported except by the Government. This is the only way, they believe, in which the price can be controlled for the people in the homeland.

The Food Service Pledge is in the first instance a call upon the people of Canada to assist in curtailing the consumption of beef, bacon and wheat products for the sake of our own soldiers and our Allies overseas.

This is not the only regulation which the Food Controller will make but it is what he regards as the most important matter at the moment. The Food Service Pledge, therefore, does not confine itself to this specific regulation, but pledges the signers to observe requests or regulations which have for their purpose the same end and which may be found necessary in the future.

Every housekeeper should understand what is at issue when the pledge is presented to her, and assume a personal responsibility to see that so far as she is able the requisite food supplies may be available for export.

Bathe Internally And Keep Well!

Nature has mightily equipped us all, old and young, to resist disease—but she requires that we give her a chance.

We give her no chance if we permit the Lower Intestine to be more or less clogged with accumulated waste. Yet that is a universal condition to-day as is proved by the number of laxative drugs that are consumed.

You can help Nature in Nature's most effectual way by Internal Bathing and in an easy, non-habit forming way keep the intestine as sweet and clean as Nature demands it to be for perfect health and surer defence against contagion. Over a half million keen, bright, healthy people testify to its result.

Mrs. C. G. M., (name on request) of Strathroy, Ont., writes:

I am pleased to have this opportunity of testifying to the merits of the J. B. L. Cascade. I have been using it now for a year with satisfactory results. HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Lockjaw: The distressing and often fatal condition called Tetanus by physicians may be easily avoided if proper precautions are taken and even after it has developed, be cured by prompt and vigorous treatment of the right kind.

To illustrate: The simplest and most effective way of prevention I will describe a wound upon myself, and how I treated it. I had gone to the lake with my little chaps, and we all went in for a frolic in the cool, pleasant water. After a delightful romp and splashing around I started out of the water with the baby in my arms, and just before I reached the shore stepped upon a rusty nail. It penetrated the bottom of my foot far enough so that it required quite a pull to get it out. I dressed as quickly as possible and hurried to a summer cottage near by, where a friend supplied me with a bottle of peroxide of hydrogen. I had a sharp pocket knife and I cut away the skin and the flesh so as to lay the wound open to the farthest point of penetration, and then I poured in the peroxide of hydogen, saturated a bit of cotton with it, bound it over the wound, and came to the city. I did not want the wound to heal over quickly because the principal danger in such cases is from allowing the wound to heal outwardly before it has healed inwardly. Therefore in order to make sure of the matter, I took a toothpick, wrapped the end with a thin cover of sterilized cotton and dipped it in the carbolic acid, I then inserted this into the wound, which of course so burned the outer part that it would not heal as rapidly as the inner part. I then fastened on a bit of sterilized cotton with a strip of surgeon's plaster, and the wound was safe. Each night and morning I dropped into it a few drops of peroxide of hydrogen, and changed the dressing once daily. There was soreness of course, but no sign of pus or inflammation at any time, and in less than a week it was well.

In another case a man simply bumped his head against a rusty nail in the loft. It bled a little but he did not pay any attention to it. The blood formed a covering over the wound, and in three days he felt a stiffness in his neck; still no attention was paid to the little wound in the head, and soon the stiffening proceeded until a fully developed case of lockjaw had been established before a physician was called. The pain spread rapidly, and only drug treatment was used. Death followed in a few days, and the suffering was very great before the release came.

In some respects Tetantus is like blood poisoning. In ordinary blood poison the wound is generally the first cause. Being improperly cared for, diseased and poisonous matter is allowed to get into the blood and cause inflammation. This continued to spread until all the blood is corrupt, and death follows. In Tetanus the slight uncared for wound is the starting point.

Now, there are many of you who will remember having been wounded by rusty nails many times while working on the farm or about the house and you did not stop even to bind up the hurt. No harm followed, and you might go through the same experience a dozen times more, and never have Lockjaw, but let me tell you of the probable reason why you did not have trouble. The same carelessness which allowed the hurt to go uncared for was the cause of the scab being torn off the next day. This repeatedly occurred until the wound healed from the bottom, whereas if you had been exceedingly careful not to break the scab you might have had Lockjaw.

In the home treatment of Lockjaw two things must be kept in view. First that further progress of the disease must be stopped at once; and, second, the poison must be very rapidly eliminated from the system. The wound must be opened and thoroughly sterilized. Peroxide of hydrogen, will be the simplest and the safest treatment, but if you have it use tincture of Iodine, full strength. Use it freely and frequently 2 or 3 times daily. Stop all food and give great quantities of pure water. Cleanse the entire alimentary canal very thoroughly. The withholding of food and the drinking of water freely will soon cleanse the stomach, but the lower bowel and colon must be flushed by a very thorough enema of warm water. If a couple of teaspoonfuls of lobelia extract is placed in the water it will have a tendency to relax the contracted tissues and give great relief.

Then must begin a course of treatment that will cause the perspiration to flow very freely indeed. In the absence of better herbs, take a large kettleful of the broken stems, leaves and seed of hay from the barn loft; timothy, clover or millet hay as the case may be; fill the kettle with water and boil as if to make tea. Saturate several thicknesses of an old blanket with this and wrap the stiffened parts in it as hot as can be borne. If you have lobelia, use this freely, also making a hot decoction of the lobelia and saturating several thicknesses of flannel and bind over the abdomen.

Internally, give milk boiled with common fennel, which grows so plentifully in all parts of the country. About an equal quantity of water should be added to the milk; a teaspoonful of this every hour; also a teaspoonful of anise tea every three-quarters of an hour. Wrap the whole body in flannels and blankets so as to get as profuse a perspiration as possible, and when the poison begins to leave the system, after the herbs have had time to gain control of the muscles, the pain will begin to go down, the stiffened muscles relax, and the patient is saved. Do not let up on this treatment, however. Keep up the process of elimination as long as there are any symptoms of convulsions or stiffening of any of the muscles, and do not allow a hearty meal for a few days. Juicy fruits, a little toast and soft eggs, stewed prunes and rice, will be better than more hearty foods.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication, if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address, with 4 cents in postage.

Dear Doctor: I would like to have you tell me how to gain flesh, what to take, eat or do. I would like to gain 25 pounds. I now weigh 140 pounds but am not heavy enough for my height.—B.T.

(Answer) Systematic exercise along the lines laid down in Vol. I., good wholesome food, plenty of pure water, and abundance of air, and freedom from worry and nervousness, will provide all that is really necessary. Salted almond nuts, rice puddings, and layer raisins should constitute the dessert after one of your meals daily. Worry and nervousness are the principal things to overcome. It is better to be a little underweight than over the normal weight. You did not say how tall you were, therefore cannot tell how far you are below normal.

Bad Complexions Peeled Off At Home

The girl with the poor complexion complains, "I have to touch up my cheeks. I am sallow and a sight, and only my makeup saves me."

Now, as a matter of fact, more women spoil their good looks than improve them with cosmetics. The practice certainly is unnecessary, now that the virtues of ordinary mercolized wax as a beautifier have become known. It has been found that the wax has wonderful absorbent powers. It causes the faded or discolored scarf skin to flake off in minute, almost imperceptible particles, so gently gradually, as to cause no inconvenience at all. In this way the old complexion is actually removed—likewise all fine lines, freckles, pimples, blotches, moth patches and other surface defects. A new complexion appears—a clear, smooth, youthful, healthy-hued skin such as no paint, powder or cream can produce. Mercolized wax to be had at any drug store in convenient size package, is applied like cold cream and allowed to remain on over night.

Woman Trains Dogs Of War

ACCEPTED BY SECRETARY OF WAR—SYSTEM FOR TEACHING DOGS OUTLINED—BARS PUNISHMENT ENTIRELY.

It is agreeable to find, and on the testimony of a woman, too, that the training of animals is not all, or any, brutality. That story of Jack London's, published in a recent magazine, made one feel as if any exhibition of so-called trained animals was nothing but an exhibition of what could be accomplished by brute force and fear.

But recently a gift of one thousand dogs to be trained for war has been accepted by Secretary Baker, and the matter of their training has brought forward the work of a woman, Mrs. Marie R. B. Wanner of Meadow Brook farm, the only woman in America who is training dogs for active Red Cross service on the battlefield.

"Never punish a dog," Mrs. Wanner says, "if you wish to get anywhere with it. If a dog is stubborn or disobedient, put it away in its kennel for an hour or two and then go back over the lesson, over and over. It is worse than useless to try other means."

THE BREED OF DOGS.

The dogs Mrs. Wanner uses are, curiously enough. German shepherd dogs, though abroad Airesdales and Belgian police dogs are also used. The age of a dog is very important in the matter of training, for an old dog can rarely be taught. In a recent interview she says:

"Eight months is the age at which I begin. The training takes nine months, hours of daily lessons rigidly kept up. Of course, the principal thing, after you have mastered your method and studied your dog, is infinite patience," went on Mrs. Wanner, "but it is well worth while, because an expert police or Red Cross dog is a highly valuable asset to a police force or hospital corps."

Mrs. Wanner paid $1,600 for a trained German shepherd dog abroad, and recently she sold one of her own dogs, trained at Meadow Brook farm, for $2,500 a top price for an expertly trained dog of this breed. Abroad, the importance of the work these dogs can do has long been recognized. In this country we are hampered by scarcity not only of dogs but of trainers for them.

Mrs. Wanner's best dog is Felix, a Red Cross dog recently brought from France and one of the few dogs in this country which has seen actual service on the battlefields.

HOW THEY ARE TRAINED.

Mrs. Wanner trains each dog separately, taking him out alone for his daily lesson. Like human beings, each dog is an individual problem and the more a trainer studies him, the better he responds.

In actual field work the dog wears a Red Cross blanket for protection and identification and a tiny case of restoratives from which the wounded, if conscious, can help themselves.

In practice work the "wounded" must always have some movable object, such as a hat or handkerchief, which the dog can retrieve as proof of his find and need of assistance.

CHEMISTS WILL SOON TAP NEW SOURCE OF EXPLOSIVES

New York, September 26.—Thousands of chemists throughout the country are now awaiting word from those in charge of the ammunition of our fighting men at the front to undertake the task of removing every foot of coal gas of its content of toluene, one of the most powerful explosives so that the allied troops may be protected by the most lavish use of high explosives, according to a statement made to-night at the opening of the National Exposition of Chemical Industries.

Dr. C. H. Herty, chairman of the Exposition Advisory Committee, in a speech opening the exhibit, emphasized the imperative need of pouring a flood of high powered ammunition to the front as rapidly as possible, contending that such action is necessary if we are to win the war.

"Our men should be protected," declared Dr. Herty, "and every possible pound of high explosives that this country can produce should be manufactured and transported to the European battlefields. Trench warfare has met its master in high explosives. The terrible sacrifices of life can be lessened by the curtain of artillery fire There is no time to lose. High explosives must increase faster than our man power."

Chemists from all parts of the United States and Canada were present to-day at the opening session of the Exposition.

It is said that a raw potato rubbed on a griddle is as good as grease for frying cakes.

Peach Puffs.

Cream together one-half cup each of butter and sugar, add two eggs, one cup milk and two cups of flour into which has been sifted three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Butter cups and slice into them one good-sized peach, or an equal quantity of any other kind of fruit or berries, then half fill the cups with batter. Set the cups in steamer or in kettle with enough water in it to come halfway up the outside of the cups. Steam forty minutes. This recipe will serve ten people. Serve with the following sauce: Beat the white of one egg very light and whip into it one-half cup of powdered sugar and an equal quantity of rich cream. I prefer this sauce with the puffs to any other, but when I am hurried I often serve simply with sugar and cream or with fruit juice, says the lady who submits it to the Rural New Yorker.

WORN BLANKETS.

Lay smoothly upon the thin place a piece of used merino underwear and pin amply and securely. Then begin at the lowest edge and stitch with the sewing machine, row after row successively, a quarter of an inch apart, until the extent of the patch is reached, withdrawing the pins as you proceed. This is quickly done, and is a most satisfactory method. Do not work around and around, as the goods will bulge in the middle, and half the design of the patch, that of neatness, will be a failure. Should the selvege be frayed, turn the merino over it, including it, and stitch as directed. It is not necessary to break the machine thread for each row. Stitch the way of the stripes.

On the silent walls of memory's halls
In secret, sequestered nook,
Concealed with care, as a treasure rare,
Hangs an oft turned picture book.

Oft when friends are flown, and we sit alone,
As the evening shadows fall,
We turn with a sigh, and a misty eye,
Those paintings, on memory's wall.

And fancy weaves, while we turn the leaves,
A fabric of varied sheen;
The warp as bright, as roseate light,
Dark shaded, the woof between.

First to the sight, with sunshine bright,
Smile childhood's happy years,
With skies so blue, and to fancy's view;
Enchanting the world appears.

Next eager youth, when our hearts in sooth
Were light, and each prospect fair.
Friends leal and true, and little we knew
Of life's trouble and toil, and care.

Then, from greed of gold free, we bent no knee,
To gods of a sordid mould,
And reaped more joy, without base alloy,
Than the miser, from wealth untold.

Swift turns the page, where the strife we wage,
Ambitious of mammon's dower,
There with reckless haste, youth's prime we waste
In the struggle for pomp and power.

May hap lovers leal, for woe or weal,
Fond vows at the Altar plight,
While their trusting gaze, down the future strays,
From love's unclouded height.

Chance the next leaf, portrays dark grief
Of mourners who bitter weep,
With drooping head o'er a Churchyard bed,
Where their hopes, rudely blighted, sleep.

Thus the leaves we turn, while our hearts deep yearn
O'er bright scenes, beautious traced
Or grieve in vain, that a darksome stain
Has a spotless page defaced.

Still with joy, or pain, must we take again
At those pictures a lingering look,
For we love to pore, on the treasured store
Of this well-worn old picture book.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Advantage of Royal Blood

By EUNICE BLAKE

The village of Queen Anne on the south Atlantic coast was named for the queen who was on the throne of England when the place was settled. A natural son of King Charles II. fitted out the expedition that made a village on what was then an uninhabited ocean shore. He came but himself, and his progeny now mingled with that of the other settlers. The consequence was that at the middle of the nineteenth century every inhabitant of Queen Anne could boast that he had royal blood in his veins.

Notwithstanding the aristocratic atmosphere of the place, nearly all the men as soon as they became old enough to strike out for themselves left for more active regions, leaving the women behind them. Occasionally some persons who desired a restful place to live would settle in Queen Anne, but after staying there some time, finding that none of the residents called on them, moved away. The consequence of this considerable going and inconsiderable coming was that, in time, the village was reduced to several hundred maiden ladies, all of royal blood.

One of those persons who had attempted to make a home in Queen Anne was a lady named Rutledge, from the state of Alabama. She was an invalid, and her physician recommended her to change her residence to the seashore. Her husband was obliged to make a trip to Europe and left home the day his wife started for Queen Anne, he going to New York for the purpose of crossing the ocean.

Mrs. Rutledge, who was a ladylike woman, alone and needing attention, was dismayed to find that, not having royal blood in her veins like the others, she was left out in the cold by the citizens of Queen Anne. She remained there, however, till her husband returned to America, then joined him at their old home in Alabama, where she died only a few weeks after their reunion.

One day a gentleman aged forty, well bred and apparently having plenty of money, went to Queen Anne, looked over the place, expressed himself pleased with it and gave out that he intended to settle there. The ladies of the place soon learned that the new comer was a widower. In a place divested of men the matter of royal blood when an unmarried man was considered suddenly ceased to be of overweening importance. Every maiden of marriageable age was in a flutter. Every maiden dived into old chests to get out finery that had been brought from England long before that she might modernize it and make use of it to catch the widower.

The stranger had not been in Queen Anne a week before it was learned that he was indisposed. Miss Chalmondelay, who lived opposite his house, first became aware of this fact and instituted to send over delicacies

The news spread down the broad street on either side of which the village was built, and everybody, even to the uttermost end of the town, sent broth or jelly or fruit or some other delicacy to the invalid.

Had he consumed all he received he would have soon died of overeating, but it is questionable if he ate any of it. His servants certainly had such a feast as never before. The invalid recovered and found an accumulation of cards bearing the names of the donors of the delicacies that had been sent him, which filled a sizable wicker basket. As soon as he was able he began calling on the ladies who had favored him and did not cease till he had thanked every one of them in person.

This required time, but when finished the stranger had a calling acquaintance with every lady in Queen Anne. Some were very old and some very young. These he favored but once. Those of a marriageable age he made a list of, and there was not a day or an evening that he did not make as many calls as the hours would admit. It was evident to every woman in the village that he was looking for a wife, and every unmarried woman was hopeful.

What the stranger said to these ladies, what hopes he excited in each heart, never became common property, though there was a good deal of speculation as to what fortunate spinster would secure the prize. At one time it would appear after the bee had been buzzing for awhile on a single flower that he was about to alight, but the very next day he would be seen seeking honey from a different source.

One morning Miss Chalmondelay on rising looked between the slats at the house opposite. The doors and windows were closed, and the premises seemed deserted. That day each and every marriageable woman received a note, which read as follows:

I have decided that since there is no royal blood in my veins it is not seemly I should unite with the descendant of a king.

These notes were signed "Rutledge." No one could explain what the stranger meant by his strange conduct till one of them discovered that this was the name of the invalid lady who had recently been among them.

For a time each recipient kept her secret, but one after another finally told, and the whole thing came out. Then they understood that they had one and all been punished for their heartlessness to the wife of the man they had honed to catch.

EMERGENCY RATIONS.

Food the Soldier Eats When His Regular Supply Fails.

Of the emergency rations of the hunters of the world the most ostentatious is Uncle Sam's ration of compressed maize meal with meat, farina and three chocolate bars. This ration is deficient in fats for the very good reason that, even though hermetically sealed, it would become rancid if it carried any more fat. It is not therefore a balanced ration, but the container holds enough actual food to keep a soldier from starving for twenty-four hours.

The British troops as well as the Dutch have a sausage made of ground peas highly salted, reported to have been originated by the Scotch and which is put up in regular sausage skins. It is said to be the most sustaining emergency ration known.

The Italian butter ball is interesting because of the perfect preservation of the unsalted butter within the dry cheese envelope. The compressed tablets of tea make it possible for one to eat his tea if water is not available, the Russians getting what they call a dry cup of tea by slipping a tablet of compressed tea into the mouth and allowing it to dissolve slowly. All sorts of meat and fish are dried in sheets and strips and hunks by the various armies.

These are not the foods, however, upon which armies live, but the emergency rations upon which the soldier depends when the regular rations fail.

Knew of the Duchess.

When the Shah of Persia visited England, many years ago, he was presented to the Duchess of Westminster, and greeted her heartily. "I have heard much about you," he said. "Your worthy name is well known in my country." The Duchess was surprised at first, then a light dawned upon her. "Gracious me! I do believe he mistakes me for Westminster Abbey?" she said. What was more, she was right.

British Flour Mills.

The flour milling capacity of the United Kingdom is said to be 30 per cent. in excess of the requirements; 44.28 per cent. of the flour manufactured, exclusive of all English wheat flour, is produced by the mills at the Thames, Mersey, Humber, and seven ports, and the other 55.72 by other English and Welsh mills.

Which do you wear?

Do you wear hosiery that fits loosely and wrinkles at the ankles and toes? — unsightly and uncomfortable.

Or do you wear Mercury Fashioned Hosiery, with the slim ankles and perfectly turned toes?—not a wrinkle anywhere.

It is also fashioned at the top of the hose in a way to make it more elastic and comfortable.

Our new machines knit a fine, close-knit fabric, superior in finish even to those high-class foreign lines formerly imported.

There's quality of material behind the finish, too. We use only the best raw materials for our black cashmere, black lisle and white lisle goods.

EVERYDAY READING

To secure the salvation of Jesus Christ, to realize it as our own, to enjoy its satisfying portion, we must be ready to make any sacrifice. We do not possess it if we only believe it exists or that it is of great value. We do not possess it if we only discern it—see at times visions of its beauty and richness, of all that it might bring into our life. We do not possess it even if in moments of high emotion, we seem to feel and know its wealth and power. Is it not true, do we not consciously know it to be true, that the reason why so many of us, who believe in the truth of the religion of the Lord Jesus, who even have glimpses of its wonder and beauty do not really possess it and are not possessed by it, is simply that we have not yet made up our minds that for us it is to be supreme thing. If a man has really come to see and know the worth of the salvation of God, that it does bring that sense of rightness, in relation to God himself, and the world, which condition or experience alone can satisfy—then the sacrifice which he makes to secure it is not to him too hard. Sacrifice of some sort there must be in all human life; it arouses either willing acceptance or grudging submission. The willing sacrifice is borne and even welcomed because it is sustained by an uplifting trust in the motives of the Power, which asks for it. Never without struggle can the kingdom of heaven be attained; it is the violent who press into it. To the outward observer the strain may seem hard and severe, but he who knows what he is seeking will find his sureness about the worth of it all, will bring even a joy into the sacrifice called for. It is God alone, in whom any intelligent person find true repose. Only when man has found Him does the great Eureka (I have found) burst forth from his lips; in Augustine's beautiful and often quoted words: "Lord, Thou has made us for Thee, and our heart is restless until it resteth in Thee.

Don't Avoid Corns But Don't Keep Them

With dainty footwear, corns can hardly be avoided. But they matter little when you know the way to end them.

As soon as a corn starts, attach a Blue-jay and forget it. The corn will never pain. In two days, if it is a new corn, it will disappear. Sometimes old corns need a second application.

It is almost as simple as removing a dirt spot. Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. It fits the toe like a glove. When you remove it—in 48 hours—the whole corn is done for. Blue-jay is a scientific method. A noted chemist invented it, and a famous laboratory prepares it.

It is not mussy, it is not harsh. It centers action on the corn alone, so it doesn't lead to soreness. And it is sure. No corn can resist it. Its millions of users have no dread of corns.

For your own sake, prove it on one corn. See how easily these kill-joys can be ended.

How Blue-jay Acts

A is a thin, soft pad which stops the pain by relieving the pressure.

B is the B&B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe and makes the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

Overland

A Success—Twice Over

This season's thirty-five horsepower Overland Model Eighty-Five has scored a double hit in Canada.

For this is the popular model that offers to buyers a choice of either a Four or a Six. It is built in both motor designs.

The wheelbase of the Four is 112 inches—the Six 116 inches.

Solid comfort is assured in both. Big, roomy seats and cantilever rear springs are just two of the reasons why.

As for the motors themselves, little need be said—the fame of the Overland thirty-five horsepower four-cylinder engine is known the world over. And the engine in the six is just as efficient.

We believe the Overland Eighty-Five comes closer to fulfilling the commonsense requirements of more people in Canada than any other model brought out this year.

"Quit Ye Like Men"

(By J. H. Jowett, M.A., D.D.)

Quit you like men! Our translators have taken four words to express a single word in the original. We have no one English word which can carry the splendid load of meaning. It really means—play the man! It really means—no funk! All the school children will know the meaning of that word. It is a good, strong, vital, English word; and I am sure it expresses the spirit of the Apostle's counsel to these young recruits. Lowell uses it in the Bigelow papers; To funk right out o' p'litical strife ain't thought to be the thing. No funk soldiers of Christ. I have sometimes heard men talk of late as though the Lord were dead, and the game is up, and the Kingdom in ruins. Play the man! The European soldiers of every nation are showing the world in their own sphere what it is to play the man. Some of us are becoming almost afraid to call ourselves Soldiers of Jesus when we see what a true soldier really is. Think of it! Think of his readiness for the front! Think of his laughter in sacrifice! Think of his song in the midst of danger and pain! Think of his endurance even unto death! And then think how we stand up and sing "Onward Christian Soldiers, Marching as to War!" And shall we funk in the day of darkness and disaster, and after months of appalling bloodshed and woe, shall we talk as if the campaign of righteousness were ended, and the Kingdom of Jesus overturned? Let us stop this kind of talk. Let us silence this sort of fear. Let us crush this type of disloyalty. It is an insult to our flag; it is a dishonour to our Lord.

Quit you like men, be streng. Put strength into everything, and do everything strongly. Do not let us speak or serve in a faint, lax, irresolute, anaemic, dying sort of a way. Be strong! Be strong in your prayers. Be strong in your moral and spiritual ambitions. Be strong in your visions and hopes. Be strong in your beneficience; strengthen it to the vigour of sacrifice, and if there be a devil, as more than ever I believe there is, let the Church surprise him by her strength. Let her turn the day of calamity into the day of opportuniy. Let her transfigure the hour of disaster into the hour of deeper consecration. Let us make new vows. Let us enter into new devotion. Let us exercise ourselves in new chivalry. Let us go out in new ways of sacrifice. My brethren, God is not dead. Quit you like men, be strong.

Medical Boards are Ready !

Medical Boards are now ready to examine all men who apply as to their physical fitness for military service. These boards are established throughout this district.

Upon examination, the medical board wil. classify each applicant according to his fitness; into Category A if he is fit for service in overseas fighting units; Category B if fit for service overseas in Army Medical Corps, Forestry Battalions, etc; Category C if fit for service in Canada only, etc.

Only men whose medical examination places them in Category A will be included amongst those required to join the colours in the first instance; the man placed in any other category will remain at home until men in the category to which he has been assigned are called to the colours. The men placed in Category A may still apply for exemption on any ground.

Men between the ages of 20 to 34 inclusive, who were unmarried or widowers without children on July 6th, 1917, are strongly advised to report before a Medical Board at once. This is the quickest and surest way for them to find out their status under the Act.

Parents and employers are also urged to have those in whose cases they are specially interested visit a Medical Board and undergo examination. The methods of examination are simple and will result in no discomfort or inconvenience.

Now* is the time for employers to obtain facts of the greatest value to them in making their calculations. The Medical Boards will determine how many of their employees will be left at home for physical reasons and how many will be selected for service unless an application for exemption be made with success.

PUBLIC OPINION

A GREAT GULF BRIDGED.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

One sacrifice led to another, with the result that the people of Great Britain have grown used to sacrifices and are beginning to understand the value of them. As a result, great Conservative statesmen, men like Mr. Balfour and Lord Robert Cecil; like Mr Bonar Law and Mr. Long, have met the demand to go a mile with Radical like Mr. Lloyd George and Labour men like Mr. Barnes and Mr. Smillie by going twain. So that the great gulf that once stretched between the two parties has been, in a measure, bridged, making a return to pre-war-time conditions forever impossible.

MORE HOHENZOLLERN SHAM.

(Boston News Bureau.)

"All is not gold that glitters," particularly if the Hohenzollerns are concerned. The 30,000, franc "gold" cup offered by the Kaiser in the 400-mile automobile race in 1912 won by Nazzaro, an Italian, was recently turned over to the Italian government. When it reached the melting pot, it was discovered that a thin layer of plate was the only precious metal about the Teuton trophy.

CANADA MADE SAFER.

(Toronto Globe.)

Why is compulsory service a commendable thing in Great Britain and the United States, and arbitrary and unrighteous in Canada? Neither in Great Britain nor the United States was conscription submitted to the people by referendum or election. The rulers in both countries became convinced that it was the proper and just system, the only mehod of waging war with the full strength of the nation. They took the responsibility of applying it, and their fellow-countrymen rallied about en masse to their leadership. Canadians, conscriptionists and anti-conscriptionists, rejoice in their decision. Canada is safer to-day because of it.

HERR BALLIN'S FATE.

(New York World.)

Fallen at last out of favour with the Kaiser, Germany's greatest shipping director, Albert Ballin, of the Hamburg-American Line, can now survey in all its fulness the tragedy which his master's war has made of his great life-work. It was to him "an idiotic war," and he said so. He was before the war "winning more trenches every day" for Germany than the Kaiser's army are winning in months, and he said so. His magnificent merchant fleet is now in the use of Germany's enemies or going to pieces in idle and hungry German ports. The fruits of his genius and long years of labour have been practically wiped out before his eyes and that anguish of spirit which must be his can win from the autocrat he served only too well no better consolation than a kick.

NO COMPROMISE.

(Washington Post.)

Americans see clearly that the only peace to which Germany is entitled is the peace imposed her by overwhelming defeat. When her legions are shattered, her domination over Austria blasted away, her Hohenzollerns knocked off their throne, her troops thrust back within her boundaries, and her people show unmistakable evidence of repentance and a desire to behave decently toward their neighbours, it will be time to talk peace. The peace terms will then be laid down to Germany, and Germany as a spent and beaten offender will pay the price of peace. The price which she has made others pay for war must be paid by her for peace.

There is no compromise. There is no method whereby civilization can be half shackled by a German half beaten. Either the shackles will be burst off or Germany will not be beaten. Nor can the struggle be postponed. It is here and now that the world must settle accounts with Germany, for all time to come.

FRANCE AND FRENCH-CANADIANS.

(From the Los Angeles Times.)

But how came the French-Canadians to be so obviously designated among the slackers? It upsets all our ideas of French gallantry and patriotism. True, many of the French-Canadians are several generations removed from France, but they have kept quite unusually exclusive; have remained a distinct race in the colony. Their language, their customs, their religion, are all French. Does it take the historic soil of France to breed a Frenchman? — the sort of Frenchman to whom La Patrie, his motherland, is the pre-eminent ideal. There is irony in the fact that, while the world is upholding France and the French as the arch-heroes of the war, the French in Canada are the only subjects in the British Empire who claim the right to stand aside.

The United States, which has always held itself aloof from European disputes, has submitted to conscription in the cause of a great principle, largely engendered by France's heroic stand and our old friendship for that country, with next to no opposition.

It will always be one of the ironical incidents of history that conscription was carried in Canada in spite of the French-Canadians, not because of them.

PEANUT GREATNESS.

(Wall Street Journal.)

When you want a synonym for mean littleness, don't say "peanuts." That used to be the right word, but not now. It takes an immense amount of grease to keep a big war machine running. Without it a soldier would not even be able to shave, wash himself well, eat a well cooked ration, and then go out and fire a few tons of nitroglycerine. When the Allies realized this, they rushed to the United States for lard, fats, oils and grease. An army of 60,000,000 swine faced the abattoirs and died by hundreds of thousands, but were all too few. Then the annual 5,000,000-ton crop of cottonseed was pressed into service, and gave up rivers of oil, but the cry was for more. The insignificant peanut offered itself with such good results that the call has gone out to raise more of him, and the acreage this year will be increased 61 per cent. When carefully made, the first run is fit for salad oil without refining; then come lower grades for cooking, and the last goes for soap stock and other industrial uses. The residum goes to the cows, and increases output of butter.

Germans Lost Heavily In The Recent Drive By The British

At Many Places the Shell Craters Were Filled With Dead and Wounded Men Were Sometimes Found Under a Pile of Corpses---Germans Attack on Verdun Front---Peru Severs Relations With Germany.

NEW RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT

(By The Associated Press.)

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, October 6.—The Germans suffered severely in the British attack Thursday, and a trip along the battle front east and northeast of Ypres showed hundreds of bodies of German sholdiers among the debris.

At many places the shell craters were filled with dead. Here and there were wounded, some times under a pile of corpses which the British stretcher bearers had not been able to reach.

Along one section of the Australiana front a thousand bodies were counted. A little further south there was another lot of seven hundred. Some of these had been prisoners who were making their way back within the British lines when they were caught in their own barrage and killed. One officer of the Prussian Guards, who was captured near Polygon Wood, said that the British shell fire did terrible havoc among his men.

A British airplane with an Australian as its pilot had a remarkable experience yesterday. The pilot and observer kept at work despite the clouds and the rain. The Germans fired many shells at the plane but it continued in action. When the pilot was finally forced to volplane down behind his own lines it was found that his machine had been struck so often that it was of no further use. Neither the pilot nor observer were injured.

To-day the pilot asked that be be allowed to go up again. His superior officer, however, thought that he had had enough excitement for the time being, and refused permission.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, October 6.—America's colossal preparations are already contributing to the success of Sir Douglas Haig's rapid blows on the Flanders front. To preserve every available man to meet America's forthcoming offensive the Germans have abandoned their system of counter-attacking. For the first time since the present method of trench fighting began, the Germans are refusing to come back. Once a position has been lost it is written off the books of the general staff. The whole German strength is being concentrated upon purely defensive measures. The Kaiser is recognizing that he cannot recklesaly throw away his soldiers in Flanders this autumn, and at the same time expects to maintain a serious defense next spring against the American army to be concentrated along some other part of the Western front.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 6.—The Germans made an attack last night on the Verdun frone near Hill 344. They gained a footing in the French positions at some points, but later were driven back.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH FRONT, October 6.—At some places in the new line established by the British attack in Flanders the Germans were in such exposed positions that they had pulled back their defenses a short distance. British patrols found forward defences in one section abandoned.

PETROGRAD, October 6.—A preliminary parliament is to co-operate with the Provisional Government in guiding Russia toward the Constituent Assembly. The Democratic Conference now in session so decided today when by a vote of 531 to 241, it declared in favour of such a parliament.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 6.—"The cause of the Entente Allies will be carried to a successful issue over Germany," General Pershing, the Commander-in-Chief of the United States forces in France, declared to-day. His statement was in answer to reports that the war on the Western front will end in stalemate. American newspapers recently arrived in France telling of the efforts in certain quarters in the United States to spread the idea that the Western front can never be broken, or the Germans driven out of France, aroused not only General Pershing, but the entire American army.

Further resentment has been caused by the information that these reports had been taken up by German newspapers in an attempt to belittle the United States' effort in the war.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, October 6.—The destruction of an enemy submarine by an American torpedo boat destroyer in European waters has been reported to the Naval Department.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LIMA, Peru, October 6.—The Peruvian Government probably will soon break off diplomatic relations with Germany. The first step was taken today when Congress by an almost unanimous vote decided in favour of such a course.

HAIG SHATTERED NEW DEFENSIVE PLAN OF ENEMY

Hindenburg's Scheme of Concrete Shell Craters and "Pill Boxes" Proved as Unsuccessful in Stopping the British As Was the Old Trench System

ARMOUR IS CRACKING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Oct. 6.—Field Marshal Haig's most successful blow against the German lines was achieved against Germany's newest defensive scheme—and against a plan of warfare on which the Teutonic high command has pinned all its hopes.

The outstanding fact of victory as its fruits were compiled to-day was that the German "pill boxes" defense scheme is just as vulnerable as the old style trenches defense plan. The Germans decided to give up complete trench warfare because they found the tremendous British offensive barrage made the trenches death traps. The "Prussian imperatoried," as Hindenburg is now called in German, thereupon devised a plan of concrete shell crater defenses distributed over a wide zone and sprinkled with "pill boxes." This defense scheme succeeded the intricately complete trench system on the very front where Haig struck. The new plan had for months been extolled behind the German lines as Germany's supreme tactical achievement. It was to the German rank and file the unbreakable "Hindenburg defensive." But Haig broke it.

The Hindenburg defensive did not live up to the expectations which its first tryout around Ypres in the summer's battles had raised. The conviction must now have been borne home crushingly on the Germans that their armour is cracking.

The terrible British barrage levelled the wide defensive zone and the new war "wake barrage" mopped up what was left. Between two walls of raining steel, the British, more like bulldogs than ever, tore apart the fabric of the Hindenburg defense. Not only this but the German counter attacks on which Hindenburg's new system counted so heavily for success, faded away.

Part of the Hindenburg strategy in giving up the completely linked and intricate system of trenches lines for scattered pill boxes and concreted shell craters, was based on the belief that if there were only few trenches the attacking enemy would lack cover. Heretofore the line after line of trenches even when half destroyed by barrage fire gave immediate cover for troops to withstand counter attacks. There were no intricate trench lines where the British assaulted. Never theless they dug in so quickly that no German counter blows dislodged them. Germany's steel wall is slowly but surely breaking, the imperatoried is making desperate search, but has not yet found props sufficient to uphold it.

Yesterday's results in the medical examinations at the armouries, as far as providing possible reinforcements for Canada's fighting forces at the front, were poor. Out of thirty-nine men examined during the day, only fourteen, or 36 per cent., were placed in A category. The morning session yielded only four front line men out of a squad of eighteen, while the afternoon session produced three out of eleven. At night, however, seventy per cent. of those examined were found fit for Class A, seven out of ten being placed in that category, bringing the percentage for the day up closer to the average for the week than the morning and afternoon sessions indicated. The total rejections for the day numbered fourteen, exactly the same as the number of "A" men.

Those interested are again reminded that there will be only one session of the Medical Board on Monday, Thanksgiving Day, at 10 o'clock. There will be no examinations in the afternoon or evening.

Omer Giroux, a well known Peterborough boy, and son of Mr. George H. Giroux, has enlisted with Uncle Sam's army. Word has been received by his parents that he has joined the United States Medical Corps and is now in training in a camp in Texas. Mr. Giroux had been living in Chicago for some time. His brother, Pte. Cyril Giroux, enlisted here in the 39th Battalion and won the Military Medal for gallantry at the front.

It is published for the information of the concerned, that all members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who return to Canada, whether on duty or otherwise, automatically come under the immediate control in matters of discipline, etc., of the Military authorities in Canada.

Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men, who are on furlough, and all others who for reasons are not attached to any particular unit in Canada, are directly responsible to the General or other Officer Commanding the District, in which they are, and he is to be considered for all purposes of discipline, as their Commanding Officer.

It should be understood by the public that Majors Cameron and Eastwood and Capt. Greer, who form the Medical Board at the Armouries, have not given up their civilian practice. They are devoting six hours a day to the examinations, but have changed their office and are carrying on practice as usual.

Sergt. E. Bronson, an Apsley boy, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, arrived home this morning, suffering from rheumatism and stomach trouble. Sergt. Bronson has to undergo further treatment at Kingston.

Peterborough Orders Full Ton Of Fish

This is Rather More Than Ontario Had Figured Upon

The supply of Ontario Government fish is increasing and next week will see regular shipments to Toronto, London, Ottawa, Hamilton and other cities and towns in the Province. Peterborough dealers have applied for one ton per week, which is rather more than the department was figuring on for a city of that size.

In Hamilton the shipments will be handled by the municipal corporation through the dealers. The Government will sell to the city and the city will distribute the fish through the retailers and collect from them. It is understood the plan proposed is that dealers must pay for one consignment before they get the next, and consumers will probably be required to pay cash.

A large shipment would have been sent to Ottawa yesterday had the department's telegram instructing the fishermen on Lake Nipigon to ship a good supply to the Capital been delivered in time.

Tag Day Promises A Large Collection

The children's Aid Society Tag Day promised a large collection, according to the reports received up to noon to-day. The money will be counted this evening by the Union Bank staff. It was expected by the staff of fair collectors that this year's aggregate would set up a new record. The flag that was flown in George Street was given by J. J. Turner & Sons, and Mr. George W. Powell's car, in which children from the Shelter were taken for a drive this morning, was decorated by Messrs. Cressman and Turner.

NOTICE.

Until further notice Dr. Greer's office hours will be from 1 to 3 p.m., and 6.30 to 7.30 p.m. Otherwise he will attend to his practice as usual.

BORDEN GOVT. IS ROUNDLY SCORED BY LAURA HUGHES

No Longer Worthy of People's Confidence, She Says

WATERLOO, Oct. 6.—Dr. Hett, candidate of the Independent Labour party in North Waterloo, opened his campaign here Thursday night. Miss Laura Hughes, of Toronto, was the chief speaker and scored the Borden Government, saying that it has failed in every particular and is no longer worthy of the confidence of the people.

"They are now coming to the people after having passed an act or two in their dying days," she said, "thinking they can cover their sins and shortcomings."

In reference to Mr. Hanna, she said: "What we want is a price controller, not a food controller." She said beware of the so-called Independent Liberal and Conservative candidate, as they only wear a white robe to cover the sins of the party which they desire to see put in power. Miss Hughes spoke at some length, and was frequently interrupted by applause as she scored the Borden Government.

"SLIM" SALLEE AND CICOTTE OPPOSING PITCHERS 1ST GAME

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—After a night of cold and rain ,the skies cleared this morning and the prospect for the first game of the world championship games between the Chicago Americans and the New York Nationals, was for fair weather and the temperature of about 55 degrees.

To-day is the great day of the baseball world. This afternoon at 2 o'clock the New York Giants, champions of the National League, and the Chicago White Sox, champions of the American League, meet for the world's championship. All night long a line of two or three hundred persons, including a few women, stood in line waiting for the ticket office to open at ten o'clock this morning. when the fifteen thousand remaining pavilion and bleacher seats were to be put on sale. It was cold and most of the night there was a drizzling rain, punctuated from time to time with a pelting mist that penetrated to the marrow. Some quit only to reappear before dawn. It is expected the lineup will be as follows:

New York National — Burns left field, Herzog 2nd base, Kauff centre-field, Zimmerman 3rd base, Fletcher short-stop, Robertson right-field, Holke 1st base, McCarty catcher, Sallee pitcher.

Chicago American—J. Collins right-field, McMullen 3rd base, E. Collins 2b, Jackson left-field, Felsch centre-field, Gandil 1st base, Weaver short-stop, Schalk catcher, Cicotte pitcher.

Umpires—Evans and O'Loughlin of the American League; Klem and Rigler of the National League.

COMISKEY PARK, Chicago, Oct. 6.—The Chicago White Sox, pennant winners of the American League, and the New York Giants, champions of the National League, met here to-day in the first game of the world's series in the presence of some thirty odd thousand persons. The White Sox depended upon Eddie Cicotte to outwit the New York batsmen, while Manager McGray tried out Schupp, Sallee and Perritt in the battery warm-up.

All Chicago made holiday to-day. Every artery that led to Comsikey Park pulsated with a great crowd fevered with excitement. Hundreds, unable to gain admission to the park, hung around the outside of the high walls and followed the game as best they could from the spectators who showed to them the progress of the play. It was a perfect October day and made to order for baseball. An Indian summer sun helped bake out the base paths made sodden by Friday's downpour, while a drowsy southerly breeze blew across the field.

Batteries—New York, Sallee and McCarty; Chicago, Cicotte and Schalk.

Manager McGraw used big Jeff Tesreau, his spit-baller in the batting practice of the Giants. Two left-handers, Schupp and Sallee and Perritt, took their turns at bat.

While the spectators were gathering a collection was taken up for the ball and bat fund for American soldiers fighting abroad. The players of both teams gathered around the home plate and a speaker made a patriotic address at the same time showing the flags of the Allies, and McGraw went to the club house for a conference, presumably regarding ground rules.

Injured By Shell Dropping On Foot

Lester Weir, Sherbrooke street, an employee of the Metal Products Company, while engaged in his work this morning at 2 o'clock, dropped a heavy shell on his foot, inflicting a severe cut. Dr. Morgan was called and the man taken to Nicholls Hospital, where, outside of suffering from a great loss of blood he is progressing favourably.

It's easy to please a woman after you find out what she wants—but there's the rub.

One Vessel Dropped Explosives on the Under-water Boat and Another Vessel Rammed its Prey While Travelling at Thirty Knots

WRECKAGE APPEARED

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Admiralty records just published show that recently honors do not rest only with the fliers of the Navy. They relate how a division of destroyers patrolling in the North Sea sighted a submarine and dashed forward at full speed. The war vessels crossed over the submarine just as it dived and dropped explosives on the spot. A large dark object came to the surface and then promptly sank, and wreckage and oil at once appeared.

In another incident several destroyers, while accompanying light cruisers, sighted a small sail on the horizon, which turned out to be a submarine. One destroyer altered its course and followed the submersible, which had dived, but soon raised its periscope, and then again dived within ten seconds. The destroyer went at full speed for the spot. The submarine's bow suddenly broke the surface half a mile away, showing the conning tower and a large vertical rudder. The war vessel rammed the under-water boat while going at a speed of thirty knots. The enemy craft sank vertically, bubbling like a gigantic empty bottle in more than a hundred fathoms of water.

Further Progress In The Formation Of A New Cabinet

A Number of Changes Forecast at Ottawa---Western Liberals Expected to Arrive To-morrow---Sir Wilfrid Laurier Will Go to Toronto For a Few Days

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—Cabinet making is a difficult business, especially when the Cabinet is to be made of national timber. Further progress, however, is expected along that line to-day, when it is expected General Mewburn, of Hamilton, Adjutant-General and former head of the Canada Defence Force, will be sworn in as Minister of Militia in the Borden administration. It was at first anticipated that General Mewburn would go to the overseas Ministry, but it has been decided otherwise. The best guess for overseas continues to be Sir James Lougheed, leader of the Government in the Senate. General Mewburn is already very popular in the Department of Militia. Present indications are that in the shuffle Sir Edward Kemp will be made Minister of Customs. This arrangement is based on the assumption that Hon. Dr. Reid will go to the Railway Department, and Hon. Frank Cochrane will be made head of the Canadian Board of Directors. It is stated, however, that Mr. Cochrane does not contemplate going out of politics, and is even now prepared to take charge of the Ontario election machinery and organization. It is the Premier, however, who is making the Cabinet, and not his Ministers. The Western Liberals are not expected here until to-morrow morning. They will spoil Thanksgiving week-end for the Government. There are strong indications that the leadership situation in the Liberal camp is past, and there are few here who now believe that Sir Wilfrid will resign.

The Liberal Chief has never seemed so cheerful and confident as he did yesterday on his return from his second visit to Montreal. On that occasion he is believed to have found the no-compromise element who advocated the repeal of the Conscription Act and demanded such a stand on the part of Sir Wilfrid in a much more reasonable frame of mind. As a matter of fact, the announcement of retirement negotiations appear to have had a salutary effect on the stiffer-necked members of his followers.

Sir Wilfrid will go to Toronto on Sunday night, and, it is said, has been promised a royal welcome by his followers there. The correspondence received by the old chief, following the retirement announcement, has been very gratifying to him. Retirement is not at present expected. Dissolution takes effect from to-day, and there are no longer any representatives of the people; all that is left is an administration which must seek a mandate at the coming election. Sir Wilfrid will be in Toronto during the first three days of the week, and will be a guest of P. C. Larkin.

A CHIMNEY FIRE.

A chimney fire at 506 Elm street, the home of Mr. Michael Caccobilla's, gave the Fire Department a call at 633 this morning. No damage was done.

CHRISTMAS CHEER FOR THE SOLDIERS

At to-morrow's services at Murray Street Baptist Church an offering will be taken for the purpose of defraying the expense of providing the Christmas cheer sent this year to the soldiers of the congregation who are serving in France and England. The amount required is larger than ever, and it is confidently expected that every member of the congregation will regard it as a privilege to participate.

ALL ARE INVITED

Convention at the Assembly Hall To-morrow and Monday

As announced in Thursday's issue the Christian Convention in the Assembly Hall on George street will be preceded by a prayer meeting this evening at 7:30. A 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon any Christians in the city are cordially invited to the meeting, and in the evening at 7 those still in "nature's darkness" are especially invited to hear "words whereby they might be saved." On the holiday at 10 in the morning, 2:30 in the afternoon and at 7 in the evening, all are invited to hear the Word of the Lord. The Assembly Hall is on the first floor of the Old Opera House Building, 4 doors north of the Market Arcade on George street. No collections will be taken up at these meetings, and a hearty welcome awaits all who come.

PETERBORO' SOLDIERS ARRIVE HOME

A special programme of music, recitations, etc., will be given on Monday evening at the S. A. Temple. A number of visitors will be in town, including the officers from Oshawa, and a splendid evening is promised by all who attend.

The Scouts and Guides will take part in the programme, as well as some of the larger folks.

OUR COUNTRY'S CREDIT.

Lord Northcliffe, who has a very direct way of saying what he means, says of the Canadian General, Sir Arthur Currie, that "he is the biggest general in the field to-day." This is pleasant hearing for Canadians, and is complementary to the many tributes that have been paid to Canadian soldiers for their work on the battle front. It is no small praise to this country that it has not only produced soldiers that measure up, in fighting spirit, resourcefulness, and success to the standard of the best troops of older nations, but has produced a General that is ranked among the best of the commanders now doing work in France and Flanders. We expected much of our Canadian soldiers; but we hardly expected that they would win battles and honours and praise to the extent they have done. While it does not become us to assume a braggart tone over these things, it is permissible to have a modest pride in the soldiers who, by their exploits, have reflected credit upon Canada, and themselves, and, at the same time, done what is more, have signally helped Canada contribute a big share to the triumph of the cause of liberty and humanity.

The Indians of Ontario refuse to accept exemption from military service. Should they be compelled to ask the franchise, which every slacker and misfit enjoys?

IT ALL DEPENDS.

The Ottawa Evening Journal, the Capital organ of the Government, in both a geographical and journalistic sense, says:

"The addition of C. C. Ballantyne to the Borden Government complies with the demand for big business men to help administer Canadian affairs."

This does not go as a matter of course; but as a matter of proviso. Mr. Ballantyne's addition to the Cabinet, though he is a Liberal and a great business man, prominent in the business circles of the greatest city in Canada, will not meet the "demands for big business men" in the most desirable sense, if his business affiliations exercise a similar influence in national administration, that has obtained in the past. Sir Thomas White was a Liberal and was counted a "big business man," as he is a man of great ability; but he carried into the Borden Cabinet with him "big business interests," whose influence and pull have overshadowed the policy and practice of the Government.

Of course we want big business men in the Government, but they must be big business men whose trained efficiency in affairs must be solely devoted to advancing the interests of the country, and not those of the "big interests" who have long exercised, if not a sinister, an undesirable and expensive, influence upon the government in relation to the little interests—the collecive interests of the every-day, hard-working, common, honest people, at whose expense national administration has been largely used as an instrument of class aggrandization. Taking Mr. Ballantyne "into the Borden Government" does not sound promising. What the people want is a union government, whose personnel and policy will represent patriotism, and not party—that, will as fully represent the win-the-war spirit as does the present government of Great Britain, in which party names and associations are forgotten.

If the Indian Department, the Methodist Church proposes to add to its mission organization, does not find more favour in the eyes of the Chippewas than the Indian Department at Ottawa, its usefulness is problematical.

STAND BY THE VETERANS.

The meeting held on Thursday night in the interest of providing permanent quarters for the War Veterans' Association may be called successful insofar as it established and emphasized recognition of the claims of the veterans to consideration by the not large, but largely representative, audience present. The claims of the veterans by no means suffered at the hands of Mr. N. F. R. Knight, Dominion Secretary, whose forcible and appealing presentation of the case of the veterans suggests the idea that if he fights as well as he talks he is a man to be reckoned with.

The concrete proposal made by Mr. G. N. Gordon for the utilization of the premises of the Peterborough Club for the Veterans, is one deserving of consideration, especially in view of the financial factor looming largely in the proposal to acquire a suitable home for the Veterans. The buildings are excellently adapted to the purpose, and the proposal to use them is an opportunity presented to the members of the club for the exhibition of a spirit of sacrifice involved in surrending to, or sharing their quarters with, the highly deserving veterans. Many members of the Club are already soldiers, some of them hard at work in the fight to return, God willing, some of these days as veterans, themselves, and having a double claim upon the premises—as members and veterans.

The acquirement of the Peterborough Club's quarters seems the most presently promising solution of the question of securing suitable quarters; and no doubt the committee, to which the matter was submitted, will go into the question of details, and be able to present a working recommendation. It is hoped they will succeed, for the credit, patriotism, and gratitude of the city are involved in a hearty and adequate recognition of the debt we owe to our veterans. We can not in the nature of things, pay this debt; but we may, and can, and should, pay something on account by helping the Veterans to secure a home for consultation and perpetuation of the spirit of comradeship developed in the gruelling campaigns they have made for us and ours in the widest sense. Peterborough has distinguished itself, or has been distinguished, by the large fighting enrollment made by its citizens, and a corresponding responsibility rests upon Peterborough to recognize the claims and reward, in part, the services performed by our soldiers who have come back to us with a splendid record of service and sacrifice.

Prohibition has captured the greatest stronghold on the continent—the Gibraltar of the West. Prohibition has carried in Quebec city by 2,200.

DISPARITY OF PAY.

The Government, or the Post Office Department, must have given the postmen of Peterborough a pretty "raw deal," to put them practically on strike for higher wages. The letter carriers asked for bread and they got a stone. A year ago they asked the government for an advance of wages of twenty dollars a month and after a year's delay they have been offered in satisfaction of their demand an advance of $6.72 per month.

No doubt the postmen are hot under the collar, but in the resolutions adopted they take a moderate and reasonable and argumentative stand. They regard the advance of $6.72 a month as "totally inadequate" in relation to the greatly increased cost of living, and pertinently point to the government's own statistics which show that the cost of living has increased 47 per cent. in the past three years. That is, the buying power of a dollar has been reduced to 53 cents. In industrial and indeed in nearly all other employment, wages have increased from $20 to $30 per month, and in some cases more. Under the circumstances, the local post office employees feel justified in declaring their dissatisfaction in one of their resolutions as follows:

"That after waiting patiently for over twelve months the allowance handed out to us creates the impression that those in authority and drawing large salaries, do not know and do not care how the workers exist."

There must be some official indifference, and some ground for subordinate government officials feeling "sore" over the disparity of pay. If the refusal to pay living salaries to the postmen were founded upon economy or scarcity of money; if the government practiced the economy it calls upon the people to exercise, and compels some of its employees to practice, there would be some excuse for holding down the postmen to "totally inadequate" pay. But there is no economy necessary; the government has millions for railways; it has found hundreds of thousands to pay largely ornamental colonels and other officers four or five dollars per day. The post office department has a big surplus, and it is not so much lack of money as "not knowing and not caring how the workers exist," as the postmen themselves deliberately conclude.

The postmen are our servants and they serve us well, and we do not feel comfortable in acepting service paid for by our own money, at what is claimed to be unjust wages. The government can be generous in some things, a little too generous, we think, but with a government as well as everybody, being "mean in money matters" with subordinate employees, is a small thing. If it is true as claimed that postal employees have to take "side-line" jobs to eke out a decent living, the government does not deserve much credit over the situation.

It is also a small thing to cheese-pare the allowance for street car fares and compel postmen to pay out of their own scanty pay the expense of serving the public. Delivering letters is hard work and our postmen do their work well. Day after day, rain or sun, heat or cold, they make their rounds, and at the end of a "beat" they must be pretty tired; and to deny them sufficient for street car fares seems pretty hard in face of the fact that the Postmaster-General—as well as other ministers—with his salary of $9,500 a year, has a private car luxuriously fitted and provisioned, placed at his disposal without cost to himself, when he wants to travel. Such disparity of reward for faithful and hard work is what creates discontent and makes the people "sore," tends to dampen and deaden the popular spirit of service and sacrifice.

A campaign is on foot to raise half a million for Methodist missions. All right; if the money is to be used to Christianize Germany, Turkey, and other heathen countries.

Leading Austro Spy Caught At Geneva

French Police Collect Lots of Evidence Against Him.

GENEVA, Oct. 6. — An Austrian named Jellinek Mercedes has been arrested on a charge of espionage for the Central Powers. He was permitted to retain his liberty, owing to ill-health, on depositing bail to the amount of 20,000 francs.

The man, who resided at Nice prior to the war, possessed a vast fortune there, much of which was sequestrated. It is alleged that he was the German master spy in the Riviera, where he was a well-known figure. He was closely associated with another Austrian millionaire named Margulies, who recently was arrested in France, and is reported also to have been a friend of Profect de Joky, who recently was removed from his position at Nice, mainly, it is alleged, as the result of accusations made against him in connection with his relations with Jellinek Mercedes and other subjects of the central powers in the Riviera.

A despatch from Paris late in August said an Austrian capitalist named Margulies who had been sent to an enemy concentration camp was being made the subject of a judicial inquiry. It was added that various documents were seized by the police in his villa at Nice, but that the nature of these papers had not been disclosed.

Claims To Have Secured Power To Prosecute Fox

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—Questioned this morning regarding the denial of Premier Hearst that power had been given by the Provincial Attorney General to indict Manager Fox of the William Davies Company for failure to supply the Department of Labour with certain information, W. F. O'Connor, Cost of Living Commissioner, said: "I applied for permission to prosecute Mr. Fox and was given clearly to understand it would be granted after I had forwarded certain papers, which I am now doing."

Married Now To A Brunette, Blonde Comes To Claim Him

New York. — To be transformed suddenly from a lonesome bachelor on board of a Dutch freighter tied up by the food embargo, to the husband of a charming brunette while at the same time comes the news that another charming woman, a blonde, is hurrying here, with matrimonial intentions—that is the delightful, but slightly complicated set of circumstances which enmeshed Alex. Voordyk, second officer of a Dutch freight steamship in the Hudson River, off 100th street.

For several weeks Alex in his loneliness has looked forward to the passing each night of the steamship Berkshire, of the Hudson Navigation Company, with good reason. For Alex. has been the recipient of gay salutations from the good looking chief stewardess of the night line vessel. So interested did he become after a while in the identity of the fair waver of greetings that he obtained a short leave of absence and took a trip on the Berkshire.

Eventually he met a certain Miss Grace Peck, who (wonder of wonders) was none other than the chief stewardess and the fair signaller. Their acquaintance developed and lately when the Berkshire has passed the Dutch freighter the salutations have taken a more tender and intimate tone.

Now enters the third bend of the triangle. During these six weeks of acquaintance developing the second officer received two letters from his erstwhile fiancee in Holland, whose picture he had carried next to his heart before taking that eventful trip to Albany on the night boat. In one letter this fair haired young lady wanted to know why he had not returned to her, as per promise of last March. In the second she wanted to know what vistas opened up before her and how large a part Alex. intended to take in the general landscape.

The letters struck no tender cord in Alex.'s breast, and he heaved them overboard. Yesterday, on board the Berkshire, he married Miss Peck in the saloon with all hands present and the crew piping gaily on the deck above.

But when the second officer returned to his own vessel after the ceremony, there to his bridegroom hands came a cable message, and this is what he read:

"Understand everything. All's well. Am coming."
(Signed) "Gretchen.

Presumably Gretchen had heard corroboration of the embargo and had decided to come across and gently but firmly claim her Alex. When Gretchen arrives it will be only to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Voordyk, which, considering the circumstances, may be an interesting event.

P. S., Mr. Voordyk wishes to deny any insinuations that the reason he married in this country rather than in Holland was because he did not propose to have any wooden shoes thrown at the head of himself and his fair young bride by the bridal party.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in the throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have 16 ounces—a family supply of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

VALUE OF WASTE STRAW.

Amount Wasted on Prairies Would Produce 22 Billion H.P. Hours.

In the western prairies of Canada alone, says a writer in the Dallas News, they have 20,000,000 acres in crops and from that they have an annual yield of over 20,000,000 tons of straw. Chemically, straw is not unlike wood and is, therefore, becousined with coal. Physically it is a nuisance because of the room it takes. Like wood and coal, it may be distilled in closed retorts and the result is good, inflammable gas, 10,000 cubic feet of gas per ton of straw after it has been scrubbed and the tar and ammonia removed from it.

Its heating value is 400 British thermal units per cubic foot, so that if all the straw of western Canada could be conveniently handled and turned into gas, the 20,000,000 tons would produce, converted into power, 22,000,000,000 horsepower hours or 2,511,000 horsepower years. That is seven times the power obtained in Canada from Niagara.

KAISER'S PALACE OF ACHILLION ONE OF THE EAST'S FREAKS

CORFU, Isle of Corfu. — Emperor William's famous summer palace of Achillion, on a height overlooking the bay of Corfu, had the French flag flying over it when we drove up for a visit to-day. At the gate way the arms of the Hohenzollerns blazed from the massive iron gates thrown back on either side. But these proud arms were for the moment obscured by the solid ranks of French soldiers, native troops from French Senagal, in the heart of Africa, black as coal, in the French grey uniform with red fez. They saluted the French officers as we passed through the gate, and their trumpeter sent a French bugle call echoing through the German emperor's gardens.

All about were evidences that French had replaced German direction at this imperial establishment, and that instead of being a summer plaything for majesty, it was now being put to some real use. The island itself is temporarily under a French military governor; French battleships and cruisers crowd the harbor and dominate the heights and French soldiers and seamen make up a considerable part of this medley of races emptied into Corfu by the stress of war. Here at the palace grounds we passed French Red Cross nurses tending wounded French soldiers in the olive groves, and one of the high officers of the French medical service came from the palace to greet the party as it arrived.

This palace of the Emperor is one of the curiosities of the East and is typical in many ways of the eccentric genius which contrived it. There are palaces the world over, but nothing quite like this exists anywhere else. Only Emperor William could have developed such an idea. The whole scheme is imperial and heroic. The palace is planted on the very spot where Ulysses came for his sojourns, and from the imperial chamber one looks out on the classic island of Ulysses where the great hero spent his leisure hours. Like Ulysses, Emperor William came here for his leisure, and every May, until the war began, the imperial yacht circled Europe from the North Sea to the Eastern Mediterranean in order that he might enjoy these classic and heroic surroundings during the loveliest period of the year. Looking down the steep cliff one sees the imperial landing place where the yacht was moored during these visits. Here the Emperor first set foot, reaching the palace by a flight of steps hewn in the rock, and lined with mable statues of the Greek deities. Or, if he did not wish to climb an automobile took him through the miles of drive in the olive grove making gradual ascent to the lofty palace.

The palace dominates a vast stretch of land and water, Albania just across the strait, then Greek Epirus to the south, the mountains and valleys of Corfu near at hand, Italy, lying low in the dim distance to the west, and the clear blue waters of the Adriatic reaching in all directions through the tangle of islands. It is suggestive of imperialism, and one thinks of what Emperor William had in mind when he looked out on this circle of many lands and their strategic waters.

There is one definite clue to his thoughts, in the heroic statue of Achilles which he built at the highest point dominating all this land and water. The statue is of bronze, showing the hero armed from head to foot, sword in hand and a shield on his breast, straining forward for the fight and looking intently out on this empire of foreign lands and waters spread at his feet. Perhaps William had in mind something more than a toy palace dedicated to Ulysses and Achilles and that the old Trojan heroes revived dreams of universal conquest.

The palace is of white marble, squarely and solidly built after the Greek classical design with the suggestion that a German hand had modernized the old classical lines. Along the middle front, facing the sea, runs a deep wide marble gallery or porch, and similar wide galleries are at the eastern end where the entrance is located. The building is three stories high, with a frontage of about five hundred feet, and has about one hundred rooms, including ball rooms, dining rooms, a royal chapel, and the suites of Imperial chambers. The marble columns of the galeries, the window cornices and the freizes along the front are all essentially Greek, and the whole place has the massiveness and majesty of a Greek temple.

Entering the main hall it was not clear whether one was in a palace, a temple or a museum. Immediately to the right was the royal chapel, with the large fresco of Munkacsy's "Christ before Pilate" back of the altar. By an ingenious electrical contrivance a flood of light could be turned on the central figures of the fresco, giving them a sort of luminous and living effect, almost as in a cinema, though it seemed a queer contrivance for a chapel. One could hear a murmur of "boche" run among the memebrs of the party indicating their view that a vandal hand had put together this mass of resco and effect.

Elaborate frescoes and mirrors covered the ceilings and the side walls of the state dining room. The subjects were always drawn from Greek antiquity, but the figures of dancing nymphs and fauns looked rather heavy as though they were the big-limbed people of the north instead of the fine and delicate creatures of legendary Greece.

The grand stairway was of marble, with black iron balustrade wrought into curious shapes showing the German imperial eagles. This grand stairway runs up three stories through garish yellow walls covered with strange frescoes and painted mirrors. These painted birds and vines on mirrors were cited by some of the party as an anachronism of art.

The huge painting of the "Triumph of Achilles" occupies the post of honor at the top of the grand staircase. It is one of those striking pictures full of life and movement, liko Gari Melchers' "War," in the Congressional Library at Washington and shows the same straining horses and men pushing forward to the combat. Achilles is shown in the full panoply of war, driving his chariot and dragging along the bloody, prostrate body of his foe, chained to the chariot wheel, with the rabble howling at the spectacle. Art connoisseurs do not always approve this picture, but the ordinary observer is attracted by its dash and has the feeling that he is here in the presence of one of those great tragedies of the Homeric age.

The palace garden is, however, the really remarkable feature of this establishment. In originality, beauty, and extent it is probably one of the finest gardens in the world. The unique feature is the strict adherence to the standards of legendary Greece, making one feel as though transported into some fairy-like precinct of the dim past. At every hand are marble and bronze statues of the old deities, heroes and muses. The palace entrance to the gardens is formed by a wide Ionic colonade, where the Imperial family used to pass their evenings. Near by is the garden of the muses, with heroic figures of the muses before each marble column. One looks through long vistas with these muses stretching away at either side of the walks. In the centre is a dancing bacchante, and in the neighboring fountain the water gushes from the mouth of a huge dragon carrying off a young girl.

These gardens are continued one after another in terraces running down to the sea. Each has its distinctive feature. Some are lined with beautifully wrought marble balustrades. Others are a wild tangle of giant palms with trunks three feet in diameter, or of flower beds laid out like the pavement of a temple. In one of these gardens is the chief art treasure, the "Dying Achilles," showing the hero in the death struggle with the arrow in his heel. One turns from the artistic merit of this statue, which is conceded by all critics, to the colossal bronze of Achilles notable chiefly for size and condemned by most critics. This colossus rises some thirty feet above the base and is a sort of modern rival to the Colossus of Rhodes or the Statue of Liberty in New York. It is striking, however, and even sensational, planted here in this tropical garden, at a commanding point overlooking a vast area and in a pose expressive of imperial conquest.

Passing out of the palace entrance one of the officers of the party noted the tall ornamental lamp posts lighting the way to the entrance. They were apparently of bronze, but as the officer struck his cane on one of these richly carved posts it did not give back the ring of genuine bronze.

AN INTERESTING EVENING AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Under the auspices of the St. John's A.B.C. Club, an interesting evening was provided in the school last night for the scholars and their parents. The programme was both entertaining and instructive. Three sets of lantern slides from the Sunday School Commission, Toronto, were used, two of them, "Pat and the Bear" and "How Freddie Minded the Baby," with readings by Misses Smith and Stewart, affording huge delight. The third set were on the subject of "The Sacrament of Baptism," the use of water as a symbol of cleansing being traced down from the "Flood," to modern times by a series of splendid pictures, and a most interesting and thoughtful lecture delivered by Mr. R. J. Devey, who seemed to be thoroughly at home with the subject.

Misses Quartermaine, Georgie Cuffe and Mr. Cowie gave delightful songs.

Mr. Bates, President of the A.B.C. Club, was in charge of the excellent arrangements

The lantern was operated by Mr. Cyril Devey and Mr. Douglas Canniff, and Miss Muriel Bridge assisted Mr. R. J. Devey in the vocal accompaniments on the piano.

These lantern evenings are to be given monthly throughout the winter.

Tom Moore called on Campbell one evening and in the course of a conversation Campbell mentioned a poem he had just composed, and the manuscript of which he showed to Moore, relates the New York Globe. It was entitled "The Battle of Hohenlinden," the last line of the first verse of which read: "If Iser rolling rapidly." When Moore was departing he slipped on the stairs, which caused Campbell to ask: "What's that? Whats that?" "I, sir, rolling rapidly!" instantly replied Moore.

CHANGES IN THE GROCERY MARKET

Lower Prices For Spring Chickens —Sugar Prices Due For Lower Levels

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer this week:

Price changes in grocery lines give no evidence of cessation as the number has been almost as large as in recent weeks. The majority of these changes are in an upward direction. Canned meats, shrimps, clothes lines, mixed candies, compound lard are among the lines in which increases have been recorded. The embargo on bacon has not yet had any material affect on meat prices, the tendency being to firmness in a number of lines of provisions. Barrel pork shows quite a marked tendency in the upward direction and pure lard has again been advanced. Live hogs were somewhat scarce during the week and prices paid were generally firmer. Good receipts of spring chickens were reported and prices were lower as a result. Egg prices were maintained, but there is a disposition to look for an easier tendency, due to the stimulus of better production. Butter is in firm position, due to the possibility of a heavy export demand developing. Buckwheat honey is reaching the market in fairly good quantities.

Canned Goods.

In canned goods interest is now centring on the new prices of tomatoes and corn which are expected to be announced in the near future. Wholesalers quite generally are looking for high prices. Canned salmon can no longer be obtained from the packers as they are completely sold out. Rangoon beans were in lower market, due to recent arrivals of cheaper stocks. Wholesale fish men anticipate there will be a diminution in their trade as a result of the Ontario Fisheries Department acting as a distributing factor for lake fish. Tomatoes and peaches were in the market in abundant supply during the week and prices were lower in consequence.

Sugar prices were maintained, but there is quite generally expectation of lower prices in the not distant future. Ontario flour showed an easier tendency during the week with prices lower. Flour prices are to be fixed by the Food Controller on Friday of this week. Wholesalers report a brisk trade and look forward to a good fall business.

MAJOR J. C. DAVIDSON TELLS OF MEETING MANY PETERBOROUGH PEOPLE

Interesting Letter From Rector of St. John's Who Has Returned to France After Being Invalided to England.

SOME IMPRESSIONS

No. 3 Canadian Stationary Hospital, B.E.F., France.
(Begun Aug. 17.)

The Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—It is now some little time since I have written through you to my fellow citizens, and I must jot down a few experiences on the chance that they may prove interesting to some, and also take the opportunity to send warm greetings to all Peterborough people with whom we absentees feel a close connection even if we do not know all personally. In a foreign land the tie of fellow citizenship has an increased meaning and value.

Fascinating and Exacting.

The work is so interesting and even fascinating, and withal so exacting, that without realizing it I ran down in health, and about the first part of June was put into hospital by the commanding officer and sent off on the first ambulance train which I found to be a marvel of comfort, spending the day in my berth. On arrival at the base there was a most pleasant surprise in the shape of a warm greeting from Miss Jean Harstone of the Motor Ambulance Convoy, with whom I gladly drove to No. 20 British General Hospital, of 1,500 beds. Here I remained for two days, one of my fellow patients in the long canva officers' ward being Lt.-Col. Sandford Smith, well-known architect, an old Peterbrough boy, who had been thrown from his horse when jumping.

A "Stretcher Case."

In spite of protests I was marked as a "stretcher case" for England (though glad of this afterwards), and was at 5 a.m. gently placed in an ambulance and then in the Red Cross train, which had just brought wounded from the Messines push. Thus on to the seaport where we were laid in rows on the pier and carried on to the waiting steamer which in some two and a half hours landed us at an English port where three ambulance trains were in readiness to carry patients to London, Cambridge and Birmingham respectively, my lot being with the last mentioned.

Once more we sank down in soft cots, were given a prettily-served meal and watched the lovely English scenery or dozed while being hurried to distant Birmingham, arriving with only a short stop in London at 1.30 a.m., feeling quite rested in spite of the long canvas officers' ward being the long journey on which I had not set my feet on the ground. Then ambulance again and to bed in the "First Southern General" which occupies the capacious buildings of the University of Birmingham.

Next day visited by the Bishop and transferred to the "Fourth Auxiliary Officers' Hospital" in Moseley, a suburb just opposite the residence of late Hon. Jos. Chamberlain, a delightful and homelike place, spending two days there most happily. Instead of remaining I chose to be "boarded" and was granted at once a month's sick leave to be spent with friends who tenderly nursed me back to health in their beautiful homes near Leicester, in Filey, Yorkshire, and in Dorking, among the Surrey hills.

Tribute to the Red Cross.

The hospital and ambulance experience was most valuable, enabling me to study it from the standpoint of a patient. And I could not but feel an enthusiastic admiration for the almost perfect care of the sick and wounded by the British Red Cross and it was a satisfaction to remember that we in Canada had contributed to their support.

I was also brought into admiring contact with our own Canadian Red Cross Society, through which I was sent to Dorking, the society also entertaining me at a high-class hotel in Margate for a week's sea breezes. During this time I passed through an air-raid, a bomb falling near by. Afterwards in London I visited the fine headquarters of Canadian Red Cross in Cockspur street and saw the bags of complete outfit which are presented to every sick or wounded Canadian soldier who as a rule loses his own little personal belongings before reaching England.

Meeting Old Friends.

In London I met Lt.-Col. H. Rogers of the 3rd Dragoons and late O. C. of the 20th Battalion, C.E.F. I also met several Peterborough boys, including Sergt. Hartshorn, George Gray, Aylmer street north, George Butcher, Ashburnham, and Harry Cobb, formerly elevator boy in Cressman's, who from all accounts had done extraordinarily well in consequence of which he was allowed to train for a commission.

On the Medical Board which passed me as fit for duty in France, sat our well-known citizen and my old 57th comrade, Major McPherson, and also Capt. Rogers, who formerly lived near Colborne. After an interview with my Chief, Col. Almond, Director of Chaplain Service, who gave me much encouragement, I started on my return journey, reaching my well known post of duty on July 15th. The warmth of my welcome made me feel as if I had a second home in France, and it is often remarked that this unit is like one big family under its most capable, kindly and hard-working head, Lt.-Col. Reason, of London, Ont., late of Shorncliffe Military Hospital.

Since my return I have few incidents of interest to report. Capt. Basil Sawers, an old Peterborough boy, paid me a visit just before being wounded. He enlisted as a sapper in the C. E., won a commission and the Military Cross and was transferred to the Royal Engineers. In addition to services in this hospital I hold as many for outside units as my strength will allow and the other day I took an interesting one for the staff and crews of hospital train No. 9, 50 in all, who were lined up outside the train and sat on the rails during the short address. They seemed to enjoy their first service for nearly a year.

Across the Channel Again.

Two weeks ago I was summoned to report to our Chief Chaplain in France Lt.-Col. A. H. McGreer, of Montreal, at Canadian Headquarters. Learning that the ambulance was going on to Belgium I quickly determined to avail myself of the opportunity and after a long journey reached No. 3 Canadian Casualty Clearing Station, where we stayed for the night. Numbers of wounded were coming in and I was able to minister to a soldier who died while I was in the operating theatre at midnight.

I found several friends among the staff and among them, to my pleasure, Miss Mowry, nursing sister, so well known in Peterborough, who has had a long and useful career in France.

On the return journey we had an exciting run through the deserted streets of a town which was being shelled and had been hurriedly evacuated by the population.

British Superiority.

By the kindness of officers of adjacent units I was taken to Gommecourt and Hebuterne, lately sceens of terrible fighting during the Somme push. Few traces are left of the villages; long, coarse grass and reeds cover the battlefields, which have been thoroughly cleared. We were able to contrast the superior German position and trenches with those of the British, and could see how effectively the latter was commanded. For a long way the German wire was intact, partially cut in only two places, and in both cases the graves of apparently the whole attacking parties on the spot are silent evidences of the impossibility of their task. There are many well-kept graveyards nearby, with their long lines of crosses. On one lone cross the inscription ran, "To an unknown German cavalryman," and astride the grave were his long, water-logged boots. Seeing an officer crossing the Gommecourt battlefield with the right word on his shoulder straps I called out, "Hello, Canada! Where do you hail from?" He drawled out, "Oh, from a place they call—Toronto."

"Toronto! I've heard of that place," said I. "It's on the way to Hamilton, Ontario. If I were not fortunate enough to belong to Peterborough I wouldn't mind being a citizen of Toronto!"

Waste Cleared Up.

I also was given a ride to Bapaume by a South African transport officer and went through the same desolated district I had visited last March, through the kindness of Colonel Fessenden. There are no mine craters to be seen now at every cross road; the battlefields have been pretty well cleared by the salvage corps, but the ruins of buildings still remain, except the large part used in making the splendid roads. Some battered 'tanks' have been left (with various portions uppermost) into one of which we entered. The crew certainly are confined in close quarters. We also explored a German officers' 'super-fine' dug-out, very deep with two flats, each equipped with telephone and a cunningly devised observation post beside a machine gun. But the tide of war has now rolled beyond this desolated wilderness, though nature is fast repairing its ravages, and it is quite evident that future tourists will have little idea of what a battlefield really was.

Keep Open House.

Our hospital commanding officer, ably supported by our most generous matron and sisters, uses our large buildings and central situation to entertain officers and men of the district or others passing through, and every Thursday evening we keep open house.

Last night some twenty visiting officers sat down with us to mess and remained to a social reception. They included Canadians, "Imperials," a Frenchman and not last a body of Americans with whom we came in contact for the first time though one was a patient some weeks ago.

It was a most lively and interesting evening. These functions are always greatly appreciated, especially the opportunity of social intercourse with our splendid and kind-hearted nursing sisters, and some officers tell us they haven't seen a woman for many months before. The staff of sisters has been gradually increased from fifteen when I came to forty-two. They are a fine advertisement for Canada.

Enthusiastic Congregations.

Among the guests last night were Lieut. Hall, a Toronto man, a teacher for a year in the Grove school, Lakefield, and Capt. Snetsinger, son of the Reeve of Colborne, Ontario. The patient in the next room to me now is Lieut. Alex. Campbell, of Toronto, and now of the Flying Corps, who is progressing favourably and had tea with me yesterday.

Capt. Pugsley, my fellow chaplain, has gone to the line and has been succeeded by Capt. Farrell of Alberta, late assistant missionary secretary of the Methodist church. We work in close fellowship and take all services together. There has been a steady improvement and now our large chapel is crowded with congregations, who take a most enthusiastic part in the services, the musical portion of which is led by a small, accomplished orchestra—cornet, violin and organ.

Artistic Amusements.

A wonderful concert company has been organized, embracing professional and semi-professional artists. They give highly appreciated and humorous entertainments once a week and others outside, which are greatly enjoyed by the patients, staff and members of our unit.

The band of the 20th Hussars is now playing in our court yard. Altogether a good deal of life has been developed, not forgetting the baseball games in the moat, watched by interested crowds from inside and outside. Our patients all tell us, and write home to their friends in high terms of the pleasure received here, and say that there is no hospital to be compared with one from Canada, where many will be found as desirable emigrants after the war.

Faithfully,
J. C. DAVIDSON,

Sept. 14, 1917.

P.S.—I have heard from both Lt. J. R. Stratton and Lt. Martin Dunsford, wounded. Both are doing well and will shortly be all right. Lt. Stratton returns to duty to-morrow.

"VIMY RIDGE HERO" FOOLED THOUSANDS

Ex-Cook Who Never Saw France Lectured on Experiences—Now in Windsor Jail—Took Part in Great Seattle Meeting Along With the Governor of Washington.

Windsor. — "The hero of Vimy Ridge," who rubbed shoulders with a Governor, rivalled the "movies" as an attraction, and bowed to the plaudits of admiring audiences all through the west and down the Pacific coast, sleeps to-day in the Windsor jail, waiting for the word that may mean deportation from Canada as an undesirable. The "hero" is Willard Hambleton, ex-restaurant cook and ex-private in the Canadian forces, whose soldiering lasted for but four months, and whose discharge papers laconically describe his services as "nil." He was picked up by the police on Saturday night very much under the influence of drugs, and in the police court he was remanded for a week.

To the Immigration authorities, who were called in after it was learnt that Hambleton had come across from Detroit on Friday, the drug-afflicted man appeared an ordinary case for deportation. It was not until D. H. Reynolds, travelling Immigration Inspector, had questioned Hambelton and examined his papers, that it was realized that the police had gathered in a bogus hero who had imposed upon thousands of people in Canada and the States, and had sat upon the platform with Governor Lister of Washington, and other notables at a great patriotic meeting at Seattle.

The facts about the man were obtained by Inspector Reynolds. According to the discharge certificate, Hambleton apparently had enlisted with the 257th Battalion in Toronto on January 25, 1916. A closer examination however showed that the certificate had been altered and that the correct enlistment date was January 25, 1917. Hambleton was returned from England to Quebec on May 27 four months after enlistment, and was given his discharge papers to date June 11th. He admitted to Inspector Reynolds that he had never been in France.

The letters and papers found among Hambleton's effects supplied a fairly complete story of a remarkable record of imposture. They told of the ex-soldier's lecture tour through Manitoba and the other western provinces, and down the Pacific Coast to California, then east again through Minnesota and Wisconsin. For these lectures Hambleton advertised himself as "Private Willard Hambleton, the Hero of Vimy Ridge," who would "positively appear in person and lecture on his wonderful experiences during sixteen months of frightful fighting with the gallant Canadians in the trenches of France." The poster was headed: "Americans, Wake Up!" and called upon Americans to come and hear "this brave American." In the States Hambleton apparently passed as an American volunteer with the Canadian forces.

MUCH PUBLICITY GIVEN.

According to newspaper clippings found by Inspector Reynolds the ex-soldier was taken at his own valuation, not only in the small centres where he gave his lecture as an added attraction at moving picture theatres, but in the large cities as well. At Seattle he took part at a great Liberty Loan meeting at which Governor Lister was a fellow speaker. He addressed the Engineers' Club, and was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Rotary Club of Seattle. Hambleton told a thrilling story culled from newspaper reports from the front and decorated by his own fertile imagination. He stirred his audiences with his references to his own horrible experiences when he fought till his legs were shot up by machine guns. His posters also claimed for him a five inch bayonet scar, and the ordeal of being blown up by a mine.

Some of the important newspapers on the coast considered Hambleton so heroic a figure that they gave him columns of "space" in descriptive matter and interviews, sometimes illustrated with two column cuts.

Hambleton made his lecturing pay, making skilful use of the advertising he received. He was clever enough not to appear too anxious to seem a money grabber, and the following request for a "lecture," indicates his method:

"It is absolutely impossible," he said, "for me to speak more than once a week, as my nerves are in such poor condition that after each talk I must rest myself two or three days to keep the mental balance required for the next effort. When I talk I live over again the awful realities of war, and no mere money consideration can repay me for the awful agony which I have lived through. The only way I can secure the rest I need is to place a price on talk and even that only makes lots of people more anxious to hear my story, so I can only say $50 for a club or dinner talk and $100 for a theatre or public address.

"Respectfully,
"W. Hambleton."

Hambleton worked back east on his lecturing tour and reached Detroit on Friday. He crossed over to Windsor with the intention, it is said, of securing drugs, his discharge paper making it easy for him to get into Canada. He went to the armouries, where he hung around until Saturday night, when his condition brought about his arrest on a nominal charge of vagrancy.

The ex-soldier told Inspector Reynolds that he has a brother, James, living at 92 Merrick street, Hamilton. While in Toronto, he lived on Spadina avenue and worked as cook at a restaurant in York street, near Adelaide.

Committee Offers Mr. A. Swartz $47.28

The Fire, Water and Light Committee last night rented the city's hoist, engine and cable for $1.50 a day to Mr. John E. Hayes, contractor, for extensive alterations at the C.G.E. plant.

The committee decided to pay Mr. A. Swartz $47.28 on his claim of $69 damages caused by water streaming into his rooms above his dry goods store and leaking through to the ground floor. While the firemen were engaged in flushing the street, a hose burst, spraying the water through Mr. Swartz's bedroom window. Mr. A. W. Cressman, representing the city, estimated the damage at $47.28.

A request for better lighting of Benson Avenue will be attended to under the proposed alterations to the city's arc lamp system.

Chief Grange's purchases of raiment for himself were approved, and he will also get a new raincoat.

Ald. Dobbin was instructed to have repairs made to the horse stalls at the Fire Hall.

A SCHOOL GIRL'S COMPOSITION ON THE EUROPEAN WAR

"Adventure Never to be Forgotten."

After a peaceful period of forty years, Europe is again shaken by the dreaded horrors of a great war. Never before in the annals of history has there been such a conflict as is now being waged among the great powers of that continent. In the short space of a week five of the six strongest countries were involved in this world-wide struggle of which no man can depict the end.

On June the twenty-eighth, nineteen hundred and fourteen, while Archduke Ferdinand of Austria and his wife were visiting in Serajoo, a town in Bosnia, they were killed by a Servian student. Austria believed that this was a plot formed by the government of Servia. A few days later a series of demands was presented to Servia, which she was required to sign within forty-eight hours or war would be the result.

Acting on the advice of Russia all the clauses were complied with except two, one of these being the murder of all those concerned in the death of the Austrian heir. Austria claimed the right to send representatives into the country to investigate the matter and to this proposal Servia refused. Austria at once declared herself dissatisfied and thus began the greatest war the world has ever known.

But this was only a pretext of war. For many years Austria and Russia have been struggling for control of the Balkan seaports. But Austria's routes to the Aegian Sea was barred by the small country of Servia, and for this reason Russia is Servia's steadfast ally.

The destruction of Servia would mean the prosperous route to Salonika and Constantinople. This could not be countenanced by Russia and her troops were at once mobilized in favour of Servia. Allied with Austria stands Germany and Italy, forming the "Triple Alliance." The Triple Entente, opposing this comprises the three countries, Russia, France and Britain.

France, eager to regain the territory of Alsace-Lorraine, which she had lost during the Franco-Russian war of 1870, was ready at any cost to endure and injure Germany's power. England, too, sought to check the plans of this country, the only one strong enough to prove a menace to her for adding battleship after battleship to her fleet until she now has naval forces almost equal in strength to those of Britain But the time must come when England must lose or strengthen her existence as an Empire of the world.

Germany's chief aim was to have Britain drawn into war, then to direct her strongest forces against her. This she said when Belgium was invaded and the whole land devastated by the uncivilized troops of Germany. This peaceful little country of the Belgians was destroyed, simply because she barred the shortest route to France Could England stand by and see this done, the neutrality of a friendly country crushed and her territory made use of as affording the most convenient route to France. No! Rather than lose their patriotic name, and for the sake of national honour, Britain's sons have already shown that they will stand by their country, even to the last. Canada, Australia, South Africa, India and all the colonies of the Empire have shown their willingness to help by their large contributions of money, materials and, what is better than all, is the lives of their best manhood.

Germany seeks power, but England and her allies seek honour, and by the example of Britain, Europe will be saved.

The Hardware And Metal Markets

Interesting developments in hardware markets during the week comprise advances in certain gauges of steel sheets and lower prices in some sections of the Dominion on other gauges of steel sheets. An embargo placed on black sheets, No. 10 gauge and heavier, from the United States to the domestic trade in Canada, has had the effect of sending prices higher in Canada. The determination of the United States Government to expedite shipbuilding has occasioned the conservation of plates of various kinds. In other lines of steel and iron there has been no disposition to change prices until more definite information is obtained as to the specific content of the recent regulating order in the United States. There have been a certain number of price changes during the week in such lines as cistern pumps, hay fork pulleys, padlocks, handsaws, ripsaws, coping saws, wood split pulleys, all in an upward direction. Linseed oil was in weaker market, but turpentine was in firmer tone. Asbestos sheeting is one of the lines that has registered a considerable advance. Importers of Canada plate have been gratified over the receipt of stocks that have been on order for several months past. Quotations on this commodity are again being made in the Toronto market. Business has been fairly good during the week, with a good demand reported for winter line.—"Hardware and Metal."

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—On reading a letter signed Alice Collins in your paper, I would like to express my opinion on some of her remarks. No doubt the lady has a right to refuse to sign the Food Controller's card. Everybody has a right to their opinion. But I don't think her reason a good one. The lady in question seems to think the British Government is not doing its duty to our boys overseas. It's too bad the lady in question could not be in England a little while and just experience what the women and children have to go short of. I quite agree the brave boys ought to have plenty of food to keep them fit. But if they only go short of a little sugar, but have plenty of everything else, the boys will not kick. For everyone knows that every householder is only allowed a few pounds of sugar a week, and only get that by spending six shillings in other goods, which must be a great hardship to mothers with large families. Then again she says, "Let no mother sign the card till the Canadian and British Governments have done all in their power not only to economize, but to make life in Britain easier for our boys to remain pure and good as many of them were when they left us." Now to my mind the lady cannot have been in England and does not know what she is talking about. No Government can make a boy live a pure life, if he is inclined to be otherwise; also he did not need to go to England to be tempted. I think her remark an insult to our English girls, and would like to inform her, an English girl is just as respectable and has just as high morals as any Canadian girl. And I can assure the lady, if the boys she may be thinking about kept themselves pure in Canada, they can do so in England. Also I think the soldiers should not have such insults thrown at them all the time. It is not always the soldiers that forget themselves.

A Disgusted Englishwoman.

Why does that colelague of yours always choose the wrong side of a proposition? I think he does so deliberately, replied Senator Sorghum. He is determined not to leave public office poorer than when he entered it. The wrong side of a proposition is usually the one in which the graft is likely to turn up.—Washington Star.

Weak Boys and Girls

It is a mistake to think that anaemia is only a girl's complaint. Girls probably show the effect of weak, watery blood more plainly than boys. Delayed development, pale faces, headaches, palpitation, and a feeling of listlessness, call attention to weak blood in the case of girls. But many boys in their teens grow thin and "weedy" and have pimples on the face, showing that they have not enough blood. The anaemic boy is just as likely to become a victim of consumption as the pale, breathless girl with her headaches and worn-out look. Let the boy in this condition catch cold and he will lose his strength and his health becomes precarious.

To prevent serious disaster to those of the rising generation, let both boys and girls be given the new rich blood which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are famous the world over for making. When giving these pills watch how soon the appetite returns and how the languid girl or the weak boy becomes full of activity and high spirits. Remember that the boy has to develop, too, if he is to make a strong hearty man. Give both the boys and girls a fair chance to develop strongly through the new, rich blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make. You will then see active boys and girls, instead of weakly children around you.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be obtained by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

Matt. 4th chap.—The temptation of Christ in the wilderness by Satan. The devil set Christ upon a pinnacle of the temple, which was so very high that it would make a man's head giddy to look down to the bottom. High places are places of temptation; they are slippery places, advancement in the world makes a man a fair mark for Satan to shoot his fiery darts at. Those who would take heed of falling must take heed of climbing. High places in the church are in a special manner dangerous. Those who excel in gifts, who are in eminent stations, and have gained great reputations, have need to be always humble, for Satan will aim to puff them up with pride, that they may fall into condemnation. If thou be the Son of God new shops thyself to the world and prove thyself to be so; cast thyself down, and then thou wilt be admired, as under the special protection of Heaven. Observe, the devil said, cast thyself down. The power of Satan is a limited power, yet if the devil had cast him down, that had been his suffering only, not his sin. The devil can only persuade, he cannot compel, he can but say, cast theyself down, he cannot cast us down. Every man is tempted when he is drawn aside of his own free lust, and not forced, but enticed. He urged this motion with a quotation from Scripture. It would seem that he is well versed in Scripture. It is possible that a man may have his head full of Scripture and yet have enmity in his heart against God. In this quotation there was something right. It is true there is such a promise of the ministration of the angels, for the protection of the saints. The devil knows it by experience, for he finds his attempts against them fruitless. He was also right in applying it to Christ, for to him all the promises of the protection of the saints, primarily and eminently, belong, and to them in and through him. Whether this was understood as a promise to believers, or as a prophecy relating to Christ, Satan suggested that it equally insured his safety. But there was a great deal wrong in what he did. He misquoted it. The promise is. They shall keep thee; but in all thy ways—not otherwise. If we go out of our way, out of the way of our duty, we forfeit the promise, and put ourselves out of God's protection. Now this word made against the tempter, and therefore he left it out. If If Christ had cast himself down he had been out of his way, for he had no call to expose himself by omitting such a concluding sentence, Christians are often seduced out of their way. It is good for us often to consult the Scriptures and not take things upon trust, that we may not be imposed upon by those who misquote the word of God. Satan misapplied it and that was worse. Scripture is abused when it is pressed to patronize sin, and when men thus wrest it, they do it to their own destruction. 2nd Peter, 3:16. This promise is firm and stands good. But shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound; throw ourselves down, that the angels may bear us up. God forbid. We must not put the power, truth, and love of God to unnecessary trials. Christ overcame this temptation, as the former, with. It is written. The devil's misuse of Scripture did not prevent Christ from using it. He presently, Deut. 6:16. "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. If Christ cast himself down it would be tempting God. It would be requiring a further confirmtaion of that which was well confirmed already. It would be requiring a special preservation in doing that which has had no call to do. If we expect, that because God has promised not to forsake us, therefore he should follow us out of the way of our duty, that because he has promised to keep us, we may wilfully thrust ourselves, and may expect the desired end without using the appointed means—this is presumption, this is tempting God. We must not promise ourselves more than God has promised us. 3rd—Satan tempted Christ to idolatry with the proffer of the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them. Hence, let us observe concerning Satan's temptations, that they often come in at the eye, which is blind to the things that it should see, and dazzled with the vanities it should be turned from. Temptations commonly take their rise from the world, and the things of it. The glory of the world is the most charming temptation to the unthinking and unwary; by that men are most easily imposed upon. How vain his promise was: All these things will I give thee. Satan seems to take it for granted that in the former temptation he had proved that Christ was not the Son of God, because he had not given him those evidence of it which he demanded. Satan makes an easy prey of men when he can persuade them to think themselves abandoned of God. How vile the condition was: If thou will fall down and worship me. Fain would be draw Christ into his interests, and persuade him to teach the Gentile idolatry, and to introduce it again among the Jews, and then the nations of the earth would soon flock in to him. The best of Saints may be tempted to the worst of sins. It is their affliction, but while there is no consent to it, nor approbation of it, it is not their son; Christ was tempted to worship Satan. He rejected the proposal with abhorrance and detestation. Get thee hence; Satan; Some temptations are openly wicked; they are not to be disputed with, but rejected. It is a just indignation which rises at the proposal of anything that reflects on God. It is good to be peremptory in resisting temptation. Christ's argument is from Deut. vi., 13; 10-20: Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve. It is good to make our answers to temptation as full and yet as brief as may be. The law of religious worship is of eternal obligation. That God only is to be worshipped when Satan had done his worst, had tempted Christ with all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, and found that he could not prevail with that temptation with which he had overthrown so many thousands of the children of men, then he leaves them; then he begins to conclude that he is the Son of God, and that it is in vain to tempt him any further. If we resist the Devil he will flee from us; he will yield, if we keep our ground. The Captain of our Salvation gained the victory over him, so will we, if we trust in him. The holy angels came and ministered. Christ vanquished Satan in his own strength. As there is a world of wicked spirits to fight against Christ and his saints, so there are legions of holy angels sent forth as ministering spirits to those who are heirs of salvation. Christ having been made thus remarkable by the voice of the Father, the descent of the spirit, his victory over devils, and his dominion over angels, was qualified to appear in the visible world as the mediator between God and man.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

Members of diplomatic corps and their families and a large crowd were present when the vote, which stood one hundred and five to six, was taken.

U. S. Destroyers Have Sunk Many Of U-Boats

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—American destroyers have sunk a considerable number of German U-boats. The first of a series of descriptions portraying the battles between these destroyers and enemy submarines was made public by the committee on public information to-day.

LABOUR WILL BE REPRESENTED

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 6.—The German Government has announced its plan for reform of the Prussian House of Lords, according to despatches from Berlin to-day. The plan includes forty-eight labour representatives.

The inclusion of labour representatives in the Prussian House of Lords is an innovation.

It's a safe bet that a girl doesn't enjoy the first kiss she gets from a certain young man unless the pretends she doesn't.

Postmen Cannot Strike, But Demand More Money

A very unpleasant state of affairs may develop in Ottawa shortly if the demands of the letter carriers for wage increases are not met by the Government. Threats of resignation are already being made. The letter carriers are not satisfied with the approaching provisional allowance of $100 granted by the Government and have made up their minds to "kick" for more.

"A living wage is what we want and a living wage is what we are determined to get," stated J. E. Fauteux, president, of the Letter Carriers' Association. Mr. Fauteux complained that it was almost impossible for a married man with a family to live on the wages paid some of the men.

Can't Go on Strike.

One official of the association pointed out that the letter carriers could not go out on strike. Being servants of the King, they were all sworn never to join in a strike. "But we can all hand in our resignations," remarked President Fauteux, "and then perhaps the Government might consider our just demands. At all events we are going to fight this thing to the last ditch. We cannot live on our present wages."

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfils that purpose as nothing else can.

ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF CONCEALING CHILD BIRTH.

Roy Lockhardt Acquitted—Minnie Nellins Gets Suspended Sentence.

On Wednesday in the County Judges' Criminal Court at Cobourg, Roy Lockhardt, of the Township of Clarke, was tried by Judge Roger on the charge of disposing of the dead body of a child, in attempting to conceal the birth of the child of Minnie Nellins. The principal Crown witness was the Nellins girl, who had been found guilty of attempting to conceal the birth of the child, and failing to give it the necessary medical attention at birth. She told a rather harrowing tale. She gave birth to the child at night in an outbuilding, and after the birth, had called Lockhardt out of the house. She told him of the occurrence, and he afterward told her he had taken the body to the buckwheat field and would bury it in the morning. The girl's evidence lacked corroboration, and she got mixed up in her evidence at times, and Judge Ward acquitted him on the charge. A. J. Armstrong appeared for the defence, and W. F. Kerr, Crown Attorney, prosecuted. The Nellins girl appeared for sentence on the birth concealing charge, and was let go on suspended sentence, she having been in gaol since August 28th.

ONE CONSOLATION.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

It is too bad that after so many centuries of civilization in Europe one can can start such a war as that which now rages, but there is a certain amount of consolation in the knowledge that he cannot finish it.

YES.

(Brockville Times.)

During Thursday at Ogdensburg the local jail was filled with "plain drunks." "Fair Week—it was to be expected" is the explanation. Brockville had just as big a Fair as Ogdensburg, the only one inebriate to remind the police that intoxicating liquor is still manufactured, sold and drunk. It doesn't require much more to answer the question: Does prohibition prohibit?

SPECIAL EXHIBITS AT MILLBROOK FAIR

Oak Hall, Peterborough, Clothing Display

Nothing daunted by the inclemency of the weather, the live representatives of Oak Hall Clothing Store, Peterborough, had all competitors eliminated at the Millbrook Fair. They put up another smart display in their palace marquee, and made another demonstration of their favourite styles for fall and winter, which should firmly entrench them in the minds of thousands of visitors from this district, where they have so long been well known. Their showy bulletins were conspicuously displayed all over the Fair grounds, announcing that "Good Clothes are the Only Kind We Sell," etc. As well as showing the new fall models in men's and boys' suits and overcoats, sweaters, caps, etc., an interesting feature of this exhibit was the practical demonstrator, showing how the different patterns of cloths looked when made up and tailored, ready for wear, according to the new fashion plates.

In conversation with Mr. Maher, the manager of the Oak Hall Store, it was learned that the patrons of this store have some extraordinary savings coming to them, by good business foresight. A large proportion of the present stock in their George street store, was bought at last year's prices, much below the ruling prices to-day.

Mr. Maher explained some of the advantages secured by which the high cost of living may be reduced, in this way:

"Briefly the situation is this. Materials have and are yet advancing in price. The advance is more noticeable in the cheaper grades, as the great wastage of materials due to the great war is being destroyed in the trenches and the worn out garments are not finding their way to the rag man and then to the shoddy mills, which was the great supply for low priced goods. We were never much interested in this class, as the W. E. Sanford Co. who own the Oak Hall Stores, make and handle only the better class goods. Our immense purchasing department never sleeps, they can't afford to sleep, having a chain of Oak Hall Stores, and some 22 travelling salesmen from coast to coast to purchase for. We could quite easily mark a lot of our goods higher, as in many cases we could not replace them, but that's not our policy. We bought them for you and they are to be yours, as well as all the benefits which accrued to us, by our foresight we pass on to our customers."

THE SHOWING OF FORD MOTOR CARS.

As usual, the exhibit of Ford motor cars was one of the attractions on the Fair grounds. A practical display was made by representatives of the Millbrook and Peterborough garages, and competent demonstrators were present to give desirable information. In addition to several Ford models there was shown one of the new Bell cars, which looks like a coming favourite, and a Smith Form-a-Truck. These attracted general attention, and some good prospects were secured. By actual count the number of Ford motor cars on the Fair grounds was 96, and 63 of all other makes. This shows the continued popularity of the Ford car—the only car which has not raised its price. That the Ford has a practical value, the proportional increase in the number at the Fair was a fairly good criterion.

TINNEY BROS.' HOME-MADE BUGGIES.

Much attention was directed to the attractive display of home-made buggies, manufactured by Messrs. Tinney Bros., of Cavanville. This old-established firm has made themselves a favourable reputation, not only for the splendid business methods by which they are known in this district, but by the reliable character of their buggies and carriages and the good wearing qualities they possess. This firm's business has kept pace with the growing demand which they have created.

Tinney Bros. are also agents for the Chevrolet motor car, which is becoming so great a favourite with farmers and others—one of which was shown in their exhibit at Millbrook.

Mr. Tucker had unexpectedly come face to face with Mr. 'Cutting, from whom he had frequently borrowed money, says the New York American. "Er—aw—what was the denomination of the bill you loaned me?" he asked, nervously. "Episcopalian, I guess," said Mr. Cutting. At any rate, it keeps Lent very well."

EMPIRE MONDAY'S PROGRAM

THE BONDAGE OF FEAR

Ethel Clayton Supported by Rockliffe Fellowes.

THE STORY —When a woman fights to retain the love of her husband and to retain her happiness, she fights hard. Young Vesta Randolph in this thrilling feature, is forced to fight as woman never fought before. Enmeshed in a web of circumstances which she dare not explain—though wholly innocent of any wrong intent or thought—she takes things into her own hands and finds a way out. The characters are clear-cut and human, the action is constant and intense and leads upward in ascending power until the startling and wholly unexpected climax is reached. This is a supreme offering. WEDDING BELLS

STEVENS—WILLIAMS.

At high noon on Oct. 6th, Rev. Mr. R. A. Whattam performed the marriage ceremony between Dorothy Mae, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, Burnham street, to Mr. George Alton Stevens, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Stevens, 364 Mark street. The young couple took the 1.30 train for points east and on their return will reside at 390 Mark street.

PARK—ALLAN.

To witness the wedding of one of the foremost musicians in the city, besides a young lady of great popularity socially, to a soldier injured and returned from duties overseas, the largest number ever assembled in St. Paul's' Church on such an occasion, attended this afternoon at 3 o'clock, when Dorothy Isobel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Allan, 207 Brock Street, was united in marriage to Captain Maurice Henry Park, instructor in aerial gunnery, R.F.C., and son of Dr. and Mrs. Park, of this city.

The bride, who was unattended, entered the church under the escort of her father, as the Lohengrin Wedding March was played by Mr. M. Stevenson, of the Toronto Conservatory of Music. She looked very beautiful in her tailored travelling suit of purple broadcloth and grey hat. During the ceremony Mr. Douglas Carlisle sang "Until."

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's. Lieut. Jack McNab and Pte. Robert Park, brother of the groom, acted as ushers.

Immediately after the ceremony Captain and Mrs. Park left by the 4 o'clock C.P.R. train for the west, where they will spend a short honeymoon, returning next week for a short time before leaving for Texas, where Captain Park has been stationed with the Royal Flying Corps.

Included in the vast array of beautiful giffts, fitting tokens of the young couple's popularity, received by Captain and Mrs. Park were an unusually handsome cabinet of sterling silver, presented by the congregation of St. Paul's, a chest of pearl and silver knives and forks and fish set from the choir, and an exquisitely bound illuminated address, the work of Mr. T. O. Quartermaine, from the Session and Managers of St. Paul's.

SEEK TO WIND UP CATTLE SUPPLY CO.

A motion to wind up the affairs of the British Cattle Supply Company was brought before Mr. Justice Masten yesterday on behalf of the World Newspaper Company, but as there is still another petition to wind up the company and returnable Tuesday, the application was held over to that date.

TOBACCO WILL NET ESSEX AND KENT HALF A MILLION

LEAMINGTON, Oct. 6.—The growers of Burley elaf tobacco throughout Essex and Kent were suddenly awakened from their slumbers on Tuesday morning by half a hundred buyers, who raked both countries with a fine-toothed comb in search of choice crops, offering the unheard-of-price of 18 1-2 cents per pound, barn run. Buyers for Wm. T. Gregory, manager of the Empire Tobacco Company, were first in the field, establishing the record-breaking price and securing the lion's share of the crop.

Good fields are netting the growers $300 per acre, and the crop will add a million dollars to the wealth of the tobacco section. Growers are generally jubilant over the prices being paid, although a few are holding out for an advance. The Rock City Tobacco Company is also on the market strong, and George Goldstein, of the Dominion Tobacco Company, has just arrived on the scene, and is now in consultation with his manager, Lewis Wigle, regarding the situation.

Manufacturers say there is no money in the business at prevailing prices, and the farmers say scarcity of labour and high prices of fertilizers, etc., make tobacco growing a costly operation. But all admit that they will not lose any money this year. What they fear is that prices may go lower some other year, thus reminding one of the old lady who said she always felt bad when she felt good, because she knew she would feel worse afterwards.

However, there is joy throughout the tobacco belt, and by Christmas-time tobacco money will be right up in the first-line trenches making prisoners of war of sealskin sacks, diamond necklaces, twin six automobiles and other luxuries, for the purchase of which no other money will be so readily parted with as tobacco money.

'FLAGWAGGER' NOW 'BUZZER'

Picturesque Signaling of Yore Gives Way to Safer Methods.

Behind British Lines in France, Oct. 1.—The nickname "Flagwaggers," by which men of the Signal Corps are all known to civilians, has long since been discarded in the army, which has substituted the title of "Buzzers".

In the picturesque days of yore the signaler chose some lofty eminence and there wiggled out his message with a flag or whirled his aching arms through the graceful movements of semaphore, but those days are no more. The close proximity of the German and the accuracy of the snipers have made opportunities for these methods as rare as week-end leave, and the signaller now has his dwelling underground and works in the dark after the fashion of the mole.

The signaler also has his "beat," like a metropolitan policeman. He must make periodical tours of inspection of the complex net of wires under his jurisdiction, watching to see that nothing goes wrong with his slender lines of communication. In the trenches the wires run along the sides of the trench about twelve inches from the bottom, just above high water mark, at which height they are comparatively safe from being dragged out of place by the diverse equipment that hangs round the infantry soldier like toys on a Christmas tree.

The number of wires that grow up in an ordinary trench in the course of a few weeks is amazing. "There are only nine here at present, remarked a Signal Corps officer apologetically, "but this is a new trench; wait till the gunners open up a few observation posts—the place will look like a hen-run then."

The nine wires led after various detours to the "Battalion Headquarter Signal Office." This proved to be a roomy dug-out with wires entering it over the doorway. The whole place is alive and businesslike. Here a clerk is receiving messages for transmission; there another is dispatching incoming messages to their addresses by runner; in one corner a private is entering up the signal register, in another a second is making notes in the office "log".

Along the far end runs a rough table with a row of men seated on a bench before it, while a droning sound like the humming of bees fills the air around. This is where the field telephone has its quarters—that famous little instrument on which, according to popular humorists, the gilded calf call up in the middle of a bombardment to inquire how many jars of raspberry jam have been issued to a unit, or to demand a count of the Baptists in "A" Company, us as the third wave is going over the top.

A negro was recently brought into police court in a little town in Georgia, charged with assault and battery. The negro, who was well known to the judge, was charged with having struck another "unbleached American" with a blick. After the usual preliminaries the judge inquired:

"Why did you hit this man?

"Jedge, he called me a damn black rascal."

"Well, you are one, aren't you?"

"Yessah, I is one. But, Jedge, s'pose somebody'd call you a damn black rascal, wouldn't you bit em?"

"But I'm not one, am I?"

"Naw, sah, naw, sah, you ain't one; but s'pose somebody'd call you de kind o' rascal you is, what'd you do?"

Decrease Of Canada's Beef Supply Is A Very Serious Matter

The food problem of Canada lends special interest to the commercial preparation of our foods.

The average consumer sees the final product in the butcher's shop or in the grocery and he evinces no curiosity as to how it got there, or through what stages it passes before it reaches his hands.

A few facts about the beef trade will show some of the problems and complexities of marketing cattle.

The larger cities of Canada, with stock yards, markets, abattoirs, and shops are distributing centres for many small towns. In these markets cattle are graded as 'exporters,' 'butchers,' 'stockers,' 'feeders,' and 'canners.' The names are practically self explanatory, though it may be noted that the third and fourth classes comprise cattle that must be fed for longer or shorter periods before being slaughtered.

Because the cost of shipping a heavy animal overseas is the same as that of shipping a light one—a flat rate per head being charged—export animals are usually larger and heavier than the other classes. Most of the heavy 'exporters' go to London, Glasgow, and Liverpool, the lighter being sent to Manchester. They range in weight from 1,200 to 1,500 pounds, and after killing and dressing the carcasses weigh not less than 55 per cent. of the live weight, often considerably more.

More animals of the "butcher" class are sold and killed than of the "exporters." These cattle range from 1,200 pounds downward and are graded into three sub-classes according to weight, condition and breed. Two-year old and older cattle, if out of condition, and calves and yearlings, are classed as 'feeders' and 'stockers' respectively, and are sent back to the country to accumulate flesh. 'Stockers' may weigh as little as 500 pounds, and require a long period of feeding. 'Feeders' should exceed 900 pounds and require but a short time to bring up to weight.

It is becoming more and more customary for the cattle raiser to employ city commission firms to sell his stock, although when the market is strong, the country is closely covered by domestic buyers' agents. Exporting firms, however, do practically all their buying in city stock yards.

Roughly, 484,000,000 pounds of beef is the quantity necessary to feed Canada for one year. Canada's total exports of beef, not including live stock, amounted to 57,253,368 pounds in the fiscal year 1917, much of the commodity exported to the United States being consigned to fill war contracts. Of these exports, 15,236,039 pounds went direct to Great Britain, and 30,028,244 pounds to France, small quantities being consigned to Newfoundland and other countries. It is to be noted that of of the total exports a considerable quantity—11,707,192 pounds—was not the produce of Canada, but was imported from the United States.

Meanwhile, however the United States shipped about ten times as much beef and succeeded, as Canada did not, in substantially increasing the number of cattle on her farms. At the close of the year 1916, the total farm live stock (horses, cattle, sheep and swine) in Canada was less by 525,390 head than during the preceding year, the totals of 1915 and 1916 being, respectively, 14,212,662, and 13,678,272 head.

The diminution in detail was as follows:

	1915	1916	Dec.
Milch cows	2,666,846	2,603,645	63,501
Beef cattle	3,399,155	3,313,519	85,636

These figures amount to a demonstration that not only is Canada losing the normal yearly increment of her herds but is multiplying that loss and retarding the period of recovery by drawing heavily upon her capital of live stock. Britain and the European allies are necessarily doing the same. The moral for Canada is that we must eat sparingly of beef in view of the demand of the armies and the diminishing supply.

A 150 POUND MAN IS EQUAL TO 1,000 EGGS

A man weighing 150 lbs. approximately contains 3,500 cub. ft. of gas, oxygen, hydrogen and nitrogen in his constitution, which at 80c. per thousand cubic feet, would be worth $2.80 for illuminating purposes. He also contains all the necessary fats to make a 15-lb. candle and thus, with his 3,500 cub. ft. of gases, he possesses great illuminating possibilities. His system contains 22 lbs. 10 ozs. of carbon, or, enough to make 780 dozen or 9,360 lead pencils. There are about 50 grains of iron in his blood and the rest of the body would supply enough to make one spike large enough to hold his weight. A healthy man contains 54 ozs. of phosphorus. This deadly poison would make 800,000 matches, or enough poison to kill 500 persons. This, with 2 lbs. of lime, makes the stiff bones and brains. No difference how sour a man looks, he contains about 60 lumps of sugar of the ordinary cubical dimensions, and to make the seasoning complete, must be added 20 spoonfuls of salt. If a man were distilled into water, he would make about 38 quarts, or more than half his entire weight. He also contains a great deal of starch, chloride of potash, magnesium, sulphur, and hydrochloric acid in his system.

Break the shells of 1,000 eggs into a huge pan or basin and you have the contents to make a man from his toenails to the most delicate tissues of his brain. And this is the scientific answer to the question "What is man?"

SWALLOWED ROCKET.

Ship's Captain Feared Man Overboard When He Heard Racket.

Gliding down the Hudson River, the steamer C. W. Morse was on her way from Albany to New York. In the stillness of the night cries were heard by the captain. He feared one of his passengers had fallen overboard. Three blasts of the Morse's big whistle were sounded. The engines were reversed and two lifeboats were lowered. But no passenger was found struggling in the swirling waters.

Back to the ship came the would-be life savers. Then it was found the commotion had been caused by Sinbad, a circus giraffe. He had swallowed a Coston signal rocket. His keeper begged the captain to send ashore for a doctor. His $15,000 giraffe, he explained, would die unless the signal was extracted.

The signal was taken from the ten-foot neck. But half a dozen men called to the doctor's aid had to do some fine acrobatic feats to escape the animal's hoofs.

Romantic Story of Dutch Dancer And Adventuress Facing Death As a Spy

Musician Now in New York Who Knew Mlle. Mata Hari in Paris Tells of Trail of Ruin Left From Time She Fled From Buddhist Temple

A rejected sweetheart to whom she had brought disgrace and ruin was responsible for the arrest and conviction of Mlle. Mata Hari, the woman who has just been found guilty of being a German spy and sentenced to death by a French Court Martial, according to a prominent musician and composer who now is in New York city, and who knows Mlle. Mata Hari. He declared that "if the cunning of one of the most magnetic and charming adventuresses in the world is of avail the Dutch dancer who now is in a French mifitary prison awaiting death will escape the firing squad."

This musician, who, for obvious reasons, would not permit his name to be used in an article concerning Mlle. Mata Hari, said that four years ago he was asked by her to write the music for dances which she was to give at Monte Carlo. Owing to an affair between her and a high official of the German government the musician called only once at her house at Nieully-sur-Seine, just outside Paris.

"This German was extremely jealous of her, and I feared that if he saw her dancing her Oriental dances for me alone there would at least have been a scandal and probably a duel," he said.

Always Captivated Men.

This man said for years Mlle. Mata Hari has captivated men in high places. He repeated chapters of her adventurous life from the time she was an infant in Java, the daughter of a wealthy Dutch planter, through the Dutch East Indies and into India, whither her mother fled with her; how she became a religious dancer in a Buddist temple in Burma and how, ultimately, she tired of the celibacy vows of the Buddhist, and ran away with an English baronet. He told of the tragic death of her son, born of this union, and how she took the law into her own hands and avenged him; of her flight from her husband and India, and his disgrace and death, and how she at last reached Paris, reduced from a state of Oriental wealth and luxury to one of penury.

"Then she set about to captivate Paris," he said. "She did it, and, not satisfied with her conquest, she went to Berlin, to Petrograd, to Vienna—she travelled over all Europe—and became one of the most talked of women on the Continent."

Not Beautiful but Magnetic.

"Her name is Marguerite Zelle Mata Hari," he said. "She is not less than thirty-eight years old, or more than forty-two. No one knows her age. She is not beautiful, but she is most magnetic, wonderfully handsome. Her teeth are pearls. Her black hair reaches to the ground. She is about six feet tall and sculptors have said, is probably the most perfectly formed woman of her height in the world. Her eyes are big, luminous and as black as night. Her skin is of that soft light olive colour. She carries herself as a queen of olden times and her toilette is most notable for its elegance and taste.

"Her faher was a subject of the Netherlands and her mother was a apanese. He died when she was an infant, and in order to protect her from the dangers which beset a young girl of mixed blood in the East her mother fled from Java with her when she was three years old and entered Burma. There, to further protect her, she pledged her to celibacy and placed her in a Buddhist temple to learn dancing. Then it appeared that her destiny would be not unlike that of thousands of other young girls in that country and similar in many respects to that of the old vestals of ancient Greece. In Burma these dancers are called bayadere.

Fell in Love with Englishman.

She told me that when she was twelve years old she was disgusted with life and was determined to change it or en dit. After a dance at a great Buddhist festival in Burma, she was about fourteen years old, she saw a British officer and fell in love with him. It was her first love affair. She managed to escape from the temple and joined him. This man was a baronet and loved change it or end it. After a dance her. Finally they married. Two children, a boy and a girl, were born of their union.

"I do not believe that she ever loved any man. It is certain that she did not love her husband. At any event, the monotonous life of a British official's wife was more than she could stand. The climax came when a maid whom she had beaten and discharged caused one of her gardeners to poison her infant son.

"The tragic sequence and scandal which followed the death of her son still is remembered by old timers in India. She started an investigation of the killing independent of the British authorities, and finally, in her own mind, fixed the guilt on one of her gardeners. She took a revolver, and, walking into the garden where the man was working, shot him dead.

"She was arrested, but owing to the high position occupied by her husband everything possible was done to suppress the news and to hush the scandal. Finally she was told that she would have to leave British India. It was just what she wanted to do. She left her home in the night, stealing her daughter from her husband. She made her way to Marseilles and thence to Holland, where she placed her daughter in a convent. Then she went straight to Paris, where she learned that she was penniless, the small fortune which her father had left her having, under the Dutch law, passed to her child.

"Paris captivated her. She quickly became a part of the great night life of that city. She met many men. One of them was a wealthy German, who was a high official of the Berlin government. He bought a home for her at Nieuly-sur-Seine and furnished it in a style that was representative of what was most truly Oriental splendor. There the two of them lived. It was there that I first saw her.

"Soon she tired of this German. He was extreemly jealous of her. Always her art—her dancing—called to her. He would not let her dance. There were many 'scenes' at home. Her life was not happy, despite the wealth at her disposal.

Caused Banker's Ruin.

Then she met a one-time Minister of Finance, of France, and through him, his brother-in-law. He fell in love with her and she with him.

"This man was at that time the managing director of a great Paris bank. He deserted his wife and bought a magnificent chateau in Touraine. For two years they lived there. Then, one day, the police entered the bank and arrested its managing director. He was charged with embezzling the funds of the institution. He was tried and convicted and sentenced to two years at hard labour.

"The woman then went back to the German official at Neuilly-sur-Seine. They were living there when I left France four years ago.

"When I saw in the Herald the article that Mlle. Mata Hari had been sentenced to death as a German spy, the inside history of her adventurous life at once unfolded before me. I believe that when the whole truth is known it will be found that the ruined banker was the man who denounced her. During their life together he assuredly learned many things concerning her connections with the German and with the German government. He learned that while he was in prison and subsequent to the beginning of the war she had been living in great wealth in Paris and travelling throughout all Europe. She was a woman eminently qualified to act as a secret agent for Germany. As a Dutch subject she was at liberty to travel anywhere, and it is quite certain that she had the facilities of obtaining information which would have been impossible for Germany to obtain elsewhere.

Doubts if She Will be Put to Death.

"It was a life which would appeal to her—that of a spy. Her greatest delight was in exercising her influence to control persons with whom she came in contact, and her influence was miraculous. Her constant companion was a German woman, her maid, whom she always called Anna. I am interested to know what part Anna has played in the tragedy."

Discussing the probable fate of Mlle. Mata Hari, he declared that he was of the opinion that she will not be put to death.

The sinister character in Dumas' great romance was not more cunning or adventurous nor played for higher stakes than did Mlle. Mata Hari," he said. "In many respects their histories should be printed in parallel columns. But I believe that for adventure, for cunning, for her great influence over the destiny of those with whom she came in contact, Mlle. Mata Hari was more dreadful than 'Miladi.'

"Not until I know that she is buried; that she has failed to corrupt her jailors and even the men detailed for duty in the firing squad will I believe that she has played her last card.

"She was a woman who would have succeeded in anything in life that she might have undertaken. She was brilliant, she was everything that men admire. Despite all that I know of her and of the misery that she has caused, somewhere down in my heart I feel a great sympathy for her. I, for one, would not send her to her death."

"If we quarrel like this now, what will we do after marriage?" asked the young man, quoted in the Brooklyn Citizen. "Well," replied the girl, "if you think I'm going to rush blindly into marriage without finding out who's boss, you're mistaken."

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"But yesterday, you—you bade me come," he stammered, realizing that some unusual, some paralyzing emotion held her in its grasp.

It was quite an appreciable time before she spoke. It seemed so cruel to send him away with no word of explanation, so more than cruel, to tell him the truth. How could she say what must be said, if this life and perhaps her own as well were to be spared? She had little time for thought, and it availed her little. Stupefied by the danger in which they stood, she stared at him, her eyes seeing nothing, her thoughts upon Ormiston, within her silent house. No expedient, no plan of action came to her whirling brain, only the pitiful thought she had told him to come, and that she must defend herself against the charge his words implied.

"Madre de Dios!" she gasped. "I was first to send you word.'

"My ship sails at dawn," he explained, very slowly, his voice weak with pain, 'for The Havana. I could not go, without seeing you. Wherein lies the harm?" He took a step toward her, eager, flushed, forgetting even his wound, at sight of her face.

She on her part had not yet perceived that he was wounded. Her terror had been too great for that. She could think of no plan, no excuses. There was nothing to do, but send him away, with no knowledge of the reason. She pointed to the gate.

"Go—at once!" she commanded.

The Puritan gazed at her, astonished beyond measure. All the hours of the day he had waited for this moment. Now that it had come, it brought a strange madness, dismissal peremptory, unreasonable, without appeal.

"Very well, and you wish it," he said slowly. "I am sorry if I have distressed you. When we parted yesterday, in the town, I had thought to find a kinder welcome." Their parting had in truth been lover-like, although no word of love had passed between them. He drew himself up, despite his wound, and took a hesitating step toward the gateway. Then, to assuage the pain caused by the movement, he pressed his hand still more firmly against his side. Under the pressure a flood of crimson welled out over his fingers and dripped to the white floor of the garden.

Ramona, seeing the red stain about his hand, came toward him with a smothered cry, her fears for the moment replaced by a livelier emotion. For the first time she realized that he was hurt, and stood beside him, starting with wide eyes at this evidence of his courage.

"Jesu!" she whispered, very low. "What has happened?"

He told her, his voice appreciably weaker than it had been a few moments before. The loss of blood was telling on him rapidly.

'The scoudrel — who would have kissed you, in the market place, that day—met me—in the road below. We fought. I disarmed him. As I came up the hill—he shot"——The Puritan wiped the moisture from his forehead. His voice was very weak, very faint. "After all, what does it matter? I have but to go." He lurched toward the gate, his feet seemingly of lead, so weak had he become.

From the road that wound up to to the crest of the hill there came the murmur of voices, above which rose the words of an English sailors' chanty, very old, very weird and plaintive, with an almost primitive note suggested of wide sea spaces.

"There were two gallant ships a-sailing down the main,
Blow high—blow low, and so sail-ed we—
One was the Prince of Luther and the other the Prince of Wales,
Sailing down along the coast of the High Barbaree."

The words rang clear in the quiet night, but Barton scarcely heard them, so great had now become the throbbing in his brain. A distressing giddiness oppressed him; brilliant stars swung dizzily across the horizon of his mind; he could scarcely see Ramona, standing so close to him.

She, poor child, realized only too well the meaning of that oncoming song, those approaching peals of laughter. Now indeed had the time come when action, immediate, purposeful, was the only thing that could save either of them. She grasped the fainting man by the arm, and dragged to urge his forward.

"You must not stay here," she told him, crying the words frantically into his ear. "They will kill you. Go! Go!"

Barton revived momentarily at the sound of her voice. He made a feeble effort to obey, but all at once she realized that it was too late. Even now she fancied she could discern the approaching figures through the bushes along the road. With all her strength she dragged him back into the garden.

"You cannot leave by the gate!" Her voice was thin with terror. "They are almost here. Come—this way—quick—through the garden." Half-dragging him, half supporting him in her arms, she urged him toward the thick masses of shrubbery that bordered the opposite side of the little enclosure.

Barton, still unaware of the cause of her agitation, made a feeble protest.

"Why should I run away, sweet mistress?" he remonstrated. "I have done so man here any wrong." That indeed was true enough. Her voice trembled from weakness.

She scarcely heard him, but continued to urge him forward.

"Come—come," she whispered, "before it is too late."

The efforts he had made to drag himself thus far left him without strength to go further.

"I came but to say—good-bye—Ramona—I—I love——" the words trailed feebly from his uncertain lips. His face took on a grayer pallor. Unable to lift his feet from the ground, he turned, clutched desperately at the girl's arm, then crashed face downward among the bushes.

The tall grass, the straggling fringe of underbrush, provided a friendly cover. She knelt down, and with trembling fingers drew a mass of creeping vines over the unconscious man's body. In the shadow of the bushes, she hoped he would remain unseen. With a terrified glance at the silent figure she flung herself into the hammock, and took up her guitar, but her nerveless fingers could barely move the strings. The noise without the gate had swelled in volume; it was now close at hand. Already a man was entering the gate. He came hurriedly, his face flushed, his rapier in his hand. For a moment he rested its point upon the sand, the while he wiped his forehead with the sleeve of his velveteen coat. Then seeing the girl in the hammock, he spoke.

"Did the fellow come in here?" he cried.

She did not answer him at first, except with a sparkling laugh, as musical as the cords she now began to sweep from the strings of the guitar. Presently she stopped playing.

"Welcome, Master Portguee," she said. "You seem in a great hurry, for so warm a night. Pray, whom is it you seek?"

PUBLIC OPINION

DELICATE QUESTION.

(New York Tribune.)

The Kaiser announces his eastern armies are going "on with God." Very good, but who accompanies his western armies on their frequent retreats?

JUST LIKE THAT.

(Minneapolis Journal.)

"Have you a couple of hundred millions about your clothes that you will let me have till Saturday?" asked Spring-Rice.

"Sure," said Lansing, handing over the check.

"You can owe me the rest of the seven billion," remarked the Briton, tucking the check in his vest pocket carelessly.

A BADGE OF INFAMY.

(New York Tribune.)

The German has served a useful purpose in revealing himself to the American public. We see him through the recent attacks upon American hospitals as he is. We shall see him still more closely and still more convincingly in the weeks that are to come. We may not call him Hun or Boche, but if we continue to call him German it will be with a realization that the name carries with it the deepest reproach that one man can put upon another. "German" will be in America presently—thanks to German ruthlessness—a badge of infamy from one end of the land to the other.

CHILE'S NITRATE BEDS.

(New York Times.)

Because of reports that the nitrate supply of Chile was approaching exhaustion because of the present heavy strain upon it owing to the great war demand for saltpeter with the German supply cut off from the rest of the world, the Chilean authorities have gone to some pains to deny that there is any prospect of the nitrate fields of their nation nearing depletion. It is stated that Chile has nitrate enough to fill the world's needs for two centuries, and the government has shown its faith in the future prosperity of the country's nitrate business by arranging to expend more than $8,000,000 in the improvement of the port of Antofagasta, from which most of the nitrate of the country is exported.

THE LADIES' ROAD.

No doubt a good many readers who have seen references in the newspapers to the fierce fighting between the French and the Germans along the Chemin des Dames, or Ladies' Road, have wondered how that shell-torn highway got its pretty and romantic name.

The road, says the New York Tribune, dates from the time of King Louis XV. It begins at the Paris Maubeuge Road, about 10 miles north-east of Soissons, and crosses the Craonne, a distance of about 12 miles. It then descends into the valley of the Ailette, to cross the Vauclerc Woods to the domain of the ancient Chateau of Bove, near Bouconville, where the Princesses Adelaide, Sophie and Victoire, daughters of Louis XV., used to visit one of their ladies-of-honour, Mme. de Narbonne, every summer.

The roads of the region were detestable in those days. Out of consideration for the princesses a new paved road was built along the crest of the plateau, and ever since it has been called the Chemin des Dames.

THE VATERLAND.

Yard by yard, gray war paint is converting the United States steamship Vaterland into a transport, and the transformation is visible to New York's millions. Its departure will be like the passing of a Hoboken landmark. Since it was seized by the government, the Vaterland has supplied electric light to the piers, and power to lathes and sewing machines for military work. Its refrigerating machinery, cuisine, baths, swimming pools, gymnasium and social rooms gave luxurious hotel accommodation to hundreds of soldiers and sailors.

Many an untimely grave has been filled by the emptying of the wrong bottle.

It takes more than an eye-opener to make the toper see the error of his ways.

We can die only once—much to the regret of the undertakers.

Women seldom or never admire the life work of Father Time.

Absence makes the heart grow fonder. The wise young man goes home early.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

General Washington's Spy

A Story of the British Occupancy of New York.

By F. A. MITCHEL

What is now known as the Bowery, in New York, was originally a garden belonging to Petrus Stuyvesant, the last of the Dutch governors of the province of New Amsterdam. At the time the English came ashore and took the town away from the Dutch the name New Amsterdam was changed to New York. By the time the American war for independence came the Bowery had become a street, and St. Mark's place, where Governor Stuyvesant's manor house stood, had begun to be occupied by dwellings.

Recently some workmen engaged in pulling down one of these dwellings came upon a space closed by an iron door within which was a body, or, rather, a skeleton of a man. There was enough of the clothing left to indicate that it was a soldier's uniform, and the coat being or having been of a red color, there was no doubt that the man had been in the British army. Judging by the trimmings and buttons and side arms, he must have been an officer. In his pockets were found a number of letters, some of which were signed Katherine, some Kate, some K and some Katherine Ten Broek.

The find was turned over to certain persons who were interested in the early history of New York, and through the letters a story came to light that had been buried in oblivion for more than a hundred years.

During the Revolutionary war the mansion in question was occupied by a family of Tories named Throckmorton. The British occupied New York, their outposts extending to Westchester county, where they confronted the American forces—a thin line—under Colonel Aaron Burr.

There was a time when Washington made his headquarters at Dobbs Ferry, a settlement some twenty miles from New York. While there he used whatever means within his power to gain information of what was going on in General Howe's army in the city. There was a family of Ten Broeks living near the house occupied by the general, and one day, when he was sitting in the room he used for an office, his orderly announced to him that a girl was without who desired to give him certain information of the enemy. Washington directed that she be admitted.

She gave her name as Katherine Ten Broek and said that she had been to New York and while there had kept her eyes open to the extent and armament of the British forces occupying the city. Washington asked her a great many questions, and her replies showed such intelligent observation that the general proposed to her that she make another trip with a view to bringing him other information which he very much desired. She consented, and he asked her to discover if possible whether General Howe was meditating a move southward through New Jersey and Pennsylvania. There were two methods of obtaining this information, the one by noticing the accumulation of supplies and means of transportation, the other by learning from some person who knew what was to be done.

There was no difficulty in getting into New York, for Washington could give a pass for the purpose. As to returning, that was another matter. General Howe at this time had intentions that he did not wish disclosed to his enemy and was loath to permit any one going to the American lines.

Armed with Washington's pass, Katherine Ten Broek rode from Dobbs Ferry to a point not far south of Yonkers, where she found Colonel Burr's regiment. Here she left her conveyance and proceeded on foot to the north side of the Harlem river, where she found the British pickets.

Mistress Ten Broek, who, as her name indicated, had descended from the Dutch settlers of New York, had a pair of mild blue eyes, abundant locks, extremely light in color, and a complexion of pink and white. When she came to the British pickets she asked the officer of the picket post to pass her through, saying that she wished to go to New York to do some shopping.

"I can pass you through our lines," said the officer, noticing her mildness, which appeared not only in her physique, but in her voice, "but my orders are to pass no one going north. If you go in you will have to stay in. You can't get back home again."

Katherine feigned to hesitate at this. She looked much disappointed. She told the officer that there was to be a dance in Yonkers and she had nothing to wear. If she could not go to the city she must remain away from the dance. She looked so innocent and was so pretty that the officer took pity on her and, taking from his pocket a letter, tore off a part free from ink, wrote something on it and handed it to her. It was a request to an officer of Howe's staff to pass her back after she had finished her purchases.

Katherine's face brightened up at receiving this paper, which the officer told her was to an intimate friend, and she appeared for all the world to care only to get something with which to adorn herself. "Now I can go to the dance," she said, clapping her hands and dancing on her toes, and started for the ferry across the Harlem river, the officer attending her, putting her in the boat and pulling her across himself.

"What can I give you for your kindness?" asked Katherine when they touched the shore.

"A kiss would amply repay me," said the officer.

The girl dropped her eyes and made no reply. The officer approached, and Katherine turned her cheek to him. He kissed it, and Katherine stepped ashore. When she had proceeded a short distance she turned and saw the officer looking after her wistfully. She threw him a kiss from the tips of her fingers, giving him a smile at the same time; then she walked on.

Katherine had ten or eleven miles to go before reaching the city. She got a good many lifts, so that the journey was not as irksome as might have been expected. Anna Throckmorton was an intimate friend of hers, and Katherine was always made welcome at the Throckmorton home. She arrived there in the evening and was received by her chum.

Katherine could have done her shopping in a few hours if she had had any shopping to do. Her time was spent among the camps, where she kept her ears open for what was said and in noticing what preparations were being made to transfer men, munitions and supplies across the Hudson river. One day while passing one of the regimental camps she saw the officer who had passed her through the British lines. He joined her and walked with her. He asked her where she was stopping, and she told him. He had been often at the Throckmortons, where he had been welcomed, they being Tories. So he said if she were going to remain in the city longer he would come to see her there. To this she replied that she might be delayed some time.

Captain Hugh Arbuckle called upon Mistress Ten Broek and fell in love with her. Indeed, Cupid had sent a dart into his heart the moment she appeared at the picket post that he had commanded. Whether or not she derived any information with respect to the British movements, she at least used him to enable her to go where she pleased. When she was ready to depart she told him that she preferred not to deliver the letter he had given her to a member of General Howe's staff. She would like him to see her through the lines himself.

The truth is that Katherine had been seen making notes of certain items she intended to take with her to General Washington, and from that moment she was watched. Moreover, she was aware that she was watched. If she applied at headquarters for a pass to the American lines the chances were she would be arrested and a search would be made for what would be contraband of war.

She held Arbuckle sufficiently under her thumb to induce him to go with her to the British outposts beyond the Harlem river and see that she got safely through. Arbuckle drove her to the line, but when they reached it the officer in charge of the picket post said that he had received orders not to pass any one except on a pass signed by an officer of the staff especially designated to give passes.

Arbuckle endeavored to persuade Katherine to go back to New York and remain there till she could secure a pass signed by the proper authority. But Katherine would not listen to such a course. To her lover's surprise she developed a resolution not to be expected of one of her innocent mien. She persuaded him to make for the Hudson river, and when they reached the shore she appropriated a boat by which to reach a point north of the British line.

She would not permit Arbuckle to go with her. The tide was coming in and would take her over the few miles that would enable her to land within the American lines. Before leaving him she arranged for an improvised postoffice through which they might correspond.

Katherine effected a landing at Dobbs Ferry and went at once to Washington's headquarters with notes she had made concerning the British forces in New York sewed everywhere in her clothing.

A correspondence ensued between Arbuckle and the girl who held him in thrall that lasted until the British began the evacuation of New York. At the time Katherine was in New York, and Arbuckle was visiting her at the Throckmorton home. Meanwhile the British, who had missed Katherine, were looking for her. They had evidence that she was acting the part of a spy and had intercepted a letter from her to Arbuckle.

The night before the evacuation Arbuckle went to the Throckmorton house to see her. Some one had given information to the British that Katherine was at the Throckmorton house, and a squad of soldiers were sent there to arrest her. A colored servant, who was in Arbuckle's confidence, had revealed to him a secret closet in the house. Arbuckle and Katherine were in conference when the negro rushed in and told them the soldiers were coming. Katherine told Arbuckle to flee in one direction while she fled in another. She escaped through the garden, Arbuckle disappeared, and when the departure of the troops took place he was reported missing. A search was made, but he was not found. His disappearance was a mystery that was never cleared up till the Throckmorton house was torn down.

It is probable that when the troops came he went to the secret closet for concealment, closed the door and was unable to open it again.

The Throckmortons left with the British and their home, which was eventually confiscated, remained a long while vacant.

SUGGESTIONS TO SICK WOMEN

How Many Are Restored To Health.

First.—Almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

Second.—The medicine most successful in relieving female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates and strengthens the organism; it overcomes disease.

For forty years it has been making women strong and well, relieving backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pains. It has also proved invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the Change of Life.

Third.—The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

Fourth.—Every ailing woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

NO TABLE LINEN IN BERLIN RETAURANTS

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—Table linen disappeared from nearly all restaurants in Germany today in accordance with an order issued some time ago. Excepted from this rule are only a few first-class hotels, which in their dining rooms have tables that would have to be replaced by new ones to comply with the rule, which would mean a comparatively large expenditure of labour needed elsewhere for the production of war material and the necessities of life.

The proprietors of the largest Berlin eating houses say that food can be served without tablecloths as cleanly as with them, and that the people will soon get used to the innovation.

Kempinski, on Leipzigerstrasse, has covered his thousand or more tables with oilcloth. One restaurant in Unter den Linden has pasted frieze over the tableboards, while the largest eating house in Germany, the Rheingold, has covered its tables with colourd paper cloth.

WHEN TO DRY HERBS.

Herbs are in perfection just before flowering, when they are full of juice. Gather them on a dry day and remove all dust and grime. Cut off the roots, spread the stalks on brown paper laid in a flat pan, and dry the herbs in the oven.

Unlike vegetables and fruits, herbs are better for rapid drying, as more of the strength and flavour are preserved. They require careful attention to see that they do not burn, and should be turned very often. When perfectly dry take the leaves from the stems and rub the leaves to a powder. Place this in a bottle and cork tightly.

Sage marjoram, thyme, sweet basil and tarragon all dry most satisfactorily and make most delicious flavorings for soups or dressings.

Basil is fit for drying about the middle or the last of August; cherril in June and July; marjjoram the last of July; thyme July and August; mint June and July; parsley in June, July and August; sage in August, September and October; summer savory, August and September; tarragon, June, July and August.

'IT SAVED MY HAND.'

"I am a blacksmith.
I contracted a sore finger, which led to blood-poisoning.
After three months of doctoring, the finger had to be cut off.
It was too late! The poison had spread to my hand and arm. My hand was opened and the bone scraped. No use! Doctors said hand would have to be taken off.
I refused, and began to use Zam-Buk. I used it regularly and freely for a few weeks. It subdued the blood-poisoning and by the time I had used 7 boxes of Zam-Buk my hand was quite healed.
Zam-Buk surely saved my hand, and I firmly believe it would have saved my finger too had I used it at first."

These facts were sworn to by Mr. John Evans of 87 Lawrence St., Halifax, N.S., before Supreme Court Commissioner O'Hearn, and the sworn statement may be seen by any person so desirous.

THE LADY BANK CLERK.

(London Daily News)

Has the lady bank clerk come to stay? Opinions in banking circles would seem to be divided upon the point, and "The Bankers' Magazine" which during the past twelve months has given in its columns a course of lectures to ladies on elementary banking, contents itself with the present, and points to the golden opportunities women have of obtaining higher positions. Of the success of the experiment there seems to be no doubt. Women who were juniors a year ago are said to be filling posts of responsibility, and (in one case at least) occupying the manager's chair; while lady cashiers are fairly plentiful. The lady bank clerk, however, is apparently not yet sufficiently suspicious of the casual customer, for one reads of "considerable losses not only through errors in cash, which are to a large extent preventable by experience, but also through fraudulent opening of crossings and raising of amounts."

WAR AS A LEVELLER.

(Wall Street Journal)

"Doing your bit" sometimes brings one to a very human level. For instance, the story is told by "Jack" McFadden, a popular society leader, of his experience in the French Ambulance Service. While on the battlefield, he came across a man so badly wounded he couldn't walk. Placing him on his back McFadden carried him to the ambulance. While the man was being carried, his cheek, on which was a two weeks' growth of beard, rubbed against McFadden's smoothly shaved cheek. The contact made the young clubman draw his face away.

"Excuse me, Mr. McFadden," said the wounded soldier, "I couldn't help it."

"Why, that's all right," said the society leader, "but how do you know my name?"

"The last night you were in New York, you were at a dinner party at the Biltmore. Do you remember?"

"Perfectly," answered McFadden.

"I was your waiter."

SOME LLOYD-GEORGEISMS

"Think out new ways; think out new methods; think out even new ways of dealing with old problems. Don't always be thinking of getting back to where you were before the war. Get a really new world." So said Mr. Lloyd George, some little time ago. It sounds like good advice.

MECHANICAL TRANSPORT

Prior to August 1914 Mechanical Transport was controlled by the Transport Branch of the War Office. It consisted at that time of a small personnel and establishment of vehicles, and relied for the provision of transport necessary for the mobilization of the Expeditionary Force partly on vehicles already in use for civil transport, whose owners had previously been in receipt of a subsidy, and partly on the impressment of other vehicles. For the expansion of its personnel it relied on the direct commissioning of experienced civilians for the provision of officers, and the direct enlistment of civilian drivers, in many instances the drivers of vehicles, impressed or subsidized, offering themselves for enlistment; a certain number of officers, possessing the necessary qualifications, had also been warned that their services would be required with Mechanical Transport on mobilization; no provision was made for training these men in discipline or military routine, and the term of enlistment was very short. Under this scheme the mobilization of these units was entrusted to Officers' Commanding Depots at ports of embarkation. These officers were provided with lists of vehicles which were to mobilize at their depots, and the owners of vehicles were instructed by telegraph at which Depot their vehicles would be required. For the provision of spare parts a system of subsidy, similar to that in vogue for the supply of complete vehicles, existed, and efforts were made to encourage manufacturers to standardize parts and fittings to as great an extent as possible.

On the outbreak of war these methods efficiently provided the mechanical transport required by the Expeditionary Force. But clearly a system designed to supply the requirements of our military establishment before the war would need considerable revision and expansion when called upon to meet the demands of the New Armies.

In August 1914 the control of the Mechanical Transport was removed from the Transport Branch of the War Office, and entrusted to a separate branch of the Quartermaster-General's Staff. For the reception and training of personnel two Depots have been established. In one of these Depots are all available men for Mechanical Transport Service, trained and untrained, and there are also there men not immediately available, for medical and other reasons. Recruits are received there and supplied with clothing and necessaries, from there they proceed to a training Depot, ultimately returning, when trained, before being posted to units. It is the duty of this Depot to supply trained men to the Depots at which Mechanical Transport units are formed, and thus there is always there a large body of trained men, who continue their training until ordered to join units.

Recruits, on proceeding to the training Depot, receive at first 10 to 14 days recruit training in drill at a sub-depot; then then undergo a five weeks' course of driving and technical instruction, this instruction is given by a Staff composed partly of Army Instructors and partly of members of the Staff of the Instructional School of the London General Omnibus Company, men who are found unsuitable for driving or fitting become loaders and packers. Particular care is taken during the course to develop character and a soldierly spirit among the men, and games and sports are encouraged among them with this object. On completion of the course, they are returned as trained men to the Depot from which they were sent as recruits.

The collection of vehicles before allotting them to units is carried out in a manner similar to the collection of men. A Depot has been established near London where vehicles are received from the manufacturers, and this Depot is responsible for supplying vehicles required by mobilization Depots to complete Mechanical Transport units for service overseas, there is thus no training of personnel carried out here, the duty of the Depot being the receipt and despatch of all classes of motor vehicles, including motor cycles. During the first ten months of its existence this Depot took delivery from manufacturers of more than eighteen times as many vehicles as were raised on the original mobilization in 1914. Chassis from American manufacturers are received here, and despatched to firms in England for the fitting of coach work; but the use of American vehicles is being restricted, owing to the delay caused by the necessity of so much handling in this country. This Depot has also been responsible for the supply of a large number of vehicles to the Allies.

The work of bringing the men and the vehicles together to form units is carried out at a Depot about 50 miles from the port of embarkation; men arrive at this Depot completely equipped and trained for service overseas, and the work of the Depot consists solely in posting them to units, equipping these units with vehicles, which arrive ready for service in the same way as the men, and passing them on to the Depot at the port of embarkation, whence, after a final inspection, they proceed overseas.

The co-operation of the War Department and the manufacturers has produced a very satisfactory weekly output from each manufacturer under contract. The factories are under the direct supervision of the Inspectors of the War Department, who entirely control the manufacturers' output and facilitate the supply of raw material to firms carrying out contracts. The introduction of the Military Service Acts made possible a more efficient organization of manpower and enabled the Government to check considerable waste of labour. The output of the British manufacturers is not yet equal to the demand.

The supply of spare parts and tires is controlled by a Depot in London which is responsible both for the organization of the supply and for the issues to the troops; separate stores exist in London for all spare parts and tires; tools are supplied through the Army Ordnance Department.

There is also a Depot in London for the repair of vehicles, but the work of repairing vehicles which have become unserviceable on Active Service is principally carried out in the Base Depots abroad.

The growth of Mechanical Transport since August 1914 is well illustrated by the following facts. In October 1916 there were two hundred and twenty times as many vehicles (including motor lorries, motor cars, ambulances, and motor cycles) in possession of the Mechanical Transport as there were on the outbreak of war. With regard to the growth of personnel, it is interesting to notice that in August 1916 here were four times as many men stationed at the General Depot for available trained men, and twenty times as many men serving on the Western front alone, as were raised from all services for Mechanical Transport on mobilization. In June, 1916, there were two and a half times as many officers serving in the Mechanical Transport as were serving on the Peace strength of all branches of the A.S.C. in August 1914; and further that there were, in October 1916, ten times as many men serving with the Mechanical Transport in France alone as there were on the total strength of the A.S.C. in August 1914.

AMMONIA COOLED OFFICES.

(New York Times)

Those who have occasion to make the rounds of Wall Street banks and banking houses found one cool spot. It was the office of a prominent banking firm in William street. It was the only place in the financial district that was comfortable. The difference in temperature between that office and most other banking quarters suggested the presence of a refrigerator. Inquiry disclosed that the banking firm has an ammonia plant in its basement, which cools its offices. The use of ammonia for cooling purposes recalls the remark of the late Dr. R. Ogden Doremus, professor of chemistry at the College of the City of New York, who advised the installation of such a plant when plans were being drawn for the new Stock Exchange building. He said: "If they can cool dead hogs in Chicago why not live bulls and bears on the New York Stock Exchange?" The exchange is cooled by liquid ammonia.

HUMAN PROOF OF HUN ATROCITIES.

Canadian Claims Reward Offered by German-American Millionaire.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—I. S. Rossiter, veteran of the Canadian Expeditionary force of 1914, to-day claimed the reard of $1,000 offered by Dr. Albert Fuchs, German-American millionaire, for proof of German atrocities.

Rossiter carried the proof in his right hand. It was purposely mutilated by a German hospital surgeon, Rossiter said, after he had been captured June 4, 1916. He said he was only slightly wounded, but that the surgeon amputated one of his fingers and then deliberately cut all the tendons of his hand.

If Rossiter is given the reward, he says he will finance the transportation of enough victims of atrocities to claim Fuchs' entire fortune of $1,500,000, which Fuchs recently announced he was willing to use to defend Germans against charges of brutality.

COAL PRICES IN WEST.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 27.—Dominion Fuel Controller C. A. Magrath fixed the price of coal in Vancouver as follows:

In view of the abnormal conditions of a temporary character, at present arising, the local dealers agreed to deliver lump coal in the regular delivery limits at the prices above quoted.

BRITISH ARE ON THE OFFENSIVE AGAIN

ATTACKING ON A WIDE FRONT TO-DAY

Satisfactory Progress Everywhere In Another New British Drive

War Office Announces That Field Marshal Haig's Forces Attacked on a Wide Front North-east and East of Ypres "In Conjunction With the Allies" ---Offensive is in the Same Region as Last Thursday's Successful Drive.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM (Bulletin), October 9.—The British have pushed back the Germans through Poelcapelle and are fighting in the eastern outskirts of the city about a large brewery. Many German prisoners have been taken.

Just north of Broodseinde at Daisy Wood the Germans held out strongly. The British surrounded the wood and hot fighting followed. The attackers then pushed forward a considerable distance down the slopes of the ridge to lower ground. The battle is still proceeding. At many places the French and British have advanced to a depth of 1,200 yards or more.

(By William Philip Simms.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, October 9.—More than a mile advance into the German lines was achieved by Field Marshal Haig's second smash within a week starting early to-day. This great penetration was reported at several places. The newest British offensive centred about Passinandsale.

All the British objectives were attained with complete success and in good order. Daisy Wood, northeast of Broodseinde, where the Germans have long stubbornly resisted all attacks and stuck to their positions because of the natural difficulties of the ground, was quickly over-run by the Australians. They took many positions. A great number of prisoners are certain to be taken here, unless they prefer annihilation. As this despatch is filed headquarters despatches report the French and British losses as light. Several hundred prisoners have already been counted.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 9.—The British attacked on a wide front northeast and east of Ypres this morning, the War Office announced. Satisfactory progress is being made everywhere. The attack, the statement says, was made "in conjunction with our allies."

The mention of "our allies" in the Haig statement probably refers to French troops, which have heretofore been reported holding part of the Belgian line. Portuguese troops, however, are also located somewhere along the British front.

The new British drive is being made in the same region as the attack of last Thursday, one of the most successful British efforts of the war. On that day the Germans were expelled from the high ground along a ridge east of Ypres, giving the British dominating positions of great strategic importance. The wedge in the Germans' line had been made most unfavourable, and another "strategic retreat" has bene predicted. Recent despatches from the British front, however, told of heavy rains and deep mud, conditions under which ordinarily a renewal of the offensive would not be expected. The decision of the British staff to return to the attack so quickly may indicate they purpose to force a decision before the cold weather sets in or before the Germans have recovered from the last blow which appeared to have partially demoralized them.

BRITAIN'S GENERAL SIR DOUGLAS HAIG

Who has gained the greatest British victory of the war and has not suffered a single reverse since he assumed command, with the solitary exception of the minor loss near Nieuport early in the summer.

FRENCH CO-OPERATE IN THE NEW DRIVE

French Troops on the Belgian Front Attack German Positions in Conjunction With the British—"Struggle is Developing Satisfactorily" Paris Announces

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Bulletin), October 9.—The French troops on the Belgian front at half-past-five o'clock this morning attacked in conjunction with the British army German positions south of the Forest of Houtholet between Draibank and Weindendreft. The French official statement issued this afternoon says that the struggle is continuing and is developing favourably for the French arms.

The text of the French War Office statement follows: "In Belgium this morning at 5:30 o'clock we attacked in conjunction with the British armies positions of the Germans south of Houtholst Forest between Draibank and Weindendreft. The battle continues to develop favourably for us.

"On the Aisne front there was marked artillery activity, notably in the region of Pantheon. In the Champagne we were successful in penetrating German lines near the Butte of Tahure. After destroying dugouts our forces returned with prisoners. On the right bank of the Meuse, Verdun region, artillery duel continues in the sector north of Chaume Wood. There is nothing to report from the rest of the fronts."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH FRONT (Bulletin), October 9.—British troops on Gravenstafel Ridge advanced on to Passchendale Ridge and rested 1,000 yards southwest of the town of the same name. The French crossed Jansbeek and Broonbeek rivers in the direction of Houtholst Forest and at an early hour were reported fighting about Mangclare, some 1,500 yards beyond their original front lines. At 8.30 o'clock they had taken several hundred prisoners.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH FRONT, October 9.—The latest meagre report received says the Germans are counter attacking heavily astride the Ypres-Roulers Railway. The British were sending back large numbers of prisoners at an early hour. The combined attack of the French and British met with great success in the first few hours of the fighting. It is reported the British have achieved success in small operations in the region of Reutel and Holderheck.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, October 9.—The danger from submarines having decreased insurance of Norwegian cargoes in the North Sea had reduced from eight to seven per cent.

Germany and Austria to Make Another Peace Effort on Basis of No Territorial Aggrandizement and the Surrender of Belgium and French Territory

BERLIN PAPER SAYS IT

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 9.—Germany and Austria have agreed to make another peace offer on the basis of no territorial aggrandizement, the surrender of Belgium and the French territories, and no indemnity of either side, according to the Berlin Tages Zeitung to-day.

The newspaper asserted it made the announcement "on good authority." No details were given on how the rumoured peace offers would be advanced.

Speculation here was that Chancellor Michaelis might make some sort of a peace announcement to-day in his postponed speech advertised as likely to outline Germany's war aims.

A sensational session of the Reichstag is expected, according to Berlin reports. One despatch said Chancellor Michaelis was absent from Berlin, but in contradiction other messages reported him ready to speak.

The German press is filled with comment on the crisis which Michaelis now faces in the German parliament. The resignation of Vice-Chancellor Helfferich was freely predicted in some comments. The Radicals in the Reichstag and even many of the Conservatives are solidly opposed to him because of his failure to announce a decisive governmental policy at Saturday's Reichstag session. Even a number of the Conservative newspapers received here bitterly condemn Helfferich.

The Socialist organ Vorwaerts boldly asserted that not only Helfferich but Michaelis himself had both "proved to be failures,"—"As well as the bureaucratic system they represent."

CAPT. BLANCHARD PASSES AWAY IN TORONTO HOSPITAL

Well Known Peterboro' Officer Just Back After Two and a Half Years' Service at the Front Succumbs to His Illness

A MILITARY FUNERAL

The news that Captain W. H. Blanchard, V.S., of Peterboro, has passed away in Toronto, from the effects of the illness which caused him to be invalided home, will be received with deep regret in the city. Dr. Blanchard was widely known in Peterboro, where he had resided for many years, and also throughout the surrounding district. He left here to go overseas early in the war, and had seen many months service at the front.

The Toronto Mail and Empire says: After two and a half years' service at the front, Capt William Hutchinson Blanchard, of Peterboro, died at the base hospital yesterday morning, suffering from cancer. Capt. Blanchard was a member of the British Veterinary Corps, and returned to Canada two weeks ago to be admitted to hospital. He was also a veteran of the South African campaign, having served on the Army Veterinary Corps during that war. A military funeral will be held at two-thirty on Wednesday afternoon. Two sons of the late captain, both of whom are Peterboro boys, are now at the front, one of them being Pte. Bruce Blanchard, of the 21st Battalion, who won the Military Cross, the other being Gunner George Blanchard, of the 33rd Battery.

MOTHER UNABLE TO CHOOSE BETWEEN DRAFTED SONS

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 6.—Mrs. Mary Knaack, Cleveland, mother of two drafted youths, who was given the opportunity by an exemption board to decide which of her boys should go to war, has been unable to make a choice. She reported to the board to-day that she could not choose between Ernest, 25, and Frank 22. So the board certified Ernest for service, starting Sept. 19, and granted Frank exemption until next March.

A MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR GUNNER ALLEN

Bishop of Toronto Will Officiate at Millbrook

Toronto, October 9. — The Bishop of Toronto will officiate at a memorial service to be held at the Church of St. Thomas, Millbrook, this evening, in memory of the late Gunner Thomas Allen and other soldiers from the district who have paid the supreme sacrifice. Practically all the Anglican clergy from Peterboro, Port Hope, Lindsay, Newcastle and surrounding districts will be in attendance.

The late Gunner Allen, who was the only son of the Rev. Canon Allen, rector of St. Thomas', who was 24 years of age, and a young man of exceptional ability. His achievements during his scholastic days marked him out as one for whom the future had great treasures. He was educated at Trinity College School, Port Hope, of which he was a gold medalist; a graduate of Trinity College with honours, and the Osgoode Hall Law School. He had just completed his studies at the latter institution when he answered the call of Empire and enlisted in the University Corps, and went overseas to join the Princess Patricia's L. I., as a gunner in the machine gun section. He was killed in action on June 13th. Gunner Allen was a nephew of Dr. Norman Allen of Toronto, and that gentleman has arranged to go to Millbrook this afternoon and will be accompanied by a number of the officers and men of the P. P. C. L. I. who have been invalided home and are now resident in the city. The church will be draped with the flags of Great Britain and the allies. His Lordship, the Bishop of Toronto, will deliver the oration.

DIED.

BELLEGHEM.—At the family residence, 190 Hunter Street, on Monday, October the eighth, 1917, Hanpah Darling, dearly beloved wife of Daniel Belleghem, in her sixty-ninth year.

The funeral will take place from the family residence on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock, to Little Lake Cemetery.

England Is Preparing For A Literal Conscription Of Wealth

To Meet the Terrific Financial Burden After the War a Direct Levy on Capital Is Contemplated.

HUGE REVENUE NEEDED

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Oct. 9.—England has another shock in store for that section of America which hates to see wealth do its bit. England is preparing to conscript capital—literally.

There has been a great deal of talk about conscription of wealth in connection with the war, but it has meant only high income taxes, excess profits taxes and levies of that sort. The British Government to-day has practically decided to take the next step and levy directly on capital. Barring a change of opinion in the meantime on the part of those responsible for the British financial policy, such a levy will be made soon after the war ends.

A HEAVY BURDEN.

This, possibly the most radical financial innovation that has resulted from the war, is due to the conviction that it is if not the only way out, at least the best way out from under the terrific financial burden the war will leave the Empire. At the end of the war, Great Britain will face the necessity of providing two and one-half billion dollars or more annual revenue. It will cost half that to meet the running expenses of the Government and the greater part of the other half to meet the interest on war loans.

The estimate for pensions is now a quarter of a billion dollars a year.

If the present revenue of the Government could continue after the war and the war ended now, it would meet the expenses outlined. Last year close to three billion dollars was raised by taxation. But seven hundred million of that was raised by excess profits tax, which expires with the war. Other large additions were from taxes not expected to produce in the same ratio after the war.

It is roughly figured that taxation can produce 1,750 million after the war, when 2,300 million will be needed.

A LEVY ON CAPITAL.

A levy on capital will do it, in the opinion of Government officials. They estimate capital in private ownership has increased in Great Britain from 60,000 million to 100,000 million dollars since the war began.

One plan is for a levy of ten per cent. of this, wiping out half the war debt. The strongest argument for the plan is that it would not actually diminish the nation's capital, according to its proponents. It was simply to transfer the ownership of part of it to the state. The state would become a partner in industries. From a standpoint of social reorganisation which the Government agrees is coming after the war, one Conservative official said: "Nothing would go farther to remove the danger of discontent."

CAPTURED BUT CONTENTED — A HUN OFFICER PRISONER — This young officer was among the Germans captured by the Canadians during the fighting for Hill 70. Judging from his expression the officer in question appears to be more than contented with his lot, and to have no regrets at leaving the struggle behind him.

TOTAL RESULTS SO FAR.

Total examined	266

Fit for non-combatant service overseas	16
Fit for duty in Canada	30
Unfit for any service	78

The (Medical) Board at the armouries is now on its second week's work without falling off in the number of men presenting themselves for examination and with the percentage of men fit for the trenches remaining about the same as for last week. The majority of the men seem to be either landing in the A class or else rejected altogether as so far this week only two men have been placed in C category and one in B grade.

A number of candidates from outside the city were among the last squads examined. The majority gave their occupation as farmers and most of them were pronounced fit for the trenches.

There was only one session of the Board on the holiday, eighteen being examined in the morning. Fifty per cent of these were rejected outright and two others placed in C category, so that only seven were considered fit for the firing line.

Capt. Potts of the Forestry and Railway Construction Unit, has signed up five men so far and will undoubtedly get many more this week, as after the proclamation is issued on Saturday there will probably be no choice given the recruits as to what unit they wish to join.

HOME FROM THE FRONT.

A number of Peterborough's soldiers have arrived home from the front during the past few days. On Saturday, Sergt. H. Kelly and Pte. J. Holliday reached the city. The latter went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and went to France with a draft to the 5th C.M.R. He was through the latter stages of the battle of the Somme and was wounded in the foot in March last.

Last night Lance-Corp. Eric Stuart, son of Mr. R. N. Stuart, 701 Stewart street, Pte. J. Lowery and Pte. J. Latter reached the city, while Pte. S. Hatch got in yesterday afternoon.

Lance-Corp. Stuart went overseas with the 93rd, and was transferred to the Machine Gun Section of another battalion in France. He was badly wounded in the foot by shrapnel at Vimy Ridge, and is very lame. He has to undergo an operation at Kingston in the near future.

No. 648021 Pte. G. Allen of Peterborough, previously reported missing, is now officially presumed dead, according to to-day's official casualty list.

The awarding of a military medal to Sergt. R. L. Coones, an Apsley member of the 93rd Battalion, is officially announced in the cable today from London.

Rain Prevents Clash Between White Sox and Giants in New York

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. — About twelve-thirty to-day it was decided that it would be impossible to play the third game of the world's champion series here to-day owing to the rain and the soggy field. Fifteen thousand men and women in the bleachers' line, some of them who had been waiting all night, were naturally disappointed. Most of them went home for dry clothes, but others expressed their determination to hold their places for another twenty-four hours, till to-morrow's promised game.

STREET LIGHTING IMPROVEMENT.

Negotiations are on foot between the city authorities and the Utilities Commission in regard to replacing the present street arc lamps with incandescent bulbs. While this is desirable, it is, obviously, also desirable that the substitution should be a permanent improvement and not a make-shift procedure. At present there is some dissatisfaction with the few incandescent lights. They are left burning all day, the feeling of the Utilities Commission, as well as it was that of the late Light and Power Company, being that it is cheaper to allow them to burn through daylight than to employ a man to extinguish and turn them on. It may be cheaper, but it is not more satisfatcory in the way of well lighted streets. The life of an incandescent lamp, as far as its illuminating quality is concerned, depends upon the extent and time of its use. No private user of light, even if he got his electricity for nothing, would not, with regard to the quality of his light, or the life of the lamp, keep his incandescent bulb burning longer than necessary—not all day long, anyway. If he did this he would have defective illumination or have to oftener replace his bulbs. As to the streets it's the light we want.

Would it not be well to proceed gently with the proposed change of street lamps and wait a little longer till the change can be made systematically, thoroughly and permanently? It might cost considerable to have all incandescent street lamps put upon one circuit of wire so that they could be turned on and off at some central point by the pressing of a button. Another consideration in waiting till the thing can be done properly, consists in replacing the present unsightly poles in the residential section with something more ornamental. Wooden poles, crooked and rough, like the blighted trees of a fire swept swamp, would give just as good light on the business streets as the ornamental and far more costly iron standards now in use. That wouldn't do—it wouldn't look well nor be a credit to our business streets. Neither do such poles look well on residence streets where beauty and tidiness are much more called for. Concrete standards for residnce street lights, something like the imitation granite pillar placed in the oval at the entrance of Little Lake cemetery— only they should be set "plumb"—would greatly beautify our residence streets. That would, however, be perhaps too costly, but a medium, a concrete standard—permanent and neat, would not be unreasonable in cost considering its permanency and absence of unsightliness.

Our lighting system is our own now, and we must make the most of it, get the greatest possible advantage from it in eevry way. Peterborough is a growing city and we want to keep the lead we have in other things, in the matter of comeliness, neatness and beauty of our streets and public places—lead in our street lights as we lead in other things. If the larger and more thorough way of dealing with our street lighting is not presently practicable we can defer it without any great harm being done. We can stand our present lighting as we have done for some time, especially if by enduring it a little longer we shall be in a position to do the thing right—not spend money on a make-shift that not be satisfactory, nor permanent.

If Mr. Hanna as has successfully done, can control the fish supply situation, why can't he throw out his line in some of the other deep waters of high prices?

DOES NOT FILL THE BILL.

The Ottawa Journal deprecates the "knocking" which it alleges some Liberal newspapers perform upon Liberals who enter what poses as a union government. In so doing it demonstrates that we are not getting a "union" government—but simply "new cloth in the old garment." In the same column, in a well-deserved eulogy of Hon. Hugh Guthrie, it says:

That such a man, holding such well-known views, should enter a Conservative government, at this juncture, signifies the coalition of hearts and minds that has been achieved throughout the country. "A Conservative government" is what has not filled the bill so far, nor inspired any desirable degree of public confidence in its ability or its record to give adequate administration in the crisis of Canadian affairs. One chief reason for the demand for a union government is the formation of an administration that will create public confidence and "unite" all classes, all parties, all races, and all creeds in enthusiastic support of the government of the country in the work of doing Canada's share in winning the war. We want a perfectly non-partizan government that will prevent the exploitation of partizan interests—that will be patrioic and independent of predominating party influence. If such a government is not the "Conservative Government," Hon. Mr. Guthrie has entered the Borden government, still a partizan government. It has not only not shed its partizan skin, but has not attained the spirit of a "union" government in which deference to partizan interests is eliminated and non-existent, and in which the interests of the country, the interests of winning the war, are above everything.

The popular indictment charges the Borden Government with intense partizanship in the whole of its war, as well as, general aministration. That course is what has helped partizan ship in its efforts and soured the national spirit of war service. The same partizan sprit animates the Borden Government still. In the very act and moment of trying to form a "union" government, while calling upon Liberals to sink party ambitions, to sever party affiliations in helping on a great non-partizan, ntional organization for war-winning purposes, the Borden Government is plying the partizan role. While one hand is stretched out to welcome non partizan members, the other is stretched out to reward and provide for, at the country's expense—with fat offices, the government's supporters—at salaries of from $5,000 to $8,000 per year. This is not right. It is forestalling the rights of a union government which, it is assumed, would not exploit the country's resources and service to reward partizans, but would fill offices with the best men that could be found. Union government should mean union of party, union of talent and capacity to serve—the only means to secure unity of popular support and co-operation.

If Premier Borden, or the government organs complain of "partizan" criticism, he should not invite and justify it by using the tremendous responsibility of his position to distribute post-mortem partizan favours. For six years he has played the partizan game, and when he is ostensibly seeking to eliminate partizanship, unite national effort on a non-partizan bosis, and enlist all political and citizen interests through the medium of an "union" government, he should not abuse his power by serving partizan interests by partizan appointments and other exercise of partizan spirit. He should act in the only spirit by which a national, a union government alone con be formed.

Tom Moore's lines may be parodied —you may alter, may tinker the cabinet if you will, the scent of the partizan hangs round it still.

Press on Teuton Replies To Pope

MARKS A CERTAIN PROGRESS

Boston Globe:—"The reply of the Central Powers marks a certain progress on the road toward peace. How much it is still too soon to say; but there are evidences which are encouraging."

CONTRIBUTE NOTHING NEW

Sioux City Journal—"The reply of the Germanic monarchs to the peace overtures of the Pope contribute nothing new to the subject, which in effect was closed by the message of the American President. They contain the same general protestations of idealism that have marked other recent moves of Berlin and Vienna."

WILL BE READ CAREFULLY

Troy Times:—"The German and Austrian answers to the Pope will be read carefully, not only because of what they say but for what they omit to say and for the meaning that may lie between the lines. Were the Berlin note as candid as that from Vienna there would be a brighter prospect for peace negotiations."

CANNOT SHARE THEIR VIEWS OF JUSTICE.

Pittsburg Gazette-Times:—"Until the Teutonic Powers sincerely repent of their crimes and offer some measurably adequate atonement therefor, no serious consideration can be given to their professions of desire for peace on a basis of justice. Their conceptions of justice cannot be shared in and agreed to by the rest of the world."

STILL JOCKEYING FOR ADVANTAGE.

Chicago Herald:—"Prussia is still jockeying for advantage; the autocracy is still trying to preserve its illgot gains of war and its own power for future aggressions. The situation remains exactly the same as it was when President Wilson replied to the papal note. The world cannot trust Prussia's present rulers."

WILL GET NO ACCEPTANCE

Newark Ledger:—"There really is no great need to treat in detail of these replies. They leave matters exactly where they were when President Wilson made his historic address with the view of placing the United States in the proper light before the whole world. Unless the Central Powers have something else to offer they might as well compose themselves, for they will get no acceptance so long as they believe themselves the aggrieved party and the victors."

NOTHING CONCRETE IN NOTES

St. Louis Republic:—"Probably the only peoples who will feel a distinct disappointment in the replies of the Central Empires to the Pope's peace proposals will be the Germans and the Austrians. So far as the allied countries are concerned they expected little result. They are not disappointed. There is nothing concrete in the German or the Austrian notes that an allied mind can lay hold on with any hope of immediate peace.

SENDS SIX TO FRONT.

"Sorry I Can't Offer Country Any More," Says Patriotic Mother Whose Sons Enlist.

CHICAGO, Ill.—The nation's call to arms has gradually decreased the size of the family circle at the home of Richard A. McGauran until to-day the father, mother and four small sons are the only ones left out of a family of twelve. Six of the McGauran boys are in some branch of national service, and the four at home declare their age alone keeps them out of the army or navy.

Mrs. McGauran said she has sent every one of her sons away without shedding a tear.

"I've encouraged them to go," she said. "I feel that it's their duty, and I've told them all goodby with a smile. If some of my boys don't come back I'll have to bear it. Some boys of some mothers are bound not to return. I'll suffer no more than they. I'm only sorry that I have not some more boys to go."

"Think of the reunion some day when they all return," added Mr. McGauran cheerily.

The Pigeon Creek Bridge As Viewed By A Toronto Writer

One of the attractions afforded by the pretty lake country of Northern Ontario are the floating bridges crossing some of these picturesque little lakes. The lake boasting the longest one and having the most beautiful surroundings is Lake Pigeon. This bridge is fully one-half mile long, and a motor trip to this spot solely for the purpose of seeing the bridge, and of crossing it, if you are venturesome, is well worth while. Motorists, however, should know exactly what they are doing when they cross such places.

It is interesting to note the change in the character of the country passed through in reaching this district. As we go north the well cultivated farms grow farther and farther apart. The wooded sections become more frequent, and then we come upon a rocky stretch. We pass many small lakes, and then catch glimpses of a larger lake. Suddenly a turn in the road brings us to the very margin of Lake Pigeon. Now, the road map which we are following, has shown us our road going directly across this lake, and according to the scale of miles we figure that it must be one-half mile across. We are expecting to find an expansion bridge so imagine our surprise when we see merely a succession of floating rafts extending out into the lake. It looks rather dubious, these rafts bobbing up and down with the waves, and occasionally a big one washing right over.

We leave the car and walk out upon the bridge. The beauty of the scene holds us spellbound. A marsh extends out a little way bristling with stiff growing cattails. The yellow marsh weed waves its heady blossoms and a slight breeze wafts to us the heavy odor. Reeds grow higher than a man's head and through these are a lot of little dams and canals, with green still water, where duck weed and pond weed run to seed. One can imagine all sorts of water creatures living in these well concealed spots. There are said to be fields of wild rice somewhere in the lake region which attract great numbers of wild ducks and geese.

Far out on the extreme edge of the marsh are a pair of long legged cranes flapping their wings and giving forth their weird, trumpetty calls. A flock of crows pass above like a heavy black cloud. Already they are flocking preparatory to migfating. Now, we come upon a bed of glistening white water lilies. They grow up almost to the edge of the bridge, but not quite—just close enough to make one reach, and wish for them. The region is full of rotted timber, which makes the water very dark, and this lake is no exception. The water is inky black making the pure white of the lilies seem all the more wonderful.

It is with an effort that we withdraw our eyes from all these beautiful things of nature and examine the bridge which is take us across. It consists of a series of rafts about 15 by 25 feet. One huge log on each side forms the foundation with logs only a little smaller close between them. The rafts are chained one to another and anchored in places. A roadway of boards has been placed over this—a roadway which rises and falls with the waves.

We go back to the car. We have seen no signs, no warnings, that it is not safe for motorists—there are no farmhouses for several miles back so there is nothing to do but proceed. Slowly at first and then with more confidence until we are in the middle of the lake. A queer sensation, indeed, to look on either side and see see nothing but inky black waters and realize that we are in the middle of the lake in a motor car. When we reach the other side we stop and look back. Stretched behind us this floating bridge looks like a mere streak on the dark expanse of water. The crossing was a pleasant enough experience in the bright daylight but one that you would not care to undertake at night or in a storm.

On this side of the bridge we meet a farmer and ask him about the bridge. "Oh, that," he answered, "that has been there these fifty years. The government put it there. Oh, yes, it's safe enough—traction engines go over it sometimes."—From the Toronto Weekly Star.

25c. A Barrel May Be Maximum Profit To Be Allowed Millers

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—The price of flour in Canada, or more properly speaking, the millers' profit per barrel of flour, is expected to be regulated at a conference in progress here to-day between Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller; the milling interests and the head of the Board of Grain Supervisrs. All the big companies are represented.

For the past few weeks since they last conferred with Mr. Hanna, the milling interests have been organizing themselves, and it is understood they have submitted a proposition, substantially along the lines of what the trade in the United States is doing. On the other side of the line a definite price per barrel is not fixed, for naturally there would be different quotations at different centres but instead, a maximum profit of 25 cents per barrel, without regard to the grade of the flour, is provided for.

The Canadian millers are understood to be asking for a similar maximum of profit, but as 25 cents is considered a pretty good margin it would be the maximum, and it is intimated that the industry would be content with less.

The millers are also arranging to produce a flour especially adapted to making war bread, utilizing more of the whole wheat and making available for export a larger quantity of white flour.

Dandruff Surely Destroys the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

LOVE SONGS

It is hard to beat Charles Harrison's singing of love songs. On Victor Record 18201 he sings "Any Place is Heaven if You Are Near Me" and "When I Found the Way to Your Heart." Either or both of these songs can be heard at the Victrola Parlours of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Ltd.—B. H Britton, Manager, Royal Bank Building, corner George and Hunter streets.

Natural Foods As Cure For Intestinal Troubles; Eat Orange Pell, Advises Dr. James J. Walsh

Natural foods, the bitter with the sweet, the coarse with the fine, the entire fruit or vegetable, will cure most of the intestinal troubles which plague this generation, according to Dr. James J. Walsh.

In a lecture prepared for the students of the medical course of the School of Sociology of Fordham University and published by International Clinics, he directed attention to the fact that our bodies do not need medicine or artificial methods to make them run efficiently. What they need are natural food and plenty of water.

"It is particularly hard for people who live indoors to drink enough water," he says. "We live in steam heated houses, in the atmosphere of which there is entirely too little moisture, and those who do not take exercise are very seldom tempted to drink. We need probably at least two quarts of liquid during the day in the conditions in which we live at the present time. As a rule people drink a glassful of water and a cupful of tea or coffee at meals and seldom much more.

"That is not enough to run our economy. We need more water and we need it habitually. We need some of it every few hours every day. The only way to obtain it is to form the habit of taking a certain number of glassfuls of water between meals.

"A good many of the so-called improvements and refinements of modern cooking are really quite opposed to the normal, healthy action of the gastro-intestinal tract. By encouraging the use of fruit we are supposed to have greatly changed popular habits for the better, but watch people eat fruit and you will see how carefully fashion or fancy has neutralized a great deal of the good effect of this salutary change of diet. A man drinks a glassful of orange juice in the morning, but in the preparation of this practically all of the pith of the orange has been removed. Usually a large amount of sugar goes with this and sweetens the stomach, which is not the best thing in the world for the early morning hour.

"I have made the suggestion that persons who eat oranges in the morning should eat most, if not all, of the peel with the orange. I reminded them that many of us when we were children always liked to eat some of the skin, and that when oranges were scarcer than they are now we seldom ate an orange without consuming some of the skin. Orange peel is perfectly proper material for use, and indeed is consumed in large quantities in marmalade at breakfast tables, though the custom of eating it is much commoner in the British Isles than with us.

"Orange peel is an extremely tasty substance, containing aromatic oils in considerable quantity and having a rather pleasant flavour and odour. It is at least as valuable as bran, is much more tasty and does not have to be especially provided. I have even ventured to suggest that lemon peel should be eaten occasionally when pieces of lemon occur in lemonade or in iced tea in the summer time or warm tea in the winter.

"I recommend also the peelings of baked potatoes. It is well known that baked potatoes are much better food than potatoes prepared in any other form. The outer skin of these potatoes in these circumstances is made very palatable. It requires rather vigorous chewing, and occasionally may have to be cut with a knife, but it is very tasty and adds distinctly to the value of the potato as food, for certain natural salts go with it that are removed if the potato is peeled. Blackened, somewhat charred portions of baked potatoes should be particularly recommended. The charcoal is good for the stomach and intestines and supplies some very valuable residue.

"The one thing that is encouraging in modern fashionable living is that the salads have a variety of things in them, and usually also contain oil, and sometimes nuts and bits of fruits.

"What we must now do with the diet of mankind is to reintroduce into it the residue of material which we have been so sedulously removing from our food. There is no need for spcial bran biscuit if we will eat whole wheat bread, which is very tasty, and if we will occasionally use peanut butter with it."

BOWDY'S SONG

(By Patrick MacGill)

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE. — Bowdy Benners was a very quiet man, slow of speech and not easily ruffled. Men who did not know him well treated him in rather a casual fashion. In some way they fancied themselves rather superior to him, and when, for instance, he entered a wrestling competition and beat the strong man of the battalion the onlookers did not give him due credit. "He's a sly dog, old Bowdy," they said, and were in some way annoyed because Bowdy, up till then, had never openly avowed his physical prowess. Rumours about him were rife.

There is a tenet of discipline which ordains that a soldier, whether he requires it or not, shall go through the action of shaving daily, and it was said that the conscientious Bowdy, who in ordinary life shaved only twice a week, went through the action of shaving a hairless chin five mornings of the week. . . . Now, Spudhole Bubb, who belonged to the same platoon as Bowdy, was a man of different metal. He had no great love for discipline, and vowed that men who obeyed military orders to the letter were humbugs.

"Fightin' is what I like," Spudhole often remarked. "No bloomin' rules about that. You see your man and you go for him, and no bloomin' sergeant behind your back shoutin', 'Left parry! Point!' But when you meet the sergeant on parade next day you'll be damned lucky if he's not runnin' you into clink for a dirty bayonet."

That was Spudhole, a man poles apart from Bowdy. Spudhole could swear with inspired abandon, but Bowdy had only one oath to his credit. This was "Devil blow me blind!" How he managed to acquire this expressive phrase was a mystery. When he gave vent to it he spoke in a hesitating voice, as if apologizing for his moral depravity. But it came to pass that in spite of his slow and easy way and his indifference to the society of any one the men of the platoon gradually came to like Bowdy. And once they came to like him they loved him for good, for the friend slow to make is a lasting friend.

But one day, with dramatic suddenness, Bowdy became every one's friend. It almost seemed as if he had bided his time and waited for a fitting occasion to make his worth manifest. It happened in this way: He was billeted with his platoon in a village near the firing line. The Germans shelled the place at intervals, and stray bullets were continually rapping on the cobblestones of the street. The platoon was billeted in a high barn over a stable, and the only exit was through a door in the wall. From this door to the ground stretched a ladder which the men had to make use of when going out or coming in.

* * *

On this day the Germans started shelling at 11 in the morning—an unusual hour, for the "strafe" generally started at noon. The first shell hit the ladder and smashed it to smithereens. The men could not get out now. To add to the predicament a draft newly out was in the barn, and the "rookies" were not yet used to the ways of war. To make matters worse, one of them was hit on the leg with a splinter of wood.

"I'll bind up your wound," said Spudhole Bubb, who was an adept in the art of bandaging. "The rest of you blokes keep quiet. The shells won't come this way no more. That one is all the Germans will send."

As if to give the lie to his remark, a second shell burst on a house near at hand and a thousand flying tiles rattled on the roof of the barn. It was a bad time for the men newly out, and even the older soldiers were discomforted. It was then that Bowdy Benners came to the rescue. Rising from the floor, on which he was sitting cleaning his rifle with an oily rag, he stepped out into the middle of the apartment, lit a cigarette, puffed a whiff of smoke into the air, and called out in a cool voice: "Come, boys, let's have a song!"

He began the song in a deep baritone voice. None of the men had ever heard him sing before.

"There was a man and he had two sons, and these two sons were brothers,
John Andrew was the name of one, and Andrew John the other.
Sing, brethren, sing!"

He repeated the first two lines. Spudhole and another man were the only ones who joined in. The "rookies" were listening to the shell splinters striking on the roof. Bowdy continued:

"Now, these two brothers had a coat.
They bought it on a Monday.
John Andrew wore it all the week, and Andrew John on Sunday.

Half a dozen other men joined in now, but the "rookies" were as yet silent. Their eyes were, however, fastened on Bowdy. "They'll forget the shells in a minute," the singer thought, and went on:

"Now both these brothers bought a horse, and it was poor and thin.
They took it to the riverside and shoved the poor thing in.
Sing, brethren, sing!"

Some of the "rookies" joined in now, and one of them, the man who was wounded, laughed outright when Spudhole said "damned thing" for "poor thing." Bowdy took another puff from his cigarette and went on with increasing energy, moving just a trifle to one side as a broken tile fell on the floor near him.

"Now, both these brothers died one day through eating fish and jelly;
John Andrew with a pain in his back and Andrew John his—stomach.
Sing, brethren, sing!"

None could resist now. All joined in and got the correct rhyme. Spudhole jumped to his feet and started to dance a jig, only stopping short when Bowdy burst into song again:

"And both these brothers now are dead — I'm sure we wish them well—
John Andrew, he has gone to heaven and Andrew John—as well.
Sing, brethren, sing!"

No stanza reached the volume and intensity of the last. All were unanimous, even the "rookies," in asserting that the two brothers were separated in the life hereafter.

"Amen," sang Bowdy in a deep, solemn voice. "Amen," chanted the barn.

"The shelling's at an end now," Bowdy remarked as he went back to his rifle and oily rag. "It's just the ordinary 'strafe.'"

Bowdy's song is very popular now, and it is often sung by the men marching up and down the roads of France. But to the men who sing it the song is not half as wonderful as the story of the day on which it was first sung.

DESIRE TO USE WINE ON RELIGIOUS FEAST

Temperance Act Conflicts with Ceremonies in Jewish Synagogues.

WINDSOR, Oct. 5.—A deputation of representative Jewish citizens waited upon Police Magistrate Legatt to ascertain whether they might legally make use of wine at special religious services to be held here next week. They were informed that the Temperance Act as it stands prohibits the use of liquor anywhere other than in private dwellings, and were advised to put the matter up to the Provincial License Commission.

Speech that is too flowery should be nipped in the bud.

MAY FACE FATHER AND BROTHERS ON BATTLEFIELD

Omaha Youth Enlists Despite Kinfolk Are Fighting for Austria.

Meeting his father and his three brothers in battle is one of the prospects which twenty-three-year-old Albert Bejlek, formerly a South Omaha boy, faces. Bejlek, born in Bohemia, an Austrian subject, lived in South Omaha for three years before enlisting three months ago in the American army, says the Omaha World-Herald. He is now in France with General Pershing. His father and three brothers are fighting under the banners of Emperor Karl of Austria-Hungary. His oldest brother Joseph is somewhere on the Belgian front.

"I want to fight for the freedom of my father and my brothers," is what young Bejlek said when he enlisted three months ago at the Omaha recruiting station. "I know that I may have to face them in battle, but if I can help to free them from the tyranny which grinds them down I want to do my part."

And that Bejlek is in fair way to aid in the struggle for democracy is proved by the letter received several days ago by his uncle, Frank Brejcha, No. 5,407 South Twenty-fourth street. Bejlek is now in the ranks of the American troops encamped in France. The letter reads:—

Saving $20.00 a Month.

"Dear Uncle: — I am sending you best wishes from France. I am enjoying the best of health. I cannot write much this time, but I will tell you everything anyway when I come back to the United States. I am sending you $20 every month. I want you to hold it for me so that I can send it to father and mother back in Bohemia after the war. I know that they will need it.

"Please write to me at this address: —Company K, Sixteenth United States Infantry, Amexforce, Paris, France.'

"Forgive me for writing such a short letter. Yours, ALBERT."

Three years ago young Bejlek had passed his physical examination for the army in the spring before war was declared, and was to present himself in the fall for military service. One night he came from work and told his mother that he had decided to flee to America. That night he took a train for the Saxon frontier, intending to make his way to Dresden.

Escaped on Another's Pass.

Just before the train reached the frontier Bejlek noticed that every passenger had a red pass. An old man allowed him to borrow his long enough to pass through. A week later he was in Hamburg and on board ship for America. In South Omaha he obtained work at Armour's, where he was employed until he enlisted.

The other members of Bejlek's family have undergone experiences just as exciting. His brother Joseph was a member of the military escort of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand and was in Sarajevo, Bosnia, when the Archduke and his wife, the Countess Hohenberg, were assassinated. Joseph had been employed in the great muntion factory at Skada, Austria, where the great siege guns known as "Skadas" are manufactured. At the outbreak of war he was sent to Belgium to help man the guns. Albert Bejlek thinks that his brother is still in Belgium, although he has not heard from him since the outbreak of the war in August, 1914.

DISSOLVE IT IN YOUR MOUTH

That's the way to take the Peps treatment. Nothing can equal it for asthma. Mr. Fred Hinz of Saskatchewan Landing, Sask., says: "I suffered with asthma for years, and although I tried many remedies, Peps is the only remedy that has brought me relief from this distressing ailment."

The victory of Peps over asthma is due to the fact that Peps is a breathe-able remedy, and is therefore capable of reaching all the minute air passages which ordinary remedies, that go to the stomach, cannot reach.

This treatment is also the best for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis, laryngitis and all other affections of the throat and lungs. All dealers or Peps Co., Toronto. 50c box, 3 for $1.25.

PEPS

If Stomach Hurts Drink Hot Water

"If dyspeptics, sufferers from gas, wind or flatulence, stomach acidity or sourness, gastric catarrh, heartburn, etc., would take a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of hot water, immediately after eating, they would soon forget they were ever afflicted with stomach troubles, and doctors would have to look elsewhere for patients." In explanation of these words a well known New York physician stated that most forms of stomach trouble are due to stomach acidity and fermentation of the food contents of the stomach combined with an insufficient blood supply to the stomach. Hot water increases the blood supply and bisurated magnesia instantly neutralizes the excessive stomach acid and stops food fermentation, the combination of the two therefore being marvellously successful and decidedly preferable to the use of artificial digestants, stimulants or medicines for indigestion.

MUTT AND JEFF.

The old favourite, "Mutt and Jeff" were at the Grand on Saturday in a new version of their adventures, entitled "Mutt and Jeff Divorced." The offering was a vast improvement over the attraction featuring the cartoon heroes which appeared here last season. The comedy was lively and facetious, the music catchy and the chorus vivacious and well trained, with the result that two large audiences went away well pleased.

"THE SKY PILOT."

Two large audiences saw and enjoyed "The Sky Pilot" at the Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon and evening, the house being crowded to the doors last night. The play is founded on Ralph Connor's well known novels. "The Sky Pilot" and "Black Rock," the dramatization being arranged by Frank Mandel and Geo. H. Brennan, who have taken considerable liberties with the books. The chief complaint to be found with their work is that they have missed the Canadian atmosphere of Ralph Connor's stories and have given the play a flavour of the United States west, typified by the part of Brocho Bill, the sheriff, who is refreshing in his role, but is distinctly of the region below the international line. However, the dramatists having introduced many of Connor's characters eeffectively and the play has a distinct appeal and charm carrying a message that was evidently not missed by yesterday's audience. The cast is a thoroughly capable and well balanced one. Notably effective was the portrayal of the part of the sheriff by Earnest Anderson, who in physique and voice is admirably fitted for the roll and who plays it naturally and pleasing. Brandon Tynan invested the title role with a convincing earnestness, dignity and sincerity, his reciting of the story of the Canyon in the last act standing out as one of the best things in the play. Miss Regina Wallace did splendid work in the role of Gwen, both as the reckless, God-defying madcap in the early part of the play and the crippled and changed girl of the last act. Joseph Lawrence's delineation of the part of Bruce Mayor, especially in the dramatic scene of the first act when in the grasp of delirium tremens he proceeds to shoot the "devils" was an effective piece of acting. Eddie Heron as 'Hi Kendal," and Isobel Winlocke, as Ponka, the squaw, supplied the comedy relief and both made excellent use of their opportunities.

Scenically, "The Sky Pilot" leaves little to be desired. The last setting showing the mountain of the Holy Cross is especially beautiful. The illumination of the Cross as the death of the Pilot is announced, is a symbolic climax is keeping with the final scene.

Suffering Is Caused By The Coal Shortage

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The coal crisis, practically nation-wide, is receiving President Wilson's attention to-day. Drastic action is expected unless the situation is relieved immediately.

Reports of consumers unable to buy coal, of freezing apartment buildings and houses, of imminent shut down in public utility plants and industries are pouring in. Railroads are confiscating coal for their pressing needs, and similar steps are threatened by cities in Ohio and elsewhere.

The need for coal is particularly acute in small cities away from the most direct coal routes.

Many houses are resorting to the use of oil, wood and gas for heating purposes.

When acute shortage is reported to the fuel administration here, steps for relief are immediately ordered. This emergency bureau is working day and night.

Coal prices have shown no appreciable wide drop since the Government took over the regulation of the industry. In many cities, despite price-fixing at the mines and the limitation of the jobbers' and retailers' profits, consumers have been requested to pay more than formerly.

Bold Thief Robs Toronto Household

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—Grabbed by a burly thief in mid-afternoon, Mrs. I. E. Williams was bound hand and foot, a drugged capsule put into her mouth and she was left on the floor while her assailant went through the rooms upstairs and down and possessed himself of $75 and various trinkets. This occurred within a stone's throw of busy Yonge street, close to the downtown section. Mrs. Williams retained presence of mind and her courage, however, and working herself over to the telephone, knocked the receiver off the hook with her head and summoned assistance. The robber heard help coming and made a clean get-away.

YESTERDAY A BUSY DAY GETTING OUT VEGETABLES

All Over the City Men and Women Were Taking in Their Crops

The amateur gardeners got in a great day's work yesterday. Albertus Avenue, just north of the Brinton Carpet Company, was one of the busiest streets in the city. The gardens there were all worked by people residing in different parts of the city. This particular street will yield sufficient vegetables for about twenty families, all of which were buyers, and not producers, last year.

If the price of potatoes is down this year, the amateur gardener has been a great factor in helping to bring this about, and he need not worry if his cost of producing is about up to figure at which he can buy potatoes this year.

Toronto Man Had Lost 26 Pounds

Suffered 30 Years and Was So Weak Couldn't Walk a Block Without Help

Only those who have suffered with rheumatism like I did before I began taking Tanlac know how terrible the pain is, and it would be impossible to describe it," said Richard Faulkner, who has been a butcher in Toronto for many years, and lives at 68 McGill street, recently.

The rheumatism bothered me mostly in my legs," he continued, especially my feet and ankles, but it extended also into my arms and shoulders, and for nine or ten years now I have simply suffered torture from it. Just that nagging, almost unbearable pain that seemed to strike clean to the bone, and all day at my work I would almost go mad I suffered so. I could get no rest and many a night I have had to get out of bed and walk the floor. I just couldn't sleep on account of the misery. My legs would get stiff and draw up so I couldn't walk, I just had to hobble around and the boys who worked with me expressed pity for me. I have also had a bad stomach trouble for thirty years, and this together with exposure to cold and dampness in the shops, no doubt brought on the rheumatism. My appetite was all gone and what I forced myself to eat disagreed with me terribly. Gas would form on my stomach and keep me in misery for hours, feeling like I would choke to death. After breakfast I would become nauseated in a few minutes and vomit up all I had eaten. I also had a hurting in my right side and pains around my heart caused by the gas on my stomach. I had fallen off twenty-six pounds from my usual weight, and was so weak and crippled up that my son would have to help me at the car—and we lived just a block from the car line—and help me home.

"I certainly was in bad shape and when I look back and think of the awful suffering Tanlac has relieved me of, I don't see how I stood it as long as I did. But Tanlac has just about cleared me of it all. My stomach is now in fine shape and the rheumatism is so much better that I can hardly tell I ever had it. All the pain and stiffness has gone out of my joints and I'm feeling altogether like a different man. I couldn't ask for a better appetite, I'm not troubled with indigestion any more and it has been a long time since I could enjoy eating like I do now. I have already gained several pounds of my lost flesh and to say my wife and I are both delighted with what Tanlac has done for me doesn't half way express our feelings. Tanlac is by far the best of all the many medicines I have ever tried and I will gladly tell anyone trying to find relief what I have found out about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike.

In most Hindoo villages there is a sacred pipal tree, among the leaves of which the gods are said to sit. To emphasize the truth of his statement, a native will solemnly grasp one of the leaves of this tree, involving the god as he does so.

Negotiations Over The Union Are Continuing

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 9.—Pourparlers between the Western Liberals and the Prime Minister and Secretary of State with regard to union will be continued this afternoon.

This morning's impenetrable secrecy wraps the negotiations around and nobody who knows anything will talk. Those who don't are engaging in all sorts of speculation. Neither Sir Robert nor Mr. Meighen would vouchsafe any information as to the result of negotiations so far. They did not give the impression, however, that the Western men, as has been hinted, are unreasonable in their demands or are imposing impossible conditions. They state, however, that there are many details to be settled before an agreement can be reached.

Undoubtedly one of the most important of these details is the allotments of portfolios. In the Minister's office of certain departments, housecleaning is already in progress. It has been stated that the Western men want the Department of Railways, of the Interior and of Agriculture. It is not at all certain that they have made such demands.

As a matter of fact, Hon. Arthur Meighen is senior Western minister so far as service to the government and his leader is concerned, and Mr. Meighen will not remain Secretary of State. He desires the Interior. It is quite possible, however, that the Interior may be divided, and a separate Department of Immigration and Colonization created. To the position Hon. J. O. Calder, if he comes in, might go.

Again it has long been suggested that there be separate from the Department of Trade and Commerce a department to deal with Canada's grain trade. T. A. Crerar of Manitoba, might take that if he decided to come in.

The Department of Railways and Canals is by no means vacant yet. In fact there is strong doubts that it will be vacant, as Hon. Frank Cochrane shows no inclination to retire. Moreover that Department has for quite a long time been considered as an Ontario Department and the portfolio awarded an Ontario man, Hon. Dr. Reid, aspires to the position if Mr. Cochrane goes out.

Mr. N. W. Rowell, leader of the Ontario Opposition, is here again from Toronto this morning, but would say absolutely nothing as to his mission or intentions. He accompanied Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Toronto on Sunday night.

From Sir Wilfrid there emanates no news as to his mission and intentions, though efforts are being made to find out. So far as Ottawa is concerned his retirement appears to be more remote than it was a week ago. In fact nobody believes that he will abdicate the leadership. It is believed that the government has limited its negotiations to Messrs. Calder, Sifton and Crerar. There is nobody here from British Columbia yet.

Premier Martin from Saskatchewan and Hon. A. B. Hudson, from Manitoba, are interested spectators, but are not taking any direct part in negotiations, Mr. Rowell and E. M. Macdonald are also studying the situation.

One Year On Prison Farm

Buckhorn Man Convicted of Firing Haystacks

Albert Bishop, Buckhorn, was sentenced by County Police Magistrate Langley, in the County Court, last week, to one year on the prison farm, on a charge of arson.

THE EVIDENCE.

The evidence showed a bad feeling of long standing, between Bishop and Nat Pearson, to whom the five stacks of hay which Bishop burned, belonged. On the night of the fires, boot marks, undoubtedly Bishop's, were found about the stacks, which, added to the man's explanation of "They tracked us by our boot marks," proved conclusive evidence of his guilt.

Mr. J. A. O'Brien, appeared for Bishop, Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton for the Prosecution.

FELL FROM A FREIGHT TRAIN

Cornwall Man is Killed on the G. T. R.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CORNWALL, Ont., Oct. 9.—George Riley Ross, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ross, of Cornwall, was killed while riding a freight train on the Grand Trunk last night or early this morning. His dead body was found alongside the track by some section hands this morning.

"Sedentary work," said the lecturer on physical torture, according to Judge, "tends to lessen the endurance." "In other words," butted in the smart aleck, "the more one sits the less one can stand." "Exactly," retorted the lecturer, "and if one lies a great deal one's standing is lost completely."

MANY ACTIVITIES ARE PLANNED FOR Y. M. C. A. MEMBERS

Staff Has Been Re-organized So That General Secretary Will Be in Charge of All the Work Outside of the Physical Department

THE WEEK'S PROGRAMME

The monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. will be held this evening at 6.30 o'clock, when several important items of business will be considered.

Mr. Harold Copp has assumed the position of assistant, and entered upon his duties this morning. Miss Ethel M. Coons is to assist the General Secretary in connection with the office work, so that the Y.M.C.A. staff will be reorganized to permit the General Secretary to be director of activities outside the Physical Department. This arrangement is made as it has been found impossible to secure a Boys' Secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Gailey. Mr. Roser is Physical Director and his department is well organized and all classes are now meeting regularly.

The Boys' Bible class groups will be organized this week with the following young men as mentors: Minto Brownscombe, Charles Armstrong and Ralph Meserve, and James Begue as substitute. The boys will find on the bulletin board a notice of the groups and the time for the meetings.

The bowling alleys will be opened on Saturday for the first time this season. New bowling pins and other equipment will be available for the opening, so it is expected that both the bowling and billiards will prove good social past-time for our men this season.

We trust that every member whose fees are now due will make prompt payment at the office and save the Y.M.C.A. officials as much detail work as possible. There are many subscriptions also due which should be paid immediately, as the Association is endeavouring to pay a number of pressing accounts as well as reduce a note held by a local bank

Prospects for the work were never brighter, although the reorganizing of the staff has somewhat delayed the opening of some of the activities. However, the full programme of activities will be organized and under way by the 15th of the present month.

What are the passengers looking out of the windows for? asked a nervous lady as the conductor came through the train.

SIGNALLER STAN ROOTES, former member of the 93rd Battalion, who has won the Military Medal.

MILITARY NEWS

Major Sidney Burnham, of Toronto a nephew of Mrs. R. P. Boucher and J. H. Burnham, M.P., has been awarded the D.S.O. for splendid work at the front. Major Burnham went overseas as a lieutenant and has on three or four occasions been mentioned in despatches.

Has Been Promoted.

Lieut. Wilfrid Stratton, who is home on sick leave, has been offered an appointment as recruiting officer to be stationed at Keene, following the proclamation which will be issued calling the first draft to the colours. Lieut. Stratton has declined the appointment, preferring to return overseas at the expiration of his leave, and rejoin the Royal Flying Corps, where his prospects of seeing more action are infinitely greater than in Keene. Lieut. Reginald Stratton, who on September the fifteenth, returned to duty in France after being wounded, was again in action on September the twentieth and the twenty-third. Lieut. Stratton, who is with the Engineers of the Imperial Army, has been promoted from second to first lieutenant.

Sir Wilfrid Meets Some Of The Candidates

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—Federal Liberal candidates from rural constituencies in Ontario were the principal callers upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier at his quarters in King Edward hotel this morning. By noon the party leader had met a score or more with each of whom he discussed the prospects of success in their respective ridings during the coming election and whether or not in their opinion the party chances would be improved by a change in leadership. The almost unanimous expression of opinion of the candidates was that their supporters desired Sir Wilfrid to remain at the helm. As a result of assurances given it is extremely unlikely Sir Wilfrid will discontinue to lead the party. Sir Wilfrid lunched with about twenty prominent Liberals at the Ontario Club today and dines to-night with H. Beatton, K.C. He will return to Ottawa to-morrow night.

A New, Harmless Way To Banish Hairy Growths

(Beauty Topics)

By following this suggestion any woman can, in the privacy of her own home, remove every trace of hair or fuzz from her face. With powdered delatone and water mix enough paste to cover the not wanted hairs; apply and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and wash the skin. This method is unfailing, harmless and quick in results, but care should be employed to get the genuine delatone.

The Victoria Lily of Guiana has a circular leaf, from 6 ft. to 12 ft. in diameter. It is turned up at the edge like a tray, and can support, according to its size, from 100 lbs. to 300 lbs.

The Major (in Judge)—How long have you been in the regiment? Private Grogan—Wan week, sor—but I fought in the Spanish war. The Major—And did you salute with a pipe in your mouth in '98? Private Grogan—No, sor, I wasn't smokin' thin.

Visitors At Stoney Lake For Thanksgiving

Quite a Number of People Took Advantage of Trip Arranged by Stoney Lake Navigation Company

In spite of the cool weather quite a number of people took advantage of the trip run by the Stoney Lake Navigation Company to spend the Thanksgiving week-end at their summer homes. The steamer Empress left Lakefield on the arrival of the noon train on Saturday and made a trip around the lakes. Yesterday she left Lakefield in the morning and returned from the lake in time to connect with the afternoon train for Peterborough. For those who had only seen Stoney Lake in its summer garb, the scenery presented a novel appearance on this occasion with the many tinted leaves of the maples, oaks, shumachs, birches, etc., contrasting with the verdancy of the evergreens.

Among those who spent the week-end on Thanksgiving Day at the lakes were Mr. and Mrs. John Nugent, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hamilton, Mr. H. P. Lindsay, Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Mr. A. B. Mitchell, Mrs. Mitchell, Miss Norma Mitchell and Master Ross Mitchell, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Brock and Miss Pearl Brock, Mr. and Mrs. East, of Toronto; Mr. Sutherland, of Toronto; Mr. J. Yelland, Mr. Stanley Yelland, Mrs. Cookson, Miss Cookson, Mr. J. Donnell, Mrs. Foote and party from Peterborough, and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Knapman.

Dr. A. W. McPherson and Messrs. R. Neill and F. M. Dela Fosse were the guests of Mr. W. G. Morrow at "Oakdene."

Mrs. Finlay, of Toronto, who has been at her cottage since May 24th, was one of the passengers on the down trip yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Stroud, of Ottawa, who have been visiting Mrs. Stroud's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson at their cottage at Eel's Creek, also returned yesterday. Mr. Stroud's friends will be glad to know that he has made considerable progress towards recovery from the attack of neuritis which resulted in his being brought down to Nicholls Hospital some weeks ago.

Tag Day Receipts Amounted To $1,300

Substantial Sum Realized For the Children's Aid Society—List of Boxes

Tag day receipts amounted to approximately thirteen hundred dollars.

The amount may exceed this figure when all the returns are in. The receipts on Saturday were good when it is considered that the organization under which the workers operated was somewhat short of help. The entire amount collected will go towards the funds of the Children's Aid Society, and will materially assist in the maintenance and extension of the work, under the supervision of Mr. G. W. Powell, Inspector of the Society. The weather for the annual tag day collection was fair although towards evening the temperature dropped, and made it uncomfortable for some of the workers on the streets.

COUNTING THE MONEY.

Mrs. Knox, convenor of the committee, headed the organization that conducted the campaign. The money was counted at the local branch of the Union Bank, and a number of representatives from other banks assisted in the work. The thanks of the Society are due to all those who assisted in the campaign and in any way contributed to its success.

Coal Embargo To Be Modified

THE CASE FOR CONSCRIPTION IN THE STATES.

(Boston Monitor.)

In the early days of the war, for instance, the bands with the recruiting sergeants passed incessantly up and down the streets of London, and throughout those of the other towns and villages, calling for volunteers. Gradually as the immensity of the struggle began to dawn on the Government and on the people, this was given up, and so, when the war cloud came across the Atlantic, the United States started where the United Kingdom had left off, and immediately substituted the draft for voluntary enlistment. It is, after all, the only fair and the only democratic way. Those who live under the protection of the flag must be prepared to defend the flag, or there will be no protection to be had from flag. It took months to convince the United Kingdom that compulsion was a necessity. The opposition to it came, curiously enough, from the more democratic elements, yet those democratic elements should have been the first to understand that equality means equality of responsibility and equality in the hour of danger, just as much as it means equality in times of peace and of prosperity.

GRENADIERS, FUSILIERS AND DRAGOONS.

The various regiments of Fusiliers are still covering themselves with glory, although their name is a misnomer. In place of the light musket—the old "fusil" these gallant regiments carried in the old wars—they now carry rifle and bayonet, like their comrades in other regiments. The fusil is no longer made.

But the hand grenade is, by the hundred thousand. It has not only had a new lease of life, but has proved itself a much more effective weapon than when it gave its name to the British Grenadiers. Of course, the modern grenade is charged with high explosive, but its principle and use are the same as of old. It is a remarkable return to an apparently obsolete practice, persisting in this ultra-scientific day.

Dragoons used to be armed with a short musket which spouted out fire so fiercely when the trigger was pulled that it was called a "dragon," after the fabulous beast whose breath is fire. So well-established did this name become for this firearm that a dragon was engraved on the barrel, and the men who used this particular weapon were called "Dragoons."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

White Sox Won The First Two Games From The New York Giants

The Chicago White Sox have a big edge on the New York Giants in the world's series battle, with "Shine Ball" Cicotte twirling against Slim-Sallee, on Saturday, in the first game at Chicago. Comiskey's hirelings beat the New Yorkers by 2 to 1 in a snappy game, in which each team made seven hits and one error. Both Cicotte and Sallee were in grand form, and there was little to choose between them. A home-run by Harry Felsch, Chicago's outfielder, won the day for the Windy City tribe.

On Sunday the McGraw clan got a real trimming when the White Sox won handily by 7 runs to 2. Faber held the Giants in check after the initial stages of the battle, while the Sox drove Ferdy Schupp, the Giants' star left-hander, to cover, in a couple of innings, hammered Anderson out of business, took a few cuts at Perritt's offerings, and had a look at Tesreau before the game was through.

DRAFT FRAUD, ILLICIT LOVE, TOLD BY PURSE

Careless Young Matron Leaves Mute Refutation of Claim.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The young woman was careless.

Which is too bad, because if it had not been for her misplaced purse, a certain young man might have been exempted from military service and his claim of an aged, dependent mother might have gone down in the government records as sufficient reason for granting him freedom from the mess and the musket.

Had this been true, the story had been done.

But the young woman left her purse. She came demurely—a pretty young woman with down drooping eyes and a winsome smile accompanied by a stalwart youth.

"Ah," remarked Monsieur Guy Ebney, receiving clerk for the district appeal board with a near approach to romantic discernment, "two sweethearts."

His inference seemed well founded when she stood beside the youth who claimed exemption and reinforced his statement and offered to make an affidavit.

She Left Her Purse.

Her name was mentioned in the conversation. It was different from the young man's. Let Jones suffice for his. Hers did not correspond.

Touched, Mr. Ebney endeavored to assume the governmental, official, and impersonal manner necessary. It was hard. Here, he thought, is a poor sweetheart, and the war may shatter a romance.

The young man went away with the young woman and Mr. Ebney carried with him a memory of their adoring young faces.

Alas—

In the midst of a discussion of the dilemma of this young pair and the aged agony of his suffering mother, one member picked up the purse.

Within, the startled board members found ample identification of the owner.

It was so ample, it was an example.

It was Enough.

The old rose lining served as a back ground for a typewritten letter—a sort of informal contract signed by the young woman, her husband, and a third person as witness.

The contract was entered into by the husband and wife. On his part the husband agrees to separate himself from her, to supply $20 a month for thirty-six months, and to discharge said obligation faithfully.

For her part, she agreed to decline the attention of a certain young man, the young man she had just endeavoured to help get exempted.

Eyes of the draft board members met eyes in a glance of a black surmise as the glaring truth became evident.

Grimly they set their lips. Not a word was spoken. Only a frown gave a clue to their anticipation of considering the claim of the young man. It was enough.

"The King of Siam," said a diplomat, quoted by the Philadelphia Bulletin, "who is the latest power to declare war on Germany, prides himself upon his English. When the King last visited London he met the late Lord Kitchener, whose Egyptian triumphs were still fresh. Desirous of telling Lord Kitchener that he was born to command, the Siamese monarch said: 'Brave lord, you were made to order.'"

Says Russian Army Doesn't Want To Fight

Returning American Asserts Nation Is in Chaos and Cabinet Is Helpless.

STOCKHOLM.—An American who has spent ten years in European capitals and whose position compels him to take the viewpoint of an impartial observer, reached here recently after six weeks in Petrograd and gives a pessimistic report of the fighting spirit in Russia and of political and industrial conditions there. He says:

"There is no fighting spirit except among the Cossacks and Caucasians, and that seems to be waning. A Caucasian Colonel said to me: 'There are no real fighters left in Russia except us, and we are not Russians, thank God, but Caucasians and Mohammedans!'

"The interior cities and villages are filled with Russian troops who refuse to go to the front. Young Russians of the better class are hunting the streets of Petrograd for men who are willing to become officers. Since the murder of officers by men has become a daily occurrence only the most fervent paatriots will assume the risk of taking commissions.

"Newspapers in Helsingfors carry daily accounts of military deeds of violence and of the murder of officers and civilians by soldiers, often accompanied by robbery. The Government has not dared to do more than announce that these matters 'will be investigated carefully.'

"The Bolsheviks are gaining the upper hand in Petrograd and are increasing their strength in Moscow. I venture to predict their eventual supremacy. I know this means almost the elimination of Russia as a factor in the war and places new burdens on America.

"The Government's utter powerlessness was recently shown in connection with its exile of a number of 'dark forces.' The Bolsheviks took them from a train at Viborg, are now sending them back to Petrograd and the Government does not care to insist that its deportation order be carried out.

"A factory near Nizhni-Novgorod manufacturing war materials and employing 15,000 hands has just closed because it has been impossible to meet the wage demands. Armed workmen terrorize the owners of factories, workmen's committees spend their whole time drafting wage schedules, and nobody may be hired or discharged without their consent. Labourers unloading wood from barges at Petrograd won in one day a strike for an increase of from 43 to 53 rubies daily.

"Conductors and porters on Finnish railways refuse to accept Russian money at any rate of exchange. I saw four one-ruble and three three-ruble notes bearing the same respective numbers."

Mr. Arthur Lazure, Sr., Tells How He Was Robbed Of $50 In A Crowd At The Exhibition

Three of the Alleged Pickpockets Who Were Admitted to Bail Were Absent When the Case Was Resumed This Morning—Have Apparently "Jumped" Their Bail

Boston, Mass., Oct. 8.

Joseph M. Sullivan.

The suspicions of the local police that the three alleged pickpockets who were hustled out of Peterborough last week as soon as they were liberated from jail on their personal bail of $1,000 each, would not return for trial were confirmed this morning. The formal calling of Frank Davis was answered only by its triple echoes as the name resounded through the court room and halls of the police station The above telegram received by their Solicitor, Mr. G. N. Gordon, from their Boston "bail-broker," was shown to Chief Thompson, who was probably surprised at this bald excuse of their absence. No reference was made to the suggestion of another week's remand, and apparently nothing remains but the alternative of the Crown's seizure of the $3,000 in the possession of Attorney Hatton.

"Where are these men?" asked Magistrate Dumble when the charges were laid before him.

Mr. Hatton replied that they had been released on their own bail.

"I didn't allow them out on bail?" Mr. Dumble stated.

Mr. Hatton—"Where's your order?"

Magistrate Dumble—"I know nothing of an order."

Mr. Gordon—"I made an application for bail and you made an order for their release in $1,000 cash or $2,000 with sufficient sureties. I paid $1,000 bail for each man."

Magistrate Dumble—"You sent up an order approved by the Crown Attorney; what else could I do?"

His Worship stated that he had only intimated what bail might be accepted when he mentioned the terms at the former hearing.

There should be a formal recognizance to be forfeited. His Worship said he had fixed no bail and insisted that there should be a record somewhere.

Mr. Hatton — "It's all wrong, then?"

Mr. Gordon—"Bail was fixed in open court." Even with the $1,000 there should be the recognizances of each man.

Mr. Gordon contended that the recognizances were of little value.

Mr. Dumble—"But it's a process of law. Where are any records to show it? Where is the document the Crown can sue on?"

Mr. Gordon—"You don't need one. The Attorney-General, by an order-in-Council, once a year, declares that certain monies in the hands of the Crown are forfeited for the use of the Province.

The First Case.

In the meantime, Sammy Searting of Toronto, had been brought in, and at the conclusion of the argument was charged with having stolen $50 from Mr. Arthur Lazure, Sr.

Mr. Gordon declined to elect.

Searting was the fourth member of the quartette rounded up on Fair Day, Friday, Sept. 14th.

Arthur Lazure, 554 Romaine street, was first called. He said he went to the Fair on Friday, Sept. 14th, and bought his ticket at the George Street gate. There were about 20 or 30 persons crowded about the ticket seller's window.

"I had $50 in my left hand trousers pocket and $60 in my right hip pocket."

"You're the right kind of a man to go to Fairs," remarked the Magistrate.

Witness said he took out the purse containing the $50, picked out a fifty-cent piece and returned the purse to his pocket.

Then he took a few steps toward the wicket, but before he reached it he found that the purse was gone from the left-hand pocket. However, he bought two tickets, one for his wife, and leaving her outside, entered the grounds to look for a policeman.

Mr. Lazure found Detective Meagher and about ten minutes later Detective Newhall joined them.

"They asked me if I could identify any person who was in the crowd. There was a bunch of them pushing and shoving about the ticket office. They asked me if I could identify any of those who had been near me and I told them I could.

How the Game Worked.

"One fellow caught hold of my watch chain and broke it. That happened before I bought the ticket. I felt somebody pulling at my chain. I caught a man's arm. He stopped and looked at me.

"I held him a moment. I said "Hello there." He said 'Excuse me" and I let him go.

"I had had my left hand in my pocket where the money was. With the tug on my watch chain I lifted my left arm and caught the man's arm." I didn't feel any person taking my money. I can identify the man who tugged at my chain. He is not in court."

Pointing to the prisoner, Mr. Lazure said that Searting was at his left side with another man. Both of them were crowding against him.

All these men were close to him when his chain was pulled. A minute later he discovered that his money was gone, and the men who had been jostling him were gone. They had scattered in several directions.

'I had two twenty-dollar bills, a five, two twos and a one. The bank bills were on the Dominion Bank. I got the twenty-dollar bills, one from my son and the other from my daughter. I had received them in exchange for twos. The rest of the money I got as rent."

Chief Thompson produced bills similar to those described by the witness. "They are very like the ones I had," he said.

Mr. O'Brien, in cross-examination, asked Mr. Lazure where he had learned that his had been Dominion Bank bills?"

"I asked my son what bill I got from him and he said they were on the Dominion Bank. He warks at the Henry Hope, and they pay in Dominion Bank bills. I asked my son the night I lost my money."

Mr. O'Brien—"You won't swear these are your bills?"

Mr. Lazure—"No."

Magistrate Dumble—"You have sworn that you believe they are your bills, but you won't swear absolutely."

Mr. Lazure—"No, I couldn't."

Mr. O'Brien—"Who told you the five-dollar bill was on the Dominion Bank?"

Mr. Lazue—"Detective Newhall."

Witness identified a photograph of "Happy Yukovitch" as that of the man who caught his watch chain. His face was thickly and deeply pock-marked.

To Mr. Hatton, witness explained that the second twenty dollar bill which he had changed for his daughter, had also come from the Henry Hope Co. It had been earned by his son-in-law, Mr. Blodgett.

Detective Meagher.

Detective eMagher stated that the first he had seen of the accused man was shortly after one o'clock. He and Detective Newhall were standing at the corner of Charlotte and George streets when they noticed the suspected "dips." They caught a south-bound car and were shadowed by Newhall, while Meagher remained at the corner. Later the witness said he was at the Exhibition Grounds when Mr. Lazure reported his loss to him and described to him the pock-marked stranger and the little chap who was arrested, Searting. The search of the grounds proved fruitless, and the detectives returned up town. They discovered Searting at the C.P.R. station, and took him to the police station. Then they went to the G.T.R. station, where they found another of the gang. He boarded an express train but went throught to the other side and was finally arrested at the Empress Hotel.

Detective Newhall.

This afternoon Detective Newhall was called. He recounted the incidents of the early afternoon of Friday, Sept. 14th, of his spotting the prisoners and following them to the Exhibition Park. A number of complaints of stolen money sent the Detectives up town, where Searting was run to earth at the C.P.R. station.

"When I caught hold of him, without a word from me he said "You can't touch me." Later he asked me what I wanted him for. I replied: "For picking pockets at the show, you and a big fellow." Prisoner denied having been at the Fair, claiming that he came to Peterborough to get work, that he had not been in company of any other man and was just going back to Toronto."

Later, the prisoner said he had met the other "guys" on the train. He had a return ticket to Toronto. He said he had arrived on the noon train and was going back because he couldn' get work here."

"We returned to the C.P.R. station, searched the train, and then went back to the Fair Grounds. I saw the other man, Foley, from time to time. The prisoners had previously been needlessly pushing and jostling on the ends of street cars. I could see them working among crowds their hands ging under men's coats, and later heard complaints of the loss of money. There were two gangs working here, two in one, and three in the other. One of the "two" gang was a woman."

"Finally we made up our minds to try the 5.35 G.T.R. express. There is usually a crowd going out on that train. We hadn't been there three minutes when Davis appeared. He noticed me as soon as he came round the corner. He went quickly behind the station and I went around the other way. When I got around he was in consultation with the other two, Foley and Flynn. They separated and came around to the front of the station. The train was just coming in. They walked back and forth past Detective Meagher and myself, about six feet apart, as if they didn't know each other. Davis worked his way to the baggage-room corner. The moment he reached the corner he started to walk up town as fast as he could. We had two friends with us. They followed Davis with instructions to hand him over to the first constable they met.

In the meantime Foley and Flynn boarded the middle coach at either end and turned into the coach. We did the same, Detective Meagher and I. When we met in the coach they were not in that car. We lost a little time getting the brakesman to unbolt the lavatories. They were not there. I went to the front end of the car, and just in time to see the back of one of them running down King street. We jumped into an auto, but lost them. I called the police station and the Chief told me he had them there."

Sixteen Hundred Prisoners Taken By The Italians

Desperate German Infantry Counter Attacks Reported

Weakness of Enemy Artillery Fire Indicate That Germans Are Hauling Their Guns Back—British Attack Was Carried Out Exactly on the Minute Planned—Troops Slid and Wallowed Through Mud.

BATTLE IN THE AIR

(Special to The Peterborough Examiner and The Toronto Star.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, Oct. 10.—Desperate German infantry attacks were reported early to-day over the mud covered fields across which the British have registered another successful advance.

The raggedness of the German artillery fire, in support of these counter attacks, told its own story. It was obvious that the Germans were more occupied in hauling their guns back than in firing.

The German effort to regain lost ground was particularly strong astride the Ypres-Roulers railway.

The positions held by the British to-day are hardly more than vast bogs. The hurricane of wind and rain which accompanied this latest battle in Flanders began Sunday night. It continued until ten o'clock Monday night. The Flemish plains and even the low ridges were a vast succession of bogs. The British command hesitated to carry out plans and attempt an attack under such a handicap imposed by the weather. But officers and men alike were anxious to attack. They were willing to take the handicap and were absolutely confident of a victory.
